Walker Inaugurated, Promises 'People Government'

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Jaycees Announce Year's Top Young Man, Educator

The winners of the Schaumburg Jaycees' Young Man of the Year and Outstanding Young Educator awards were announced last night at the organization's wives and guests dinner meeting.

Denis Ledgerwood, 32, Schaumburg Village Trustee, was chosen for the young man award. Mrs. Nancy Harmon, fourth grade teacher at Dirksen School, received the education award.

Finalists in the young man competition included Ray Le Beau; Harvey Woods, Schaumburg police detective in the Youth Division; Bob Pratt; and Wayne Margraf.

Margerie Beck, Mrs. Joan Fleckal, Sandra Brenton, and Mrs. Janis Walter were finalists in the educator competition.

Ledgerwood is a sales manager for General Time Corp. and lives at 1321 Hampton Ln. with his wife and five children. A member of the Schaumburg United Party and its executive committee, he is also a former Jaycee president.

Ledgerwood also is chairman of the health, education and environmental committee and a former chairman of the airport committee.

MRS. HARMON, 26, has taught in Dist. 54 since 1968. She has participated in science, social studies, reading and math workshops, and attended math and reading courses.

A resident with her husband John of 1619 Syracuse Ln., Schaumburg, Mrs. Harmon has been a volunteer teacher at Children's Service Medical Center and at Jamieson Center.

According to Mike Kott, chairman of the committee selecting the education award winner, teachers nominated were asked to submit a resume. On the basis of several questions asked regarding education, general qualifications and community involvement, the winner was selected, he said.

The Young Man of the Year award was selected in a similar fashion.

Three men were also named Jaycee of the Month at Monday's meeting.

Ed Bachara, 230 Desmond Dr., Larry Bialas, 410 Andrew Ln., and Carl Niemann, 234 Desmond Dr., were recognized for their work in the Jaycees annual Christmas tree sale.

Girl, 3, Falls Through Ice; Saved By Dad

An afternoon skating lesson nearly ended in tragedy for a 3-year-old Hoffman Estates girl yesterday when she fell through thin ice.

Kelly Mallon was retrieved by her father, John Mallon of 183 Hassell Rd., when she fell through the ice at the North Twin Lake on Hassell Road in Hoffman Estates. Police credit Mrs. Susan Clancy, 182 Rosedale Ln., for contributing the life saving effort by administering mouth to mouth resuscitation to the young girl.

Police said Kelley and her father were skating on the lake at about 3 p.m. when she fell through.

She was rushed unconscious to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

A hospital spokesman said the child would be admitted for treatment, adding, she was apparently in shock. He described her condition as being "not serious."

Although the lake had been posted with a green flag, indicating it was safe to skate, several areas of the lake had thin ice, said Al Binder, director of parks.

The area where the girl was skating had been barricaded earlier in the day because that portion had been considered unsafe. Apparently the barricades had been removed, he added.

"The park district has lost about 20 barricades in past months through theft or vandalism," he added.

FISH–Help's Just A Phone Call Away...

by STEVE BROWN

A problem arises within the family and someone is needed to look after younger children, or provide transportation to the hospital, or cook a quick meal. To whom do you turn?

If relatives or neighbors are not available, the quickest solution to the dilemma might be to contact a FISH.

A FISH, not the kind with gills, is a member of one of the newest community service organizations in the Hoffman Estates-Schaumburg area. The group's service is as near as the phone, according to Karen Murphy, one of the group's organizers.

"Just call 894-0044, and we will try to be of service," Mrs. Murphy said.

FISH is an organization of neighbors helping neighbors, Mrs. Murphy said. The group's name is derived from the Greek word "Ichthus" which was a symbol and password of the early Christian Church.

THE ORGANIZATION, which was a year in planning, has been operating since early December. Mrs. Murphy said there have been between 30 and 40 calls for assistance in that time.

"Most of the requests have been for babysitting or transportation," she added. The group offers to provide transportation, babysitting, house cleaning, or meal preparation for persons who find themselves in emergency situations and cannot obtain help from relatives or friends. Organizers stress that the service is not meant for persons who simply want to avoid a cab fare or paying a babysitter.

Mrs. Murphy said the group has about 125 volunteers who offer their services. The phone line used by the group is manned 24 hours a day.

"If we find ourselves involved in something, like counseling that requires a professional we will always refer the caller to the best agency," she added.

Volunteers like Mrs. Josie Smith of Hoffman Estates and Mrs. Barbara Saathoff of Schaumburg both said their initial encounters with persons needing helping have been rewarding.

"YOU REALLY get a feeling of satisfaction when you know that you are helping someone who needs the assistance," Mrs. Smith added.

FISH relies on donations from church groups and businesses to meet its expenses, Mrs. Murphy explained. Many groups have been generous, but FISH

Murderer Caught In Des Plaines After Fleeing Prison

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Walter McCalvin

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

DESPITE BUDDING suburban efforts to eliminate the obscure post of township school trustee, the Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township (ROOST) may show increased interest in that elected office this spring.

While the office has been phased out in all areas of the state except Cook County, GOP capture of two vacancies on the three-member board this April would further broaden a growing power base.

In view of the fact that few township residents are even aware of this limited governmental group, almost no effort is needed to elect a candidate . . . any candidate. In the past most candidates have run virtually unopposed.

Now, admittedly, GOP powers are not overly interested in one of the principal functions of the board . . . that of holding title to all public elementary and secondary school land in the township.

ON THE OTHER HAND, several notable ROOSTers have expressed interest in the other duty of school trustees . . . hiring a township school treasurer. It should be pointed out that the three elected trustees serve without pay while the treasurer (Jim Bowen, of Hoffman Estates) receives $4,000 annually plus expenses for his services. The cost is shared between school districts 54 and 211.

Republican control of the board would insure majority vote and could result in hiring a new paid treasurer . . . perhaps from the GOP organization which could also be considered a method of handing out an acceptable stipend to a hard working party faithful.

Thus far neither Art Wagner nor Dick Ritchie, both of Schaumburg, have indicated whether they plan to seek reelection to the six year term. George Bond, of Hoffman Estates, is not up for reelection this year.

Thus far, in Schaumburg Township, the little-known office of township school trustee has not been a political plum. Hopefully that situation will continue.

VILLAGE ELECTION campaigns in Hoffman Estates promise a lot of action while in Schaumburg things are definitely ho-hum. While the Schaumburg United Party (SUP) ticket may not run completely unopposed, little more than a limited challenge is foreseen at present. Interpret that as either apathy or satisfaction.

EVERYBODY'S FAVORITE village engineer, Joe Zgonina, was out personally altering population signs in Schaumburg last week. It was a novel way of announcing that he and his Sandy became parents Jan. 3. Blood Reserve Reported Dwindling

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usual ly considered a blood supply area .He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking donors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

Oil Shortage, 1973 'Gas Eaters' Blamed

Gasoline Price Predicted To Reach 50 Cents Per Gallon

Gasoline retailers in the Chicago metropolitan area have woeful news for motorists, especially those driving late-model gas eaters. They predict prices for regular gasoline will climb to 50 cents a gallon, if not within the next few months then at least by year-end.

Although these dealer representatives agree with oil industry experts that the shortage of all petroleum products is becoming more severe, in the Midwest, the prediction of higher pump prices is not universal. Expecting 50 cents for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney," the oil industry people contend. They add that Phase II regulations will keep the lid on prices.

"I believe Chicago area motorists will be paying 50 cents a gallon for (regular) gasoline in the next 30 to 90 days," said Robert Jacobs, executive director of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association. "But the retailer has never had anything to say about the price of his gasoline."

A SHORTAGE of supply is causing the pressure for higher pump prices, according to Jacobs. "We've had some dealers run out of supplies," he said. The association asks its dealers to call in for help if they are cut off by their jobber (supplier).

As of this week the dealer group is able to gain partial supplies for dealers cut off by their suppliers. Jacobs believes the critical period within the Chicago metropolitan area will occur within four to six weeks, however, as the shortage in gas becomes more widespread.

"It's the same crisis as in the heating oil business" he continued. "Since fuel oil is in critically short supply, the refineries are turning out added supplies of heating oil and in turn producing less gasoline.

"We have no control over our destiny when it comes to prices. No matter what price they pay, motorists should be grateful for the supply," he added.

JACOBS SAID new autos generally get less mileage per gallon as a result of pollution control systems added on late models. This is increasing gasoline consumption at a period when the supply is short.

E. G. Albano, executive officer of the Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago, seconds the prediction that prices will rise significantly as a result of tight supply. Pump prices finally made it up to "normal" levels, he said, at 40.9 cents a gallon for regular gasoline in many areas.

This follows a continuing series of price wars in which pump prices were slashed below this level. "But by the end of the year we could see a price of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline," Albano said.

Major oil companies supply their own dealers first, leaving independent gasoline dealers out in the cold during a supply shortage, according to Albano. He said there are many area independents who have been cut off by their regular suppliers. Some independents shut down on weekends because of the pinch. Albano sees the supply shortage as a move by major oil companies to squeeze out independent dealers.

Most oil industry experts are waiting to solve the heating (number two) oil problem before they consider a way out of the less serious gasoline shortage, counters Herbert Hugo. He is Midwest bureau chief for Platt's Oilgram, a daily petroleum industry publication. And the prediction of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney" he added, as Phase II controls would not allow for this increase.

TURNING TO THE fuel oil problem, he said, "Every 24-hour period the fuel oil picture gets worse. It has reached a serious crisis stage. It was only a minor crisis a month ago. As of this morning, for example," Hugo said Monday, "some area major oil company distributors are notifying their customers that they are being put on allocation basis.

"This is when it begins hitting John Q. Public," Hugo continued. "When he starts getting more concerned is when he calls up and asks for 400 gallons of oil and only gets 200 gallons."

The heating oil shortage is moving closer to home, he said. About 25 schools in Rockford, and two hospitals are among those affected by a Kelley-Williamson Oil Co. announcement last Thursday that it has exhausted its supply of heating oil for many Rockford area customers.

Fuel oil price relief is needed to assist in gaining added supplies said Hugo. Previous attempts to raise fuel oil prices have been denied by the Price Commission. This could in turn take the pressure off gasoline supplies, he said. If the petroleum industry is not able to increase the output of gasoline supplies, Hugo predicts a severe crisis could develop within two to three months.

WAYNE PARTHUN, managing director of the Oil Heat Marketers Association in Chicago, also noted the heating oil shortage and gasoline shortage, but said there is no definite indication that prices in either market will rise significantly in the near future.

"We don't talk of a shortage. We talk of a tight situation," said Parthun. "From a canvass of our own members we find there is an adequate supply. We don't foresee any shortage in the near future."

Fuel oil supplies at the beginning of the current heating season were at least as good as the previous year, he said. But a combination of cold weather and increased demand has created a shortage. Since the heating season began last September, the Chicago area has experienced 48 per cent colder weather than the previous season, in terms of degree days. Degree days are a measure of the difference between the actual recorded temperature and an average temperature.

Heavier demand for fuel oil results from the large numbers of industrial and other large users being cut off by the natural gas companies, Parthun continued, in addition to users making the transition from coal to oil as an energy supply for environmental reasons. No major allocations of heating oil are being cut off in the Chicago metropolitan area yet, he said.

Area Residents Buy Flood Policies

by NANCY COWGER

Residents of the Northwest suburbs are beginning to take advantage of federally subsidized flood insurance, although sales still are low.

James Reichardt, of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs, directing the program, said "there has been root growth" in the program's use. Purchases of the policy are "really beginning to pick up," he added.

Under the federal subsidy, a homeowner can purchase up to $17,500 of home coverage for between $60 and $70, said Charles Brazelton, an agent for State Farm Fire and Casualty Co., service representative for this area. Without federal subsidies, said Reichardt, the insurance would cost 10 times that much, since the subsidy is 90 per cent of the premium cost.

More important, said Reichardt, is the fact flood insurance cannot be legally refused in an area approved for the federal program. Homeowners with an experience of flooding three or four times a year likely could not find a company willing to sell them flood insurance, without the federal subsidies, said Reichardt. With them, the homeowner can purchase the insurance and collect on claims every time he is flooded.

The program also provides for up to $5,000 insurance on the contents of a home, and this provision is available to home or apartment renters, as well as to homeowners, said Brazelton.

ALTHOUGH THE insurance is available in most Northwest suburban communities, a few still have not applied. Rolling Meadows, Inverness, the Barrington communities, Streamwood and Bartlett do not yet participate. Also, while Cook County has applied for acceptance in the program, it has not yet been approved, said Reichardt. The county application was incomplete, and county officials still must complete "a couple of the necessary steps," he said. Until the county is approved, residents of unincorporated areas cannot purchase the insurance at subsidized rates.

Noting "it takes a while for something like this to get off the ground," Reichardt said he was "not discouraged" by the number of policies which have been purchased. "The most important thing at this point in an eligible community is it's just a matter of the individual homeowner deciding whether to buy it. It's an individual people decision — the local governments have taken the necessary steps. They've taken the action necessary to make it available to the people," Reichardt said.

A homeowner may purchase the insurance anytime after the community has been approved for the subsidy, as long as the community renews its eligibility each year, Reichardt said. Brazelton pointed out persons buying within the first 30 days after a community is approved can receive immediate coverage. After the 30 days, there is a 15-day waiting period between receipt of the policy and the time coverage starts, he said. The only community in the area approved less than 30 days ago is Wheeling, which officially qualified as of Dec. 15.

IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, the first community in the area to qualify, 107 policies had been sold as of Dec. 1, 1972, Brazelton said. Arlington Heights homeowners became eligible to purchase the policies in January, 1972.

Also as of last Dec. 1, Palatine residents had purchased 34 policies, Mount Prospect residents had purchased seven, Des Plaines homeowners had bought four, Schaumburg residents had purchased three and Elk Grove Village residents had bought two policies.

In Hoffman Estates and Buffalo Grove, no policies had been purchased, although residents were eligible to buy them.

Brazelton said sales the month previously had been considerably lower, and estimated totals might be twice as high as of today. He also pointed out Wheeling residents were listed as not having purchased any policies, although they were not eligible until two weeks after his latest statistical breakdown.

Beer Can Shatters Window; Child Injured

A 1-year-old child narrowly escaped serious injury over the weekend after a can of beer was thrown through her bedroom window, police said.

The child, Shawna Gambrol, of 186 Evanston, Hoffman Estates, was covered with fragments from the broken window when her parents entered the room at about 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

Another daughter, Carol, 8, who was sleeping in the same room, was not injured in the incident.

Police said the infant appeared to have glass fragments on her eyelids when they arrived.

The girl was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village by the Hoffman Estates Fire Department. After doctors examined her, it was determined that she did not have any glass in her eyes.

The infant was treated and released from the hospital. She suffered minor cuts, police said.

Police said they have been unable to discover if there was any motivation, besides vandalism, for the incident.

Newcomers Plan Many Activities

A variety of activities for the coming months have been announced by the Hoffman Estates-Schaumburg Newcomers Club.

The group's regular monthly meeting will be at 7 p.m. Jan. 18 at Villa Olivia Country Club on Lake Street in Bartlett. The event will be a special "guest night" with husbands of members invited to attend. Reservations can be made by calling 529-6509.

A social hour will begin at 7 p.m. The business meeting will begin at 8 p.m. with Mrs. Jean Drew, an industrial graphologist, as speaker. Mrs. Drew is a former resident of Streamwood, and currently has a local radio program.

"Couples Night Out" for January will feature a wine-tasting party at the Holiday Inn in Itasca at 8:30 p.m. on Jan. 27. Tickets for this event are $4 per couple.

Reservations for this event may be made by calling Mrs. Steve Rasnick at 894-8417 or Mrs. Jan Griffin at 529-5768.

A special tea for new members of the Newcomers Club will be held at 8 p.m. on Jan. 31. All new members are asked to make reservations for this event by calling 529-8436 or 894-6793 before Jan. 12.

The group's annual dinner dance will be held Feb. 24 at the Elmhurst Country Club. Tickets are $16 per couple. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. James Bryant at 837-5921. An $8 deposit will be requested at the Jan. 18 meeting. The evening will include a prime rib dinner and dancing to the music of the Dimensions.

During December, the group raised more than $53 for the Neediest Children's Christmas Fund.

'Learn To Ski' Opens Next Week

A five-week "Learn to Ski" program will begin next week at the Villa Olivia Country Club under the sponsorship of the Hoffman Estates Park District.

Park director Al Binder said the program is open to all park district residents from seventh grade through adult.

The lessons will begin from 5 p.m. until 10 p.m. on Jan. 14.

A variable fee schedule ranging from $42.50 for lessons, equipment rental and transportation, to $10 for transportation only has been established by the park district.

Registration for the program is open on a first-come, first-served basis. More information on the program can be obtained from the park district at 529-8600.

'This Is Hawaii' Film Coming To Center

Movies will be shown Thursday at the Park District Community Center, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, for the S and H Golden Group.

Bud McGraw will show "This Is Hawaii" and a Harold Lloyd movie from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. There is no charge for the films.

Refreshment chairmen are Ruth Anderson, Wendy LaBuda, Agnes Stratman, and Sophie Fehr. For bus pick up call Myrtle Anderson, 529-3330, or Clarice Simmons, 529-5287.

The S and H Golden Group is a social club for people over age 55, sponsored by the Schaumburg Park District. Members are from Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, and Hanover Park. There are no dues, and all are welcome to participate.

Village To Weigh Cut In Meetings

The Schaumburg Village Board may meet less frequently, but for lengthier sessions, as a result of discussion slated for tonight.

The board now meets the second, third and fourth Tuesdays of each month. Until May 1971, it met only the second and fourth Tuesdays. The schedule was expanded then to cut down the length of each meeting, which generally lasted from 8 p.m. until after 1 a.m.

Now, board meetings rarely adjourn after midnight and generally end between 10:30 and 11:30 p.m.

According to Sylvia Parsons, secretary to Mayor Robert O. Atcher, it has been suggested two monthly meetings are sufficient.

Woman Charged In Fray With Husband, Friend

Ruby Lee Svendsen, 43, Northfield, was charged with aggravated battery Sunday after she allegedly fired two shots at her husband, Robert, missing both times, then struck her husband and a woman, with the gun handle.

The incident occurred early Sunday morning at a quadroplex unit in the 800 block of Wellington Avenue, Elk Grove Village.

Police said Mrs. Svendsen reportedly followed her husband to the injured woman's Elk Grove Village residence. According to authorities, an argument ensued between Mrs. Svendsen and her husband.

Mrs. Svendsen allegedly drew an automatic pistol and fired two shots at her husband, missing both times. Reportedly, she then struck her husband and the woman with the handle of the pistol.

The woman occupant of the residence was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in the village where she was treated for cuts of the head and abrasions of the finger and released. Svendsen was not treated.

Mrs. Svendsen was released on $5,000 bond and was scheduled to appear Jan. 31 in the Elk Grove Village branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Many Gather Early Around Capitol

Enthusiastic Crowd Hails Walker

by TONI GINNETTI
Herald Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — Even in the quiet hours before the ceremony inaugurating Daniel Walker as Illinois' 36th governor, there was in Springfield an atmosphere of restrained but genuine anticipation.

Motels had been reserved for this day months in advance and a motorist could memorize the city after numerous times driving around trying to find a place to park.

The noon event was to take place outdoors for the first time at Walker's request and except for a 20-degree chill, the weather cooperated with the new governor by providing an almost cloudless sky.

Near the Capitol, the crowds began assembling for the ceremony early. Seats had been provided on either side of the podium for several hundred persons but were used only sparingly as the several thousand observers chose instead to stand on the Capitol lawns and the higher grounds of the Supreme Court building across Capitol Avenue.

SOME SPECTATORS lined the Supreme Court Building in an effort to shield themselves from the biting winds. But as always there were those youthful enterprising few who climbed trees and utility poles for a better view.

From 10:30 a.m. the crowd had begun to wait. Some of the wealthier set dressed in furs, others clad themselves simply in wool coats and caps.

Among those on the lawn of the building was a farmer from Nashville, Ill. with his light brown donkey named Mabellina. The two-year-old donkey was a symbolic gift to the maverick Democratic governor. Flung across the animal's back was a burlap sign with a simple message: "Best Wishes Governor Walker."

For a time Mabellina was the center of attention, and television cameras and interviewers focused on her even before the interviews moments later with newly sworn in Attorney General William Scott and Comptroller George Lindberg.

THE CROWD continued to grow as noon approached and the band from Deerfield High School began a medley for their favorite son. Then at precisely noon, a procession emerged from the Capitol. They walked past the honor guard corridor and were met along the steps of the capitol by a troop of state policemen.

Behind his family and other officials whose elections would be certified, walked side by side the new governor and the old.

Walker, wearing a tie as strikingly blue as the winter sky, marched confidently in stride to his Navy tune, "Anchors Away." Richard Ogilvie matched his step but not his smiling mood.

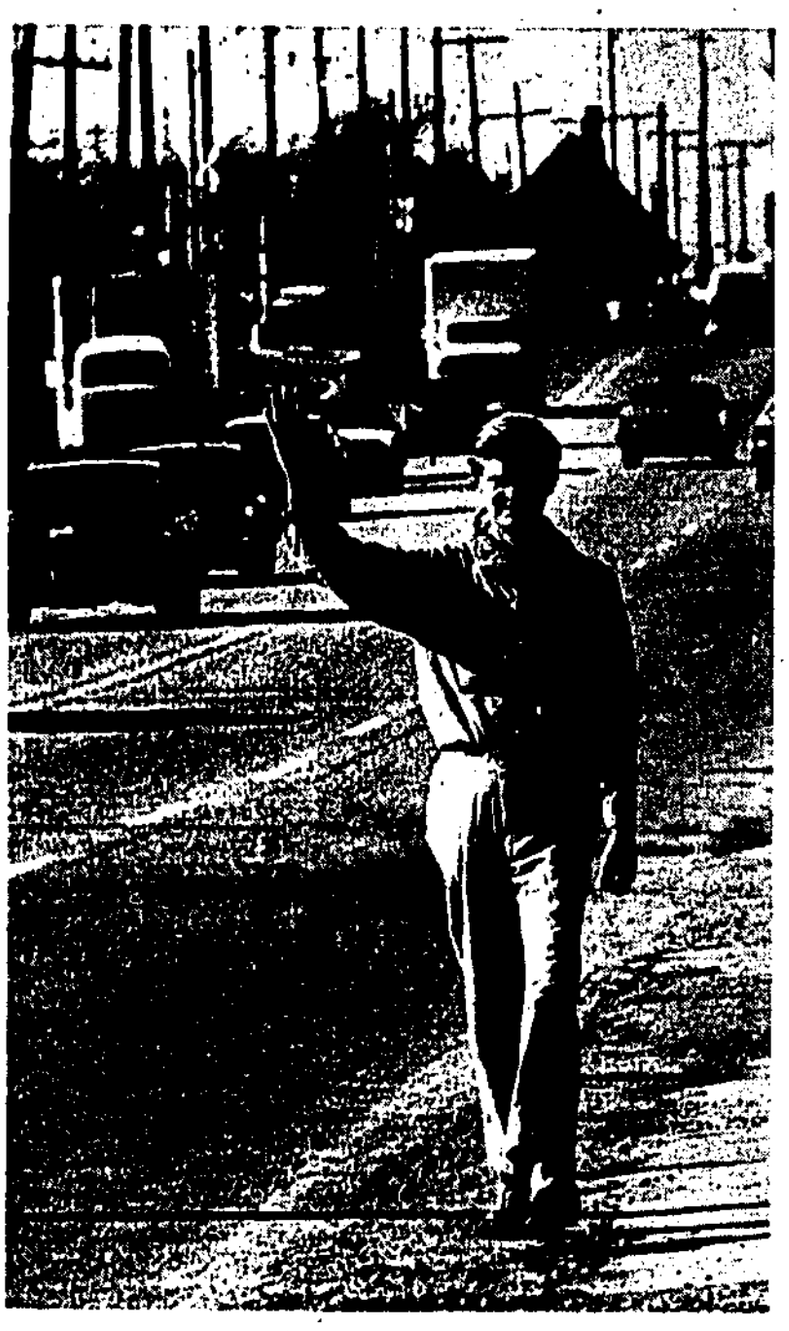

The air resounded with Walker's firm voice as he repeated the words of the oath of office administered by Illinois Supreme Court Justice Walter V. Schaefer.

AND WITH a statute of Abraham Lincoln symbolically looking down at him, Walker told the crowd he would try to return the reins of government to the people.

He told them about a present "crisis of lost faith in government." But he assured them that crisis, like those of the past, could be overcome because, "the people of Illinois have always chosen the difficult but more rewarding path."

"People are the best judge of what they want," he said. "Let the voice of people be heard. This government is yours. You created it. You paid for it and it's time you start getting your money's worth."

And the muffled, but enthusiastic sound of applause through gloved hands, cheered Walker when he declared, "Let government step back. Let people step forward."

IN OCTOBER, 1971 Daniel Walker strode along Northwest Highway to reach Arlington Heights Mount Prospect and Des Plaines. The governor credits his 1,197-mile hike with giving him the boost he needed to win the election.

Governor Returns To Scene Of Now-Famed Walker Walk

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (UPI) — Daniel Walker, in his last official act before becoming governor, played host for those who hosted him during his 1,197-mile walk around the state.

Walker, his wife Roberta and several of their children mingled freely as their guests progressed through filet mignon, Waldorf salad "prepared with spinach leaves, not lettuce," flaming baked Alaska and champagne.

Guests were those who provided the governor-elect with food, shelter and hospitality during the walk which first brought him to gubernatorial attention during the summer of 1971. It was that hike, from Brookport on the Ohio River to the Wisconsin border and back to Chicago which Walker credits with giving him the boost he needed to win the governor's mansion.

WALKER 'S STAFF kept a list of those who gave the candidate a bed for the night, offered him lemonade or a meal or otherwise provided "hospitality."

"Dan was dead set for this dinner for the people who helped him during the walk," a Walker aide said as the dinner progressed.

The dinner ended only a scant 12 hours before noon yesterday the hour Walker was sworn in as governor.

EARLIER, WALKER visited Brookport, where, in 90-degree heat in July of 1971, he began a 1,197-mile walk the length of Illinois.

That walk, all political observers agree, was the key element which boosted Walker, in the space of a year and a half, from a political unknown to the status of governor-elect. Although it was not an original notion, it was cited as a perfect application of the oft-mentioned populism.

But Walker, the winner, was not thinking in campaign terms as he returned to the spot where his formal campaign began. He was thinking in loftier terms.

He spoke to the crowd of 500 in a high school gymnasium. He recalled the man who, on the first day of the walk, had heard of the stunt on his radio and "drove out in his air condtioned car, found me and offered me a cool place to sit for a few moments," Walker said.

"I believe it was that gentleman's hospitality that enabled me to get through that day," he added.

New Era Ahead, Walker Vows

governor. Crowds spilled over the lawn of the state capitol and joined enthusiastically in clapping and singing with music presented by the University of Illinois Marching Band.

Following the inaugural ceremonies the crowd surged over the capitol lawn in an effort to meet their new governor face to face.

Walker, though trying to adhere to a tight schedule, did his best to accommodate the crowd and to shake hands and sign autographs for as many as possible. Escorted by state police and Illinois National Guard officers, he made his way slowly back into the Capitol building, through its halls and out another entrance.

Then the man who started more than two years ago in his quest for the governorship and walked the length of this state in hobnailed boots entered the luxury of a custom-made Cadillac. The license number was "1".

Walker Will Have Tough Conduct Rule, Aide Says

by BOB LAHEY
HERALD POLITICAL EDITOR

Springfield Ill. — Newly inaugurated Gov. Daniel Walker in the first weeks of his administration will take steps to end patronage, require income disclosure by members of the state executive, and demand revelation of political involvement of special interest businesses.

That was the assessment given yesterday by Norton Kay, press secretary to Walker and one of his closest advisors.

Kay indicated that executive orders would be forthcoming from the governor within a week or two that would require conduct by government officials not yet instituted under state law.

It has been a major point in Walker's long campaign for the governorship that the chief executive of the state could bring about reforms which have not been achieved under the legislative process.

KAY PREDICTED that Walker would issue orders that would:

—Require department heads in the executive department to end all practices of hiring for political reward.

—Require complete income disclosure from all executives under the governor's jurisdiction.

—Require all businesses under contract to the state to reveal their financial transactions with any political candidate.

At the same time, Kay defended the selection of Anthony G. Angelos as Walker's director of insurance for the state and contended that Angelos' performance in that job will prove the wisdom of the new governor's choice.

KAY DISMISSED charges that Angelos has been involved in shady dealings in the past as "simply allegations."

He defended the Chicago millionaire's choice as a wise one in view of the fact that most state insurance directors have been men with special interests in insurance.

"The fact that he has nothing to do with the insurance business is a plus," said Kay. He indicated that Angelos' record as a successful businessman and a philanthropist would prove to be an asset to the Walker administration.

Concerning the problem of confirmation by a Republican-controlled Senate, Kay shrugged and said simply, "There may be some things that develop in the next few weeks."

5,000 Chilled Spectators Hear Walker Oath

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (UPI) —Daniel Walker became governor of Illinois at 12:13 p.m. yesterday, repeating the oath of office before 5,000 chilled spectators in an unprecedented outdoor ceremony.

Walker, the 36th man to hold the state's highest office, intoned his oath in a loud, firm voice. Applause was muffled because most of the spectators wore gloves to ward off a 20-degree chill.

He then brought his wife and all seven of their children to the podium, at least two of his four daughters fighting back tears of joy.

Virtually every state official, many legislators and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley listened under blue, sunny skies as Walker outlined what he hopes to do with his four years.

THE NEW governor referred to his 1,197-mile campaign walk around the state, comparing it with the voyages of early Illinois explorers.

"I LISTENED and spoke to thousands of you throughout this state. I spoke to those of you in small communities, on farms and in great cities. I spoke to those of you who work — with your hands and with your minds — in overalls, blue collars, hard hats, coats and ties . . . and to some of you who did not work at all because there was no work.

"For all of your differences, what you had to say about government was disturbingly similar. You simply did not believe government was worth your trust," Walker said.

Republicans taking their oath for statewide office also attended the outdoor ceremony. They, however, staged their own inauguration indoors and an hour earlier. But both of them, Atty. Gen. William Scott and comptroller George Lindberg, pledged to work with Walker for the good of the state.

THE OUTDOOR ceremony was planned by Walker forces to symbolize the new governor's commitment to the people. Were the inauguration held in the traditional spot — the state armory or the house chambers — guest lists would have been limited. By staging the event on the capitol steps, virtually in the shadow of Abraham Lincoln's statue, they were able to invite anyone who dared brave Springfield's January weather.

And the weather, despite predictions of snow, cooperated beautifully. It was cold and teeth were chattering by the time the ceremonies ended. But the sky remained blue and virtually cloudless.

Before the oath was given, the University of Illinois marching band played the National Anthem and state song, Illinois poet laureate Gwendolyn Brooks read an original poem, "Aurora," and a priest, rabbi and minister offered prayers.

Herald Extends Center Fund Deadline; $5,000 Goal Set

The Herald this week extended its deadline for donations to the special emergency fund appeal for The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center and set a goal of $5,000 for the campaign.

The newspaper has asked its readers to help the family service agency maintain its local services to Northwest suburbs by contributing $1 or more to the fund.

Since the campaign began Dec. 11, more than 600 readers have contributed a total $3,874.

Although the bulk of donations have been one, two or three dollars, many readers have contributed $5, $10 and more. Several gifts of $25, $50 and $100 have been received as well as an anonymous donation of $500.

"We are gratified by this response," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor and publisher, "but it is not enough. More help is needed, and the center must depend on the suburbs it serves for its ability to continue serving us."

FUNDING FOR the local agency is offered through The Salvation Army and collections of the United Fund campaign.

As with most voluntary social agencies, however, the center traditionally operates at a deficit and must depend upon the communities it serves to ensure its continued success.

If the $5,000 campaign goal is met, Hayes said it would be used to help defray an estimated deficit of $15,000 for 1972.

"The need and demand for family counseling services exceed the center's limited resources," added Hayes, "and it desperately needs our support if it is to continue helping troubled families in our suburbs."

THE CENTER is an agency of The Salvation Army Family Service Division with headquarters in Des Plaines and branch offices in Palatine and Schaumburg. A third office is scheduled to be opened soon in Arlington Heights.

It offers help to individuals and families who face serious problems and need the assistance of professional counselors. Last year alone, the center helped more than 1,000 suburbanites to cope with drug abuse, alcoholism, crushed marriages, teenage delinquency, unwed parenthood, crises of old age and other personal or family problems.

Service is provided to residents of Des Plaines and the townships of Wheeling, Elk Grove, Schaumburg and Palatine.

Contributions may be sent to the Herald Center Fund, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Checks may be made payable to the Salvation Army Community Counseling Center.

Persons who donate $1 or more will be included in the list of names being published by the Herald during the fund campaign.

Tulsa Choir Performance To Aid Local Agencies

The widely acclaimed University of Tulsa Modern Choir will be the featured performers Jan. 28 at the First United Church of Arlington Heights.

The nationally recognized choir will give a benefit performance with proceeds donated to the Salvation Army Counseling Center and the Northwest Opportunity Center. The counseling center provides psychiatric and marital counseling for disadvantaged families in the Northwest suburbs while the opportunity center provides job and housing assistance.

Admission to the 8 p.m. show is $2.50.

An afternoon performance for youngsters will be presented free of charge at Maryville Academy in Des Plaines. Also, on Jan. 28 at 2:30 p.m. children from the academy and from Elementary School Dist. 26 will be special guests.

Versatility is the key to the group's success: With equal dexterity, members perform classical numbers, Broadway show tunes, religious numbers of several faiths and selections from such popular recording artists as Three Dog Night, the Carpenters and Elton John.

CHOREOGRAPHY, backup musicians, lighting and sound — and a few jokes — enhance the total program. Long robes — characteristic of many choir groups — are missing. For the more formal part of the program, members of the group wear long formals or tuxedoes; but informal skirts and slacks provide a more relaxed atmosphere for the up-tempo numbers.

State Pay Hikes 5.5% Higher Than U.S. Pay Board Limit

by TOM LAUE

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Hefty pay hikes for seven state elected officials and some 400 Illinois judges may not survive the Federal Pay Board.

The board in 1971 set down a 5.5 per cent limit on the amount wages can be increased each year, but none of the salary boosts approved Saturday by the Illinois Legislature and enacted by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is at or below the 5.5 per cent level.

The 6.2 per cent increase for Illinois' seven state Supreme Court justices comes closest. The percentages range all the way up to 50 for the lieutenant governor.

Pay board and Internal Revenue Service spokesmen said last week Illinois must advise the board it has approved wage increases for state officials that exceed the 5.5 per cent figure.

IF THE PAY board finds the wage increases violate its rules — which happened recently in Missouri — it can order the state to cut the increases back to 5.5 per cent.

Illinois legislative leaders have been assuming only Atty. Gen. William J. Scott among the state officers might be subject to the 5.5 per cent regulation since he is the only statewide officer who ran for reelection to the office he held.

The governor, lieutenant governor and secretary of state are fresh faces. The office of comptroller is new — it supplants the old state auditor — and the treasurer and superintendent of public instruction weren't up for reelection in November.

BUT THE PAY board says the position — not the man — determines if an exception to the 5.5 per cent rule may be made. If, for example, the spokesmen said, a worker takes on added duties in his job the board will allow him a wage hike higher than 5.5 per cent.

But a new man taking on an old job which has no new wrinkles isn't entitled to this privilege, the spokesmen said.

Under the law, the governor's salary will jump from $45,000 to $50,000. The lieutenant governor will go from $25,000 to $37,500, the attorney general, secretary of state and superintendent of public instruction will all increase from $30,000 to $42,500 and the state treasurer will go from $30,000 to $40,000.

The comptroller will get $40,000 compared to the $30,000 his predecessor made.

STATE JUDGES — except associate circuit court judges — will all get a uniform hike of $2,500. The associate judges now earn $23,500 if they're lawyers and $20,000 a year if not. Those in Cook and Dupage counties get an extra $4,500.

The state high court members now make $40,000, the 30 appellate court judges $37,500 and the 346 circuit court judges draw $27,500 except for those sitting in Cook or Du Page counties where the pay is $35,000 a year.

The law also gives Illinois' 236 legislators a $32 per day expense allowance for time they spend in Springfield. They also got an increase from $6,000 to $10,000 in their allowable office costs each year.

The law also gives the clerk of the Illinois Supreme Court a wage hike from $20,000 to $25,000. The appellate court clerk for the First District Cook County got a hike from $20,000 to $23,000 and the four downstate appellate court clerks went from $18,000 to $21,000.

'Survival Is THE Word'

by TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK — Junior High 35 in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn is not the little red schoolhouse. It is a combustion chamber of double-locked doors, caged windows, policemen on duty, students who conceal straight razors in their pencil pockets — and teachers who are employed in fear.

So it is that Jeffrey Zahler, a 25-year-old mathematics instructor, walks into a hallway argument here and finds himself very much a part of the quarrel. Two 14-year-old girls are brawling. A crowd gathers for the spectacle. When teacher Zahler moves to break it up, somebody yells "Let 'em fight," somebody else starts to push and shove, and Zahler winds up with a 2½-inch stab wound in the leg.

The incident elsewhere—in places where schools are named after presidents and students use knives only in biology dissections — would be cause for outrage and investigation. But here in the urban center, the ghetto varsity, violence has become so routine that another stabbing, or rape, or whatever, passes without a note.

Says Jeff Zahler, bitterly: "It's all part of the, uh, job."

Uh, INDEED it is. In New York City schools during one year, 1971, there were nearly 600 reported cases of criminal violence, 197 arrests. Zahler says there are "two or three" incidents every day at Junior High 35 alone. Citywide, women teachers are molested, classrooms robbed at gunpoint and both teachers and students wind up bleeding in hospital wards.

New York schools, moreover, are not unique in this respect. The growth of student gangs in Los Angeles has caused some teachers to carry (illegally) self-protection" pistols. Teachers in some sections of Chicago report that they have formed car pools because "we're afraid to come and go alone." In Newark, N.J., a first-year administrator says: "I used to have all the idealism in the world. But three months in this job and I'm an animal like everybody else. I don't mind saying that I try to stay away from students as much as possible. Survival is the word."

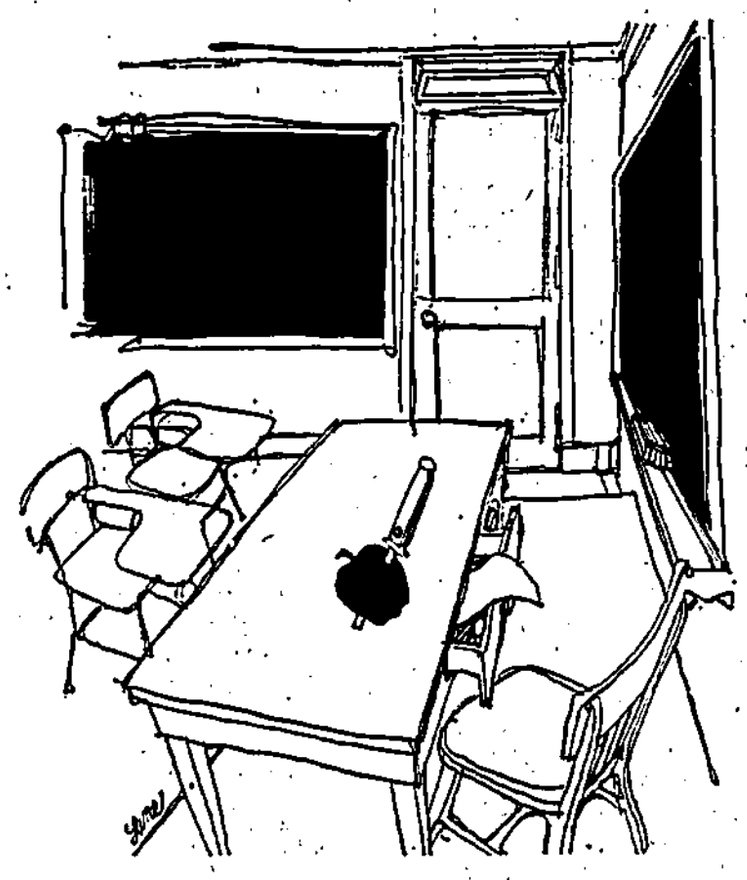

Survival? Among teenage kids? The word may be an exaggeration, but the nervousness behind it is not. "Many coro-city teachers today are afraid to go to work," says a spokesman for New York's United Federation of Teachers. "Now maybe they don't get murdered — but they get beat up, they get robbed, they are threatened. These are educators, not cops, not soldiers. I tell you it's hell in schools today."

JUNIOR HIGH 35, for example. Located square in the slum, it has been described as a "functioning disaster area." Actually, it's not all that bad. In fact it's one of the better, even safer, and, well, smarter schools in the Bedford-Stuyvesant district.

"Kids here aren't so much on dope yet," says teacher Zahler. Also, they don't carry around firearms to the extent students do in other schools. Finally, says Zahler: "About 24 per cent of our 1,800 students are on or above the normal reading level for their grade. That's pretty good in this area. We may have a dozen kids functionally illiterate — but again, that's not bad for the neighborhood."

Yet being the best of a low lot is no cause for lightheartedness at Junior High 35. The difference in the degree of criminal potential is slight. Guards at the school entrance sign everybody in and out, a huge city policeman patrols the halls, teachers often lock their doors during class — still there is danger: The track coach, as illustration, has asked permission to run his boys in the third floor hallways because it's not safe to let them condition themselves outdoors.

A teacher is thrown down a flight of stairs. A woman in a rabbit coat is approached by kids wanting to "feel your fur, baby." Shakedowns. Extortions.

Kids threaten to "light" (hit) their instructors at 3:15. Says Zahler: "Recently a tape recorder was stolen from a woman teacher. She was told by students she could have it back for $25 or a 'little sugar' (sex). She notified the principal and everybody talked the matter over. Finally, she got the tape recorder back — for $15 instead of $25."

THE SITUATION has resulted in breakdown for all sides. The students (who are the chief victims of school violence) fail to learn; teacher Zahler says only 35-50 per cent of his homework assignments are completed. And the teachers fail to teach; the annual turnover rate at Junior High 35 is as high as 30 per cent, absenteeism runs 12 to 20 a day. ("Everybody, but everybody, takes their allotted 10-day sick leave"), and even when the classes are in progress the curriculum is altered for expedience sake.

What can be done? The suggestion box is open. Police guards don't work (the teacher lounge, where the cops rest, is vandalized regularly). Normal authority is ineffective ("If you tell them to sit down, they stand up, if you say stand up they sit down"). Seeking parental help is too often a joke: "I brought in one father," says Jeff Zahler, "and he sat there telling me how hard he tried, but whatever could he do? It was pathetic. The man was so drunk he could hardly talk."

Occasionally, teachers here and elsewhere take the solution into their own hands. The other day a Junior High 35 instructor became so frustrated with one girl interrupting his class, he slapped her on the arm. But that doesn't work either. The girl's mother complained, and the instructor now faces the loss of his job. Violence in this respect, teacher to pupil, is still cause for outrage in city schools.

Completes Training

Army Second Lt. Robert A. Duringer, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Duringer, 1315 S. Chesterfield Dr., Arlington Heights, recently completed a seven-week Chaparral/Vulcan Officer Qualification Course at Ft. Bliss, Texas.

Duringer was trained in gunnery techniques, maintenance, tactics and operations of the Chapparal/Vulcan weapons systems, which are designed for anti-aircraft defense.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Would it be possible for you to tell me the effect water pills will have on one's general health. I retain water. My left leg and both ankles swell badly. I have lost 23 pounds, and my body also is retaining water. I take water pills and alternate them with a supplement of potassium.

My family says it will make a mental case out of me and kill me. They think the doctor should know or find out why I retain water. My kidneys and heart are fine. Is there any other test I should have?

I am 47 years old and going through the change. I also take medication for this. Perhaps I should not expect you to comment or help, but I hate the idea of changing doctors, and they are really putting pressure on me to do so.

Dear Reader—I suspect your doctor already knows why you retain fluid. It's fairly common during the change to have this problem, and the horniones sometimes given to help women through this period of life cause the body to retain salt (sodium) which in turn causes the body to retain water.

Your doctor also knows, apparently from your statement, that your kidneys and heart are fine, which would be two of the serious problems that might cause fluid retention. He undoubtedly also knows from his examinations of you that your liver is functioning normally which might also be a consideration.

It sounds to me like your doctor knows what he is doing and merely changing doctors wouldn't really help. Ask your doctor why you retain fluid and see if he tells you it is because of the change of life and the treatment. If you are worried about the rest of your health, you should ask him. He may well think that you already know this is a common problem with the change of life.

HERE IS AN item that ought to be of interest to all of you people who have arthritis involving the hands. A specialist in arthritis, Dr. George E. Ehrlich of Philadelphia, and a collaborator, Dr. Alfred M. DiPiero, were intrigued by a patient's report that if she wore stretch gloves to bed at night it prevented the morning stiffness that she had experienced.

They devised a test using two types of gloves nylon knit gloves or Spandex and nylon gloves. Almost all of the patients using these had a significant decrease in morning stiffness. The doctors say they don't know why it works. It's apparently more than just a question of heat since wearing cotton gloves didn't do the same thing.

This last item interested me because many of the readers who have had leg cramps reported to me a year ago that they received a lot of benefit by wearing warm stockings to bed or using heat with a warm blanket or other devices that depended on keeping their feet warm during the night. In any case, this is good news and it's such a simple thing that it's worth trying.

I'd be interested in knowing how many readers with morning stiffness of the hands from arthritis get relief from wearing stretch gloves to bed at night, so I would like to hear from all of you who try this procedure. If you write about it, let me know whether you used the nylon knit gloves or the Spandex and nylon gloves. If some of you try cotton gloves to see if just keeping the hands warm helps, I'd like to hear about that too.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

The opening no-trump is "re" bid. It pictures your distrib igh card strength so closely tha ost occasions partner knows if the combined hands are in the part score, game or slam range and can control the bidding accordingly.

The picture conveyed by the Jacoby no-trump is almost exactly the same picture Oswald Jacoby decided to show some 40 years ago. It is 16-18 high card points, 4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2, or 5-3-3-2 distribution and the doubleton if there is one must include one of the four top honors.

Forty years ago we were more conservative. The doubleton had to include either the ace, king or queen.

With any other distribution the hand may still wind up in no-trump but the winning player will start with a suit bid because such hands show too much promise in the right suit.

When we watched this hand played, South took about seven seconds to make four no-trump after opening with one no-trump.

No one noticed that six diamonds could have been made just as easily. We don't say that a diamond opener would have led to that contract. All we know is that if South had opened a diamond there would have been a chance of reaching the slam.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Marie Caylor

She Doesn't Want To Retire

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Mrs. Marie Caylor has a job that keeps her busy from 8 in the morning until 9 at night — and she hopes never to retire.

She is a public relations and publicity counselor operating the Harry E. Caylor Organization which was founded by her late husband in 1923, and she conducts the business in her Prospect Heights home.

While working at home has its disadvantages, Marie says there are also many advantages, like being able to see your grandchildren more often, visiting with friends and entertaining.

But Marie hasn't always worked from the comfort of her home. Her first job after graduating from St. Teresa College in Kansas City and after completing further studies at the University of Illinois and also the University of Berlin in Germany, was as a reporter for the Kansas City Star. She next worked for a telephone service that provided 24 hour news and weather reports combined with shopping and delivery service.

When she met her husband he talked her into a magazine job she didn't want, she remembers with a laugh. Harry, a former newspaperman, went on to pioneer the public relations business. Marie first began working with her husband when their daughters Mary and Sarah Ann were growing up. Mrs. Mary Altmayer is a Mount Prospect homemaker and mother of five boys. Mrs. Sarah Ann Jestadt operates a Chicago jewelry business and her daughter Christina lives with Marie.

COMMENTING ON their long, successful partnership Marie said she and her husband agreed that her feminine viewpoint complemented his male outlook and philosophy.

When she assisted her husband Marie worked as account executive and co-public relations and publicity counselor for the American Osteopathic Association and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. She also provided PR services (and still does) for an international probate genealogist company.

However, Marie's major work has been in the field of education. Among clients she lists the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the American Federation of Teachers. She founded and served as first president of the Union Teacher Press Association, and also founded and first presided over the Chicago Labor Editors Round Table. She has also chaired and served in offices for the Chicago Newspaper Guild AFL-CIO, the Industrial Research Association, Chicago Newspaper Guild, Federal Credit Union and the International Labor Press.

Her interest in education has sent her as a delegate to the National Conference on Federal Aid to Education, the White House Conference on Education and the White House Conference on Children and Youth.

HER POLITICAL activities include sparking legislative action to open Chicago schools as recreation centers. She is proud of heading up a recent local and subsequent successful attempt to defeat a bill in the legislature that would have permitted any unincorporated area contiguous to a municipality to be annexed without residents' approval.

Listed in the 1969 International Society of Who's Who of Foremost Women in Communications and in Two Thousand Women of Achievement in 1972, Mrs. Caylor strongly advocates women of any age getting into local affairs and politics. Because she believes women approach matters more realistically and sympathetically than men, she thinks women have a great contribution to make both at home and away from the hearth. "I look forward to the day we have a woman president," she smiled.

TO BECOME involved in community affairs Marie suggests that young women start working for the March of Dimes, the Crusade of Mercy, in services for the retarded and others. For a start she advises homemakers to get interested in PTA, and Scouts and similar organizations.

Mrs. Caylor, who has long volunteered her time and expertise to community and civic efforts, promises to continue working for the community even if she does retire professionally.

At present she chairs the Northwest Council of Associations and is vice president of the Euclid Lake Homeowners Association. She can boast the distinction of serving as the first woman on the Mount Prospect Plan Commission. She also serves on the Citizens Advisory Panel of the Wheeling Township Republican Organization and the Wheeling Township Program Committee.

BEING SURROUNDED with treasures is one of the advantages of working at home for Marie Caylor, public relations and publicity counselor. Besides Dresden china and ivory she has purchased during travels all over the world, Marie's work surroundings include many luxurious house plants.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I cringe every time I see my daughter put everything she has used in the kitchen in the dishwasher. Some of her things look terrible and she hasn't been married long enough for them to be looking that way. She reads your columns regularly. Maybe she'll pay attention if you say what shouldn't go into a dishwasher. — Concerned Mama

If she reads my columns regularly, she sure doesn't pay much attention. But my own daughter does the same thing as yours. She asks scornfully, "What's a dishwasher for?"

Actually, some of the rules change with each new model that comes out so what was absolute is not necessarily so today. Nevertheless, as a general rule, hand-painted china should be washed by hand. So should iron and Teflon-coated pans, as well as wooden and rubber articles. Plastics should go in only when they are marked dishwasher-safe. Aluminum ware is turned dark by dishwasher detergents.

If every dishwasher owner read the instruction sheet carefully and followed it, the right habits would follow. But I suspect many of them glance and shrug. I guess that's all we can do, too, if they're that willing to keep buying replacements.

Dear Dorothy: I usually water my house plants with ice cubes. I find it so much less mess. But a friend says this will hurt the plants. That the water should be tepid. Is she right? — Ginny Davis.

Go right ahad. By the time the ice cube melts, the water on top of the plant will be tepid.

Dear Dorothy: Every cook has an individual way of fixing chicken livers, but thought you might be interested in the way my family likes them best. I soak them overnight in soy sauce, then drain them before gently sauteeing them in butter.—Mrs. Tom M.

Hubbies Invited To Hear Speakers

Once every year husbands of the Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club are given the opportunity to join their wives at a general meeting of the organization. This opportunity arises once again tonight at 8 at Pioneer Park with a program of interest to husbands.

First guest speaker will be Joseph Anderson, assistant chief, Consumer Fraud Division, of the States Attorney General's office. He will be speaking on consumer fraud, how to recognize it, and what is being done about it.

Second guest speaker will be Jack Ryon, public relations director of Northwest Community Hospital, who will be showing for the first time a film on the Paramedic program that was inaugurated this past fall in Arlington Heights. Accompanying Mr. Ryon will be a praramedic from the program and two nurses from the hospital. This film, relating a man having a heart attack, was made with the hope to educate the community to the Paramedic program.

Next On The Agenda

PALATINE HOMEMAKERS

A Scandinavian luncheon prepared by Mrs. G. Even, special activities chairman, and her committee will be the highlight of the monthly meeting of the Palatine Unit-Cook County Homemakers Extension Association at Christ Lutheran Church, 41 S. Rohlwing Road, Palatine, at noon today.

Mrs. Even will be assisted by Mrs. P. C. Olson, Mrs. E. Wente, Mrs. L. Cardot and Mrs. H. Breit.

The luncheon and afternoon activities will be a farewell party for Mrs. Charles H. Standfield, past president, who is moving to Florida.

WELCOME WAGON

Welcome Wagon of Palatine will hold its first luncheon of the new year this noon beginning with cocktails at 11:30.

On the program is Ronald Sterrett, principal of the Samuel A. Kirk Developmental Training Center, Palatine. The Center was established in 1962 to educate both the mentally and physically handicapped.

All newcomers to the area are welcome.

DOUBLE DYDEE CLUB

Joe Anderson, assistant to the chief of Cook County Bureau of Consumer Fraud will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday to Double Dydee Mothers of Twins Club.

The meeting will be held in Lauterburg and Oehler's meeting room, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

Membership in the club is open to all mothers of multiple births. Mrs. Lawrence Casey, 885-8714, may be contacted for details.

DISTRICT NURSES

"The Doctor Nurse Game" is the title of Dr. Raymond Lehman's talk for Thursday's dinner meeting of the Illinois Nurses Association, 18th District. It will be held at Hackney's Restaurant, Glenview.

Members planning to attend either the dinner, at 6 p.m., or just the meeting, at 7:30, should contact Wendy Burgess, 5960 N. Odell, Chicago, 60631.

PALATINE NEWCOMERS

An informal class on home decorating is next for Palatine Newcomers Club. The women are invited to bring their decorating problems to Thursday evening's meeting where Michael Sainsbury of Homemakers Furniture Company will help solve them.

The meeting begins at 8 at Howard Johnson's. Cost is $1.50 per person. Reservations should be made today with Mrs E. L. Mathisen, 358-3506.

Mrs. Gwen Carlile, 402 N. Winston, is hosting a coffee Jan. 16 at 9:30 a.m. Children are welcome but guests should let their hostess know how many to expect. Mrs. Al Muto, 1442 Joan Drive, will host another coffee, the evening of Jan. 17, at 8.

Mrs. Adrian Mohr, 359-0129, is in charge of reservations for both coffees.

WAYSIDE WOMEN

A representative from the States Attorney's office will speak on "Consumer Fraud" at Thursday's evening meeting of Our Lady of the Wayside Woman's Club. Tea hostesses will be the school health and spiritual development committees.

LA LECHE

At Thursday's meeting of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Area La Leche League Mrs. David Cornwall will be hostess for the first in a series of four programs. Topic will be "Advantages of Breastfeeding to Mother and Baby" with Mrs. John Trapp as discussion leader.

Babies are welcome at the 8 p.m. meeting as are all women interested in breast feeding. Those wishing further information may call 358-3628.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

Mrs. Robert Wolf will speak at the Thursday meeting of Northwest Suburban Unit of National Council of Jewish Women. The group will be meeting at 7:45 p.m. in the Arlington Heights home of Mrs. Frank Gold, 21 E. Burr Oak.

Mrs. Wolf, who is the Council's Illinois State Legislative Chairman and a member of the National Board, will speak on "Council's Role in the Community."

Anyone requesting information may call Mrs. Rich Heinrich, 541-2085.

Scatter Sparkles

Add some sparkle to a simple wool dress by scattering a few rhinestone pins all over it.

Nurses Club Offers Annual Scholarship

Applications for the Hoffman-Schaumburg Registered Nurse's Club Jane Manock Memorial Scholarship are now available through Jan. 31.

The scholarship, first offered in 1964, was named in honor of a past president of the club and is awarded to a Schaumburg Township resident who plans to enter a school of nursing or to continue education in nursing.

Mrs. William Westlake, 894-3016, may be contacted by those wishing further information.

Phoenix Rises!

There May Be No Real Gold In The Valley Of The Sun, But There's A Mineful Of Fun

by CLARE WRIGHT

PHOENIX, Ariz. — It all started as a gag — the night a bunch of us were sitting around the Clown's Den at the Arizona Manor Hotel.

"Hey — why don't we go searching for lost gold tomorrow?" suggested Joe, from Ohio, who had been spending the afternoon by the pool reading about Jacob Walz and his "Lost Dutchman" mine.

"Did you know this state has more hidden treasure than Florida has coconuts?" persisted our friend.

It's true — ghost gold bonanzas — once found but lost again — are all over Arizona. There's the Lost Pegleg, Lost Sixshooter, Lost Virgin, Lost Stagecoach ... and, of course, the famous, fabled Lost Dutchman mine in the Superstition Mountains.

The rugged mountains were named by ancient Pima Indians. They jut sharply from the desert some 35 miles east of Phoenix. Near the mightiest of them — 5,053-foot Superstition Mountain — is the start of the dramatic Apache Trail (State Rte. 88) that follows an old Apache-pioneer trail through and around the range.

ARIZONA natives — who ought to know — will look you straight in the eye and insist: "There's a lot of bandit loot hidden in these hills."

Well, we were game. We had wanted to see the famous Apache Trail anyway.

Early the next morning — after a hearty ranch-style breakfast — seven of us plied into a car for a pleasant hour's drive to Superstition Inn, at Apache Junction.

Here we stopped at Superstition Mountain Trail Rides stables where we saddled up to ride into the mysterious Superstition Mountains — undoubtedly one of the most starkly beautiful areas in Arizona.

Histories, fiction, movies and television have all recounted tales of the "Lost Dutchman Gold Mine," said to have been one of the most fabulous lodes ever found and still very rich — if it can be rediscovered!

IT WAS more than 100 years ago that Don Miguel Peralta came from Sonora, Mexico, and found a tremendously rich gold mine in Superstition Mountain. Before he and his men could take the ore out, Apache Indians massacred the lot of them.

For 30 years the mine lay unknown. Then by sheer chance one day Jacob Walz, the "Dutchman," came upon it. He brought out a sack of the golden ore and waved it around the streets of Phoenix.

The hapless Walz, who murdered eight men who tried to follow him, died without revealing the exact location of his mine.

All kinds of stories have popped up since then — and you can't spend time in the Phoenix area without hearing them.

You're apt to run into characters — as we did — who swear they have a map showing the mine's location, and to others who say they've found it.

Hundreds have searched for the fabulous lode — and many of these have met with mysterious death.

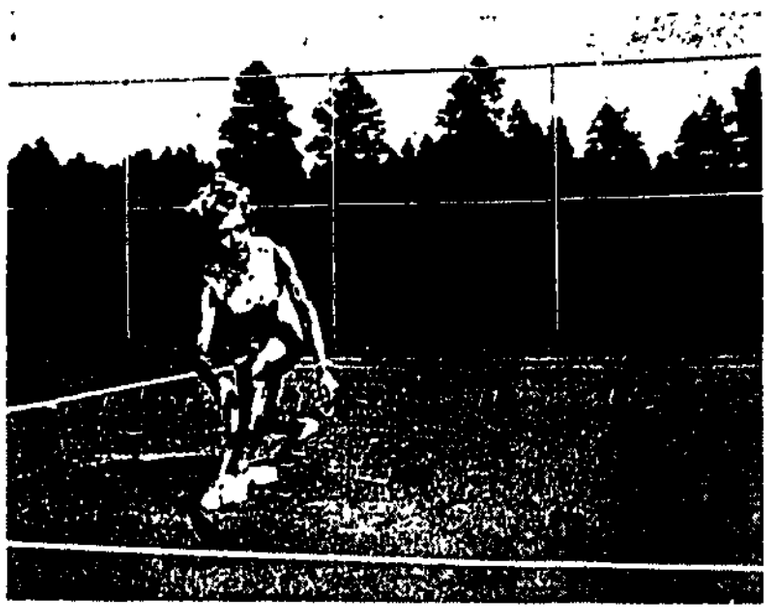

WE DIDN'T find gold the day we rode into the Superstition Mountains — but the rugged, beautiful scenery along the trail ride couldn't be bought with all the gold in Arizona.

Our guide led us to some of the most spectacular views of giant rock formations in varying colors rising thousands of feet like mighty fortress walls against the cloudless blue sky. It takes your breath away!

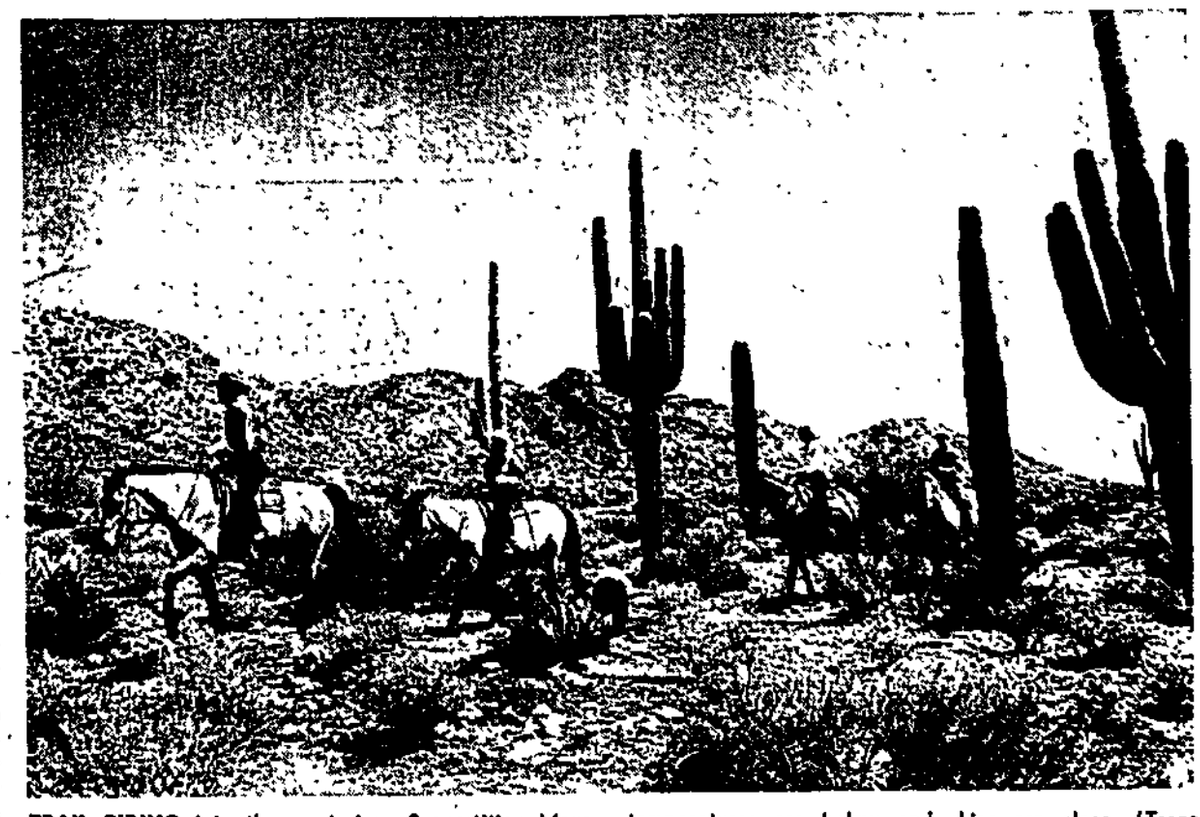

Superstition Mountain Trail Rides offer day and night rides as well as pack-trips into the "Lost Dutchman Gold Mine" area.

If you prefer motors to horses, you can take a pleasant one-day 200-mile outing from Phoenix to visit the Superstition Mountain-Apache Trail region. It offers some of the West's most outstanding off-the-beaten-path diversions.

We think it should be part of any vacation in the Valley of the Sun.

ARIZONA TENNIS knows no seasons. At the Pinewood Country Club, near Flagstaff, there are four brand new professional courts. The resort has 24 rental cabins, each with a big stone fireplace, right on the edge of a championship 18 hole golf course. There's also fishing, swimming, shuffleboard, basketball, horseback riding, dancing and live entertainment. The country club is part of the Pinewood Development Co., which is surrounded by the Coconino National Forest.

TRAIL RIDING into the mysterious Superstition Mountains — and along the Apache Trail near Phoenix — is a great winter pastime in the Valley of the Sun, when temperatures are balmy and skies are clear. (Trans World Airlines Photo).

Sunrise Park On Rise, Too

Flagstaff's Snow Bowl: Swim, Ski The Same Day

PHOENIX, Ariz. — That unusual Valley of the Sun winter treat — swimming under palms and skiing under pines on the same day — is in full swing again.

The Arizona Snow Bowl in Flagstaff, about a 2½-hour drive north of Phoenix, is featuring excellent skiing with all trails open, six miles of ski runs on the 12,000-foot-high San Francisco Peaks, a 6,620-foot-long double chair lift and about a half dozen other lifts and tows plus lodge and other facilities.

Since all Phoenix area resorts, hotels and motels have heated swimming pools for water fun, it's a simple, and popular, pastime to take a morning dip, head north for some skiing and have another swim before dinner.

ONE OF Arizona's newer ski areas near winter-mild Phoenix is attracting more attention and has plans to add a batch of additional facilities in the months ahead. It's Sunrise Park, on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation, northeast of the Valley of the Sun.

Current attraction in this White Mountain setting is skiing, complete with hotel, ski lodge and a wide variety of slopes for all types of skiers.

In the months ahead, an 18-hole golf course, tennis courts, marina, improved roads and other facilities will be added to bring more holiday pleasure for vacationists making the relatively short drive from Phoenix.

QUES. — How much does it cost to rent a car in Bermuda?

Mrs. L. R., Des Plaines

ANS. — Sorry. There are no car-rental facilities in Bermuda. Taxi, bus, sea cruise or motor-bike are the ways you can see the sights on this string of islands.

QUES. — I have heard about a Paris hotel that is said to be "in a class by itself." It is where Oscar Wilde died — and many famous people now stay there. Could you tell me the name of this hotel?

Mrs. R. P., Palatine

ANS. — You must be referring to l'Hotel, on the Left Bank. The clientele includes persons like Jack Lemmon, Ava Gardner and Natalie Wood. It's reported the Burtons would like to stay at this charming place but find it too small for all the luggage and entourage they travel with. The cheapest and smallest rooms are $27 for two. The best suite overlooking the garden is $72.

TWA Offers L-1011 Flights To Phoenix

Northwest suburbanites fleeing to Phoenix for a welcome holiday in the Arizona sunshine now can jet there in the L-1011, cleanest, quietest jetliner in the skies.

Trans World Airlines as two L-1011 flights departing every day for the Valley of the Sun. The flight that leaves O'Hare Airport every morning at 9:30 a.m. arrives in Phoenix at 11:30 a.m. — in time for a full round of golf. A 3:25 p.m. flight from O'Hare arrives in Phoenix at 5:50 p.m.

Passengers enjoy a feeling of spaciousness even during mealtime on the TWA L-1011, where no serving carts clutter the aisles and each passenger is served individually, thanks to a below-deck galley and four "satellite" dining centers spaced strategically in the four cabins.

Though capable of holding many more, the L-1011 accommodates 206 passengers in leg-stretching comfort — 30 in first class and 176 in three coach cabins.

Other highlights are swivel, rocker seats in first class, and a first class lounge; coach lounge with a stand-up bar; smoking and no-smoking areas; fingertip stowage of blankets and pillows; disappearing closets for coats, and stereo entertainment.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright,
TRAVEL EDITOR

One of my travel agent friends here in the suburbs (he prefers to remain nameless in this particular case) called me yesterday to tell me about a wedding invitation he'd just received from a happy client.

"I guess you could call me a real matchmaker," he chuckled.

It was exactly a year ago that an attractive middle-aged widow walked shyly into his office to outline her vacation plans . . . and hopes.

"I want to get married again and I'd like to choose a vacation spot where I can meet some eligible men. Should I go to Florida — on a cruise — or take a tour to Europe?"

WELL, OFFERING personalized service is the name of the game in the travel agent business. So our friend made some thorough studies of the situation — trying to find the areas of the world that seems to attract the highest ratio of eligible males.

He finally concluded his survey and gave her two choices — a 15-day Mediterranean cruise or an Arizona dude ranch. She chose the cruise and came home with her head in the clouds. She'd met not one — but THREE — eligible gentlemen. Next mont she'll be married — and the travel agent's already booking the honeymoon trip!

Here's some advice for picking the right travel agent and using his specialized service:

- The simplest and best way to find a good travel agent is to ask relatives and friends to recommend one they have used with satisfaction. Those listed on the pages of our travel section are reliable, and we endorse them.
- Be as specific as possible in telling the travel agent what your requirements and budget are.
- Make sure you understand the terms and conditions of your agreement, especially cancellation provisions.
- Sightseeing tours differ in extent and detail. Establish if it is a half-day or full-day tour or just a "drive-by." Also, if admission charges are included.
- Obtain information from your travel agent regarding clothing needs, foreign currency exchange, passports and similar details.
- Get a full description of facilities you will be using, such as hotels, and whether meals are included.
- See what voucher and tickets match the itinerary you purchased.
- Check with particular care any travel agent who offers you cut-priced tickets or lower-than-normally priced travel arrangements. Be especially leary of airline tickets offered in places other than a reliable travel agency or an airline office. You may be getting involved in a risky or illegal deal.
- Ask the travel agent to justify such terms as "luxury" or "deluxe" for the accommodations you will be using.
- Ask for the identity of the airline participating in any tour. Make sure that its schedules regularly serve the areas in which you are interested. Be on your guard if you are asked to join a "club" or the like and to sign a predated membership form. Some shady charter flights may never materialize.

"I use a travel agent when I'm going on a long vacation, but I never call him for a short trip," a woman said to us recently.

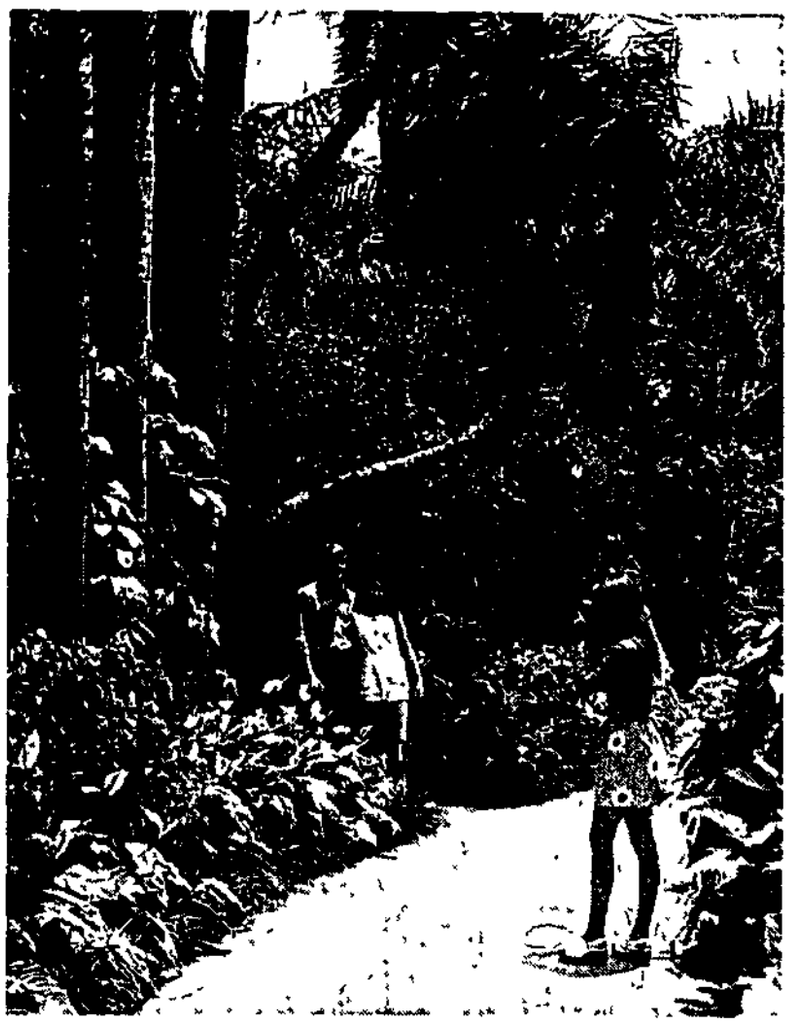

Why not? Your travel agent is there to serve you on the short trips too — and save you a lot of time and bother.

IF THE AGENT is a good one, he or she will pay as much attention to you if you're spending only $50 as to the man who books a trip around the world.

"After all," says Robin Jending, at The Bank & Trust Travel Service in Arlington Heights: "You never know when the person who buys an air ticket to Peoria may want to vacation in Australia!"

There is approximately one travel agent for every 30,000 people in the country and the competent ones are much more than mere ticket sellers. They're specialists in all kinds of vacations and travel — and you and I need them!

Sunken Gardens Colorful In Winter

SUNKEN GARDENS' scenic pathways abound with colorful picture-taking opportunities. The St. Petersburg, Fla., attraction is open to the public every day of the year.

A visit to Florida's Sunken Gardens is an experience any time, but the contrast between the snowbound North and the attraction's subtropical plants and flowers is especially exciting in the winter time.

Just as people marvel at the persistence of a flower that has grown up through the crack in a city sidewalk, visitors to Florida are also surprised to discover Sunken Gardens located near the heart of downtown St. Petersburg.

When the Gardens were founded in 1903, they were situated on the fringe of suburban development. Now this resort community's population has mushroomed to nearly a quarter of a million residents, and the tropical attraction has been engulfed in this growth.

When George Turner Sr., a semi-retired plumbing contractor from Jacksonville, Fla., purchased the land for his new home in "St. Pete," the property included a huge sink hole with a shallow lake bottom. Using his expertise and plumbing knowledge, Turner proceeded to drain the lake and reclaim the land for vegetable and flower gardening.

TURNER'S innovative idea soon became the talk of the community, and a traditional walk through his garden on Sundays developed into a local pastime.

Shortly thereafter, more exotic plants were added, the gardens were fenced, and a 15-cent admission charge was initiated.

The winter season is the most colorful time of the year in the garden complex, and a visit at this time is regarded as an experience to long be remembered.

Sunken Gardens well deserves its reputation as the nation's foremost botanical attraction, and even though it is located in the heart of the city, it maintains a tropical setting of unparalleled beauty.

The attraction is open every day of the year from 8 a.m. until sunset and provides ample parking.

Travel — Talk

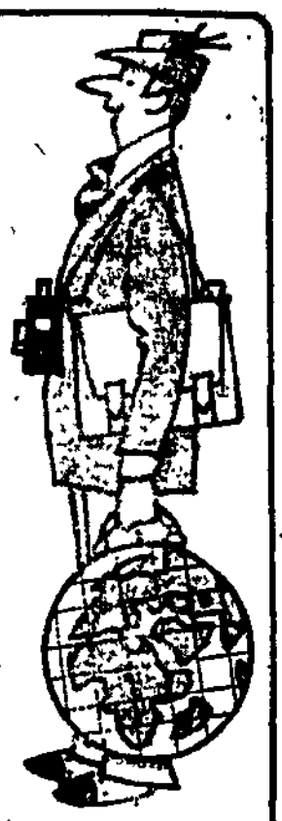

by Roberta Fisher

Why not try a guided tour to Europe? This is an especially good idea if you have never traveled before. It will give you a good idea of what Europe is like without wasting a minute of your valuable, limited time. Breakfast, say, at a Parisian hotel. Then let your guide take you to the sights of the city. Transportation, directions, times, schedules: you can leave all of this in the hands of someone who is both sensitive and competent. Your vacation will be most satisfying.

My recommendation for Hawaii — "American Way to Hawaii" for 2 weeks, featuring the world-famous Coco Palms Hotel and Royal Lahaina. You can rely on us at ROBERTA FISHER TRAVEL AGENCY, 14 E. Referenda: Use With Care

Every time we turn around these days, there's a referendum staring us in the face.

If it isn't a park district seeking to build a multi-million dollar facility, it's a school district trying to raise its tax rate or wanting to build another school.

Eventually, the distinctions between taxing bodies tend to dissolve into grayness in our minds. The recreation building we voted on last week begins to sound like the junior high school we're voting on next week. Faced by mounting tax bills, we often tend to vote down everything in sight that smells of more taxes.

Public officials are just as aware as you are about the threat of a referendum "overload," and that's one reason the distant possibility of a new taxing body — the Arlington Heights village administration — seeking passage of another referendum disturbs us.

Arlington Heights officials are concerned about installing flood control projects along McDonald Creek in northern and eastern Arlington Heights. A private engineering firm, R. J. Peterson and Associates, has proposed the projects to reduce the village's seemingly endless flooding problems.

The village government could sell general obligation or revenue bonds to pay for the improvements. However, the village expects the projects to cost more than the $3 million or $1 million, top limits on the village's ability to sell either type of bond.

So, it appears that Arlington Heights would have to seek — guess what — a referendum to permit the sale of general obligation bonds if the projects are to cost more than $3 million.

We believe the voters should not be asked to support or reject sale of bonds for this project. It's the village's responsibility to budget funds in such a way that revenue will take care of such threats to life and property.

It could be argued that the size and urgency of the McDonald Creek project demand the quick sale of bonds. However, village government has a greater responsibility to budget, year after year, just so it can afford such projects.

If an annual flooding threat has existed from McDonald Creek, then plans and financing should have proceeded for such a project.

The alternative to planning ahead is to face one referendum after another in support of this or that village project; the taxpayers, rather than village government, will be making the decisions, and it seems the buck would be passed away from our duly appointed public officials in this matter.

We realize that a referendum is only one of many possible ways to raise money to battle flooding in Arlington Heights. We encourage the Arlington Heights administration to seek other approaches.

Freeing Stewardesses

Airline stewardesses oppressed? How can it be?

Airline stewardesses, as we all know, smile unceasingly as they prance about scattering good deeds hither and yon. No matter what terrible things you say to them — even "I think I'm going to be sick" — they are cordial and sympathetic.

But discontent is often lurking on the other side of those smiles these days. Stewardesses are tired of being pinched by passengers, insulted by authors and treated like show dogs by the airlines, who employ supervisors to make sure stewardesses wear enough eye make-up.

This has, inevitably, led to the formation of a stewardess rights movement. The movement has not, up until now, done much good. This is evident from National Airlines' crude and imbecilic "Fly Me" advertising campaign and the continuing flow of books about the man-in-every-port sex life stewardesses lead.

But there is a militant new addition to the cause these days, the Stewardess Anti-Defamation Defense League.

It may offer some hope. Joanna Chaplin, a former stewardess and the group's founder, says she wants to combat the stereotype of stewardesses as "brainless, whorish sexpots."

Now like Miss America contestants and "Playboy Playmates," stewardesses are not entirely innocent victims of the institutionalized ogling that some of them are beginning to complain about. The real and imagined glamor no doubt lures many women into the job.

But stewardesses differ from their less-dressed sisters because they have a real non-fantasy function to perform. These are, for the most part, skilled, mature people doing a necessary job under often trying conditions, yet they are treated like ersatz mistress-mothers.

The stewardesses' complaint is, of course, only one vivid example of the general complications of sex discrimination. Stewardesses are girls, are objects of lust, are visual in the air for man's gratification.

But some specific steps can be taken to liberate the stewardesses' image. Airlines, for one thing, can stop advertising their planes as flying harems, remembering that women fly, too. (Has anyone wondered why, now that there are a few male stewards, we don't see any "I'm Bruno; Fly me" ads?) Publishers can show more responsibility by not putting out books that promote the nymphomaniac-with-wings image.

Fence Post Letters To The Editor

'WHIP Not Open Party'

Pursuant to your article which appeared in the December 22 Wheeling Herald, I find it necessary to rebut that which was set forth by the WHIP organization.

First, I most emphatically disagree that WHIP is an open political party. I offer this statement on the grounds that they purposely neglected to organize by attempting to seek more and interested members prior to the selection of their nominating committee who caused the selection of the "chosen ones" whom they did not wish to be defeated at the nominating election. However, now that their "chosen ones" are candidates, WHIP will now proceed to attempt to increase their memership from the residents of Wheeling who, by the way, had no part in the selection of these candidates. From the foregoing, it is obvious that WHIP is not an open political party. An open political party strives to increase its membership and permits citizen participation in the selection of candidates.

Second, of the five candidates selected, only one has shown interest in local matters by his attendance at village board meetings as well as by commission participation. Another candidate rarely attends such meetings and the remainder, by their own admission have only on one occasion or have never attended such meetings. For that matter, I never recall seeing Mrs. Bokina, Mrs. Heitkotter or Mr. Jackson at any of the WHIP meetings. I would venture to say that they did not become WHIP members until they were asked to join just prior to their selection by the nominating committee. Certainly, I do not question the honesty of any of the candidates. I do, however, question their interest in the village and their capability to serve the village as officers thereof. I base this on their past lack of initiative by participation in WHIP and village affairs.

Third, if WHIP ever considered me as a candidate, they certainly never conveyed this to me. Furthermore, their statement that I participated in the planning of the nominating and slating procedures and further, that I as a member, was fully aware of the party schedule is a "bald face lie." I defy anyone to refute what I say in this regard and submit evidence to the contrary.

Fourth, at the WHIP meeting on Monday, December 18, I was denied the opportunity to run as a candidate from the floor. This decision was rendered by the nominating committee who should have permitted this matter to be referred to the entire membership for vote. It is obvious that this nominating committee exercised "total control" simply because they did not to run the risk of losing one of the "chosen ones" as a candidate. In furtherance of the aforesaid, I contend that there was sufficient time to accept, screen and select any number of additional nominees. Filing of candidates for the election does not commence until January 8 and does not close until February 12. Certainly, I was willing to compete with anyone nominated for mayor and let the members of WHIP decide who was best qualified to run as their candidate.

Fifth, WHIP has stated that I was indecisive and inconsistent pursuant to my running for office. Since I was never formally asked by WHIP to run for office, nor did I ever formally state that I would run, but rather merely entertained this possibility and later dismissed it without a formal declaration on my part, certainly does not constitute indecision on my part. As for their use of the word inconsistent, certainly there is a great deal of difference running as a candidate in an organized party and running as a candidate without the support of an organized party. It would be virtually impossible to run as a write-in candidate at this late date. But, it would not have been too late for WHIP, an organized party to postpone to select additional nominees.

Hope, Love Is Needed In 1973

We've done it again. On the stroke of midnight we ushered in an innocent victim, little 1973. He was greeted with bells, blaring of horns and whistles, toasted with champagne. He leaves without a backward glance, an old decrepit man, loaded down with the inheritances of broken dreams and promises he couldn't fulfill. He departs a saddened old man, jeered by many who had welcomed him. Now, once again we greet the New Year, joyously, shifting the packs of burdens on his young shoulders. Perhaps, he will be able to clean the streets of snipers and rapists that his predecessor could not annihilate. He tried to teach respect for law and order, so valiantly instill in the hearts of many, a seemingly lost cause. The cost of living has put more of a crimp in the housewife's purse. There seem to be as many jobless wandering the streets. Many a husband is filled with anguish at his inability to care for his family. Americans have felt the bitter disappointment of the continuation of the war. Our wonderful boys are still fighting and dying on foreign soil. A sad way to start the New Year, the promise looks bleak for the return of our loved ones from prison camps. We Americans are a proud race, a peaceful people, if we unite in prayer we will attain the longed for peace.

Welcome Little New Year 1973, your burdens are heavy, troubles many but, if you open your sack of hope, and love, we will be once again rejuvenated, and we will be able once more to dream the dreams of peace.

Blessed New Year to all, may health and peace walk with you throughout the coming year.

EDITORIAL: Bus transportation is very much alive and well in the Northwest suburbs.

Lauds Reporter

As the superintendent of the Wheeling Park District, I would just like to draw your attention to the excellent job that your reporter, Lynn Asinof, did of covering our park improvement referendum. Tomorrow the residents will be able to make an informed vote as to whether they have confidence in our proposals.

The one-week series of articles that Lynn did covered our proposed site improvements and land acquisition fairly and gave the readers an excellent picture of our present problems and what we have to do to correct these problems. These improvements to our school and park lands are badly needed.

The editorial that was written was fair and objective with your support appreciated.

If our referendum passes, it will be up to us to fulfill our proposals. We are confident Lynn will continue to keep our residents informed on our progress in the manner which they have become accustomed.

How Did I Keep Busy?

It suddenly occurred to me last week that I was celebrating the ninth anniversary of my going to work and I use the word "celebrating" so loosely I could cry. What I did was wonder where the years and the money have gone since I went to work and what I did to keep busy before I went to work.

Surveys show that some married women take a job simply to get out of the house, some to be able to "be themselves" and others purely for the money. I used all three reasons and a couple of more — I was tired of eating the kids' lunch leftovers and tired of wearing my son's old blue jeans. Volunteering for fund drives and going to PTA meetings were getting monotonous, too.

The blue jeans were too tight in some places and too loose in others and when I sat down it hurt. The lunch leftovers inevitably involved peanut butter and I'm lukewarm about peanut butter, especially in tandem with cold baked beans, ketchup and sardines. That's all in the same sandwich, you understand.

So I put on a dress, told the kids to eat their own nauseous concoctions, kissed off the PTA and went to work. Fortunately, if that's the way you feel about the PTA, the kids and the PTA have survived, but local fund drive collections have declined sharply and I'm sorry about that.

But now I can eat lunch in a restaurant every day. And I've eaten so many Italian beef sandwiches I'm starting to speak with an accent.

And fashions have changed so I'm back in pants again, only these are a little kinder to my contours than my son's skinny britches of nine years ago.

And instead of PTA, it's staff meetings and a meeting is a meeting is a meeting, and instead of volunteering for fund drives, I've been drafted to help with office parties.

That's where some of my salary has gone. Office farewell parties. And nylons. And farewell parties. And cleaning bills. And farewell parties.

A couple of years ago after my helper and I had gone to three farewell luncheons in two weeks, also contributing "a little" to a gift fund in each instance, she said, "I think everybody ought to chip in 25 cents a week so that once a year those of us who DON'T quit can get taken to lunch and be given a gift."

It sounded like such a great idea that I made her a committee of one to handle it and it would have worked fine, except for one thing. A month later, she quit.

Another expense for the working wife is food. It's not only that quickie meals cost more, but my kids started cooking when I went to work and they burned a lot. By the time they learned how not to ruin the groceries, they grew up. Now there's only Marilyn at home and she's hooked on the Galloping Gourmet. He's the guy who dumps a couple of gallups of vermouth in everything, only he pronounces it "vermuth" which I guess makes it suitable for eating instead of drinking.

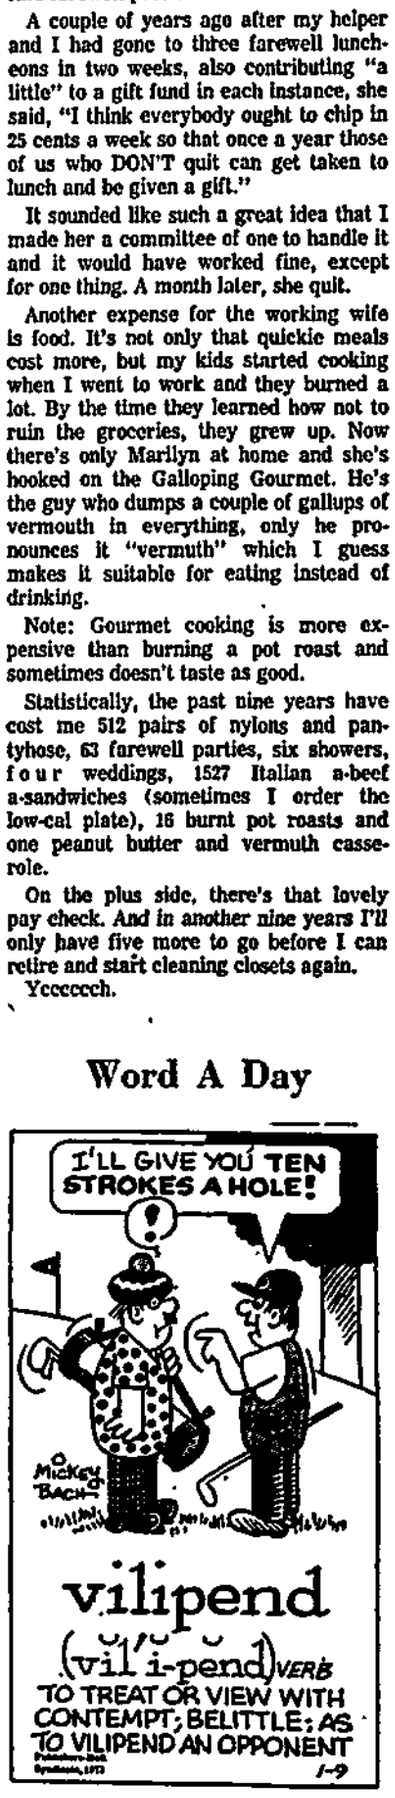

Note: Gourmet cooking is more expensive than burning a pot roast and sometimes doesn't taste as good.

Statistically, the past nine years have cost me 512 pairs of nylons and pantyhose, 63 farewell parties, six showers, four weddings, 1527 Italian a-beef a-sandwiches (sometimes I order the low-cal plate), 16 burnt pot roasts and one peanut butter and vermuth casserole.

On the plus side, there's that lovely pay check. And in another nine years I'll only have five more to go before I can retire and start cleaning closets again.

Yccccccch.

Word A Day

Business Today

EDITOR'S NOTE: A proposal by Denmark's government would give workers a 50 per cent stake in their company in 20 years. However, the plan faces considerable opposition.

by HILARY BARNES
London Financial Times - UPI

COPENHAGEN — In 20 years' time the employes may own 50 per cent of all equity capital in Danish companies if a proposal from the Social Democratic minority government becomes law. The government believes that its proposal would inaugurate a new era of "economic democracy."

The central point of the proposal is to give the workers — and salaried staff — a share in the increase in the value of the capital which they, by their labor, help to create.

This situation would be introduced by legislation forcing employers to hand over a percentage of the wage bill to a "Wage-Earner Dividend and Investment Fund," which would be controlled by representatives of the labor organizations and a minority of government appointees.

IN LIMITED companies, two-thirds of the employer contribution would remain tied in the firm as employe equity capital, and the employes would acquire voting rights at company meetings in accordance with their share of the equity.

It is a far-reaching proposal, regarded by some as nothing short of revolutionary. On paper the scheme appears to be in many ways a brilliant exercise in democratic socialism. It would help to redistribute income in favor of the workers, give workers a major influence on the operations of their place of work, and at the same time increase the country's savings level to provide industry with the investment capital, which it desperately needs.

But critics of the proposal fear that it will scare away foreign investment — an important point, as about one-third of the new investment in Danish industry in recent years has come from foreign investors.

SOME BUSINESSMEN also are convinced that it would strangle all innovation in industry. A director of the Federation of Industries, Ove Munch, calls the proposal an abortion law for business. He argues that no one will set up a new firm if he knows that within a year or two the employes will gain a 50 per cent equity holding — or at least they will not set up in Denmark.

Economists have worked out that it would take between 15 and 20 years for the employes to accumulate a 50 per cent share in the equity of most companies, depending on the type and structure of the company concerned.

The government has proposed that there should be a ceiling of 50 per cent of the equity that the employes can acquire through the scheme. A detail which has not been clarified is whether there will be anything to stop the employes from buying the additional one per cent giving them absolute control.

The scheme was worked out by a committee of the Trades Union Confederation, with Finance Minister Henry Graunbaum the driving force behind it.

Creativity Urged For Business Letters

The traditional business letter has become colorless, impersonal form of communication, according to Wilbert E. Scheer in a report from the Dartnell Institute of Business Research.

Scheer says that much of the standard business letter paraphernalia has become meaningless and mechanical — the salutation, the complimentary close, the inside address and the like. "What's lacking is a little creativity," said Scheer. "Writers of business letters, to be effective, must remember that the value of a letter lies in its personal warmth. Your letter should be as warm as your handshake. Your letter is really you, calling by mail."

Scheer suggests that part of the problem can be solved by adapting new streamlined business letter formats which eliminate the mechanical cliches. But more important, the letter writer should dictate his letter — eliminating stock phrases and other lazy expressions — as if the reader were right in the room.

Secretarial Program

Harper Offers On-The-Job Training

On-the-job training is part of the Harper College executive secretarial development program, according to the program coordinator May Ann Mickina.

She said sophomore students in the program are interning at 27 businesses in the Northwest suburbs. The students each work a minimum of 15 hours a week at construction, travel, real estate and manufacturing firms in the area.

Now in her third year as Program coordinator, Miss Mickina said she's gaining feedback from former students. Typical is Diane Myzia of Prospect Heights, who said of the program, "You not only gain work experience, but it's also a great opportunity for a girl to get into a company she really likes."

After her graduation in June, 1972, Diane began full-time employment at Allstate Insurance Co. of Northbrook where she had interned. Now a secretary in the personnel department, she's already had two promotions.

KEEPING IN touch with area industries to determine what type of executive secretarial help is needed is part of the coordinator's job. Miss Mickina said she matches the intern to the company in the executive secretarial program.

Laboratory machines at the college include calculating, transcription and copy machines as well as various kinds of typewriters.

The program includes preparation in spelling and punctuation, new telephone techniques and relations with co-corkers. Continual evaluation and weekly seminars to deal with problem situations are included in the course.

Conference On World Trade Set For Chicago March 7-8

Chicago will become the crossroads for international commerce March 7-8 when 1,500 business and government leaders gather at the La Salle Hotel for the 1973 World Trade Conference.

The theme of the 36th annual two-day Conference is World Trade: A Whole New Ball Game and will attract business leaders and international trade specialists from all areas of America and abroad to discuss world trade operation problems and development.

The conference is jointly sponsored by the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry and the International Trade Club of Chicago. It is regarded as America's most widely recognized forum for the study of current trends and problems in international trade and investment.

IN ANNOUNCING the theme, James H. Ingersoll, vice president-international of Borg-Warner Corp. and 1973 conference chairman, who is engaged in international trade, emphasized that fast changing economic, social and political conditions throughout the world will require new ways and means of doing business with other countries.

"The changes involve not only trade, investment, foreign aid and the international monetary system, but also important implications of relationships among nations. It all adds up to a whole new ball game," said Ingersoll.

Ingersoll cited changing attitudes toward Russia and Communist China and the emergence of developing countries as among the harbingers to new opportunities to introduce more products and services into vast, untapped markets.

"The opportunities are there, but international executives must be alert and well informed to take advantage of them," he added. "The program of the 1973 World Trade Conference has been developed to provide information and guidelines necessary to conduct successful business with other nations in this and coming decades."

Registration information is available from the 1973 World Trade Conference, 130 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60603.

Airline Sets Record

Eastern Air Lines said it carried a record total of 25,197 million passengers last year, a gain of 10.6 per cent over 1971. December passenger volume of 2.253 million, up 9.1 per cent from 1971, also was a new record.

Elk Grove Firm 53rd In Sales

Reliable Sheet Metal Works, Inc., Elk Grove Village ranked 53rd among 200 major mechanical contractors featured in the 1972 Book of Giants issue of DE/Journal, national business publication for the plumbing, heating and air conditioning contracting industry.

Reliable posted sales volume of $12.7 million in 1971. A specialist in ventilation, heating and air conditioning installations, the company derives half its volume from industrial construction and the other half from commercial work. Major projects include work at the nuclear power station in Zion, Chicago's city hall, and the new Standard Oil building in Chicago.

Ask The IRS

Q) Each Christmas my employer gives me a turkey. Do I have to include the value of this gift in my income?

A) No. If, to promote goodwill, your employer makes a general distribution of turkeys, hams, or other items of merchandise of nominal value at Christmas or another holiday, the value of those gifts is not income.

However, if your employer distributes cash, gift certificates, or similar items of readily convertible cash value, the value of such gifts is additional salary or wages.

Q) I moved last May. How can I be sure the Internal Revenue Service will send my tax forms to my new address?

A) Just leave your new address with the post office in your old neighborhood. The post office will forward the forms to you. When you get your 1972 income tax return, be sure to correct your address on the label in your tax return packet.

If you do not receive your tax forms package in the mail, you can obtain blank forms at any IRS office, most banks and post offices.

Q) My employer is transferring me to another state. What are the rules for deducting moving expenses?

A) In general, your moving expenses are deductible if you satisfy certain distance and time requirements. The distance between your new place of work and your old residence must be at least 50 miles farther than the distance from your old residence to your old place of work. Secondly, during the 12-month period immediately after your arrival in the general area of your new place of work, you must have worked full-time for at least 39 weeks. If you are self-employed, a different time requirement applies.

For more details, write your Internal Revenue district office and ask for a free copy of IRS Publication 521, "Tax Information on Moving Expenses."

Q) Both my wife and I are having dental work done and I'm going to have a big medical expense deduction this year. Is there any way to get some kind of benefit for this now to help me pay some of the bills?

A) Yes. You may be able to have your employer reduce your income tax withholding based on the larger itemized deductions you expect. Instructions for making this change are given on Form W-4. Ask your employer or your local IRS office for a copy.

HOT SHOPPES CAFETERIAS: GOOD FOOD AT PRICES YOU CAN SWALLOW.

Imagine a sumptuous entree. A crisp vegetable or fruit salad. A dessert to tempt the most dedicated dieter. And a refreshing beverage of your choice.

All for less than $2.

Surprised? Well, prices like these are just one of the surprises you're in for, when you treat yourself and your family to dinner at the Hot Shoppes Cafeteria at Woodfield or Lakehurst Mall. A family of three can sit down to a hearty dinner for less than $6. One that will be nutritious and well balanced besides.

But there'll be even more surprises. Rich carpeting. Quiet lighting. Tasteful table settings. And something we're mighty proud of. An array of good food. The kind you don't usually find in a cafeteria.

And even if you don't like cafeterias, we'd like you to give us a try. We think you'll enjoy the food. And the reasonable prices.

And bring the family along. They'll be surprised too.

Actress Mercouri In Demonstration

NEW YORK (UPI)—Actress Melina Mercouri took part in a demonstration Sunday in front of the Greek consulate here. The group shouted slogans and tried to present a leter to the Greek vice premier demanding the release of political prisoners in Greece.

Stylianos Patakos, vice premier and minister of interior affairs visiting the United States for the funeral of Harry S. Truman, was not at the consulate and the protesters had to settle for stuffing the letter under the door.

Hersey Tops Stellar Waukegan Invite Field

Gymnastics Editor

Hersey has done it again.

It has boldly slapped three-time defending state champion Hinsdale Central into an unfamiliar role as runnerup in a major invitational.

First at the 12-team Maine East Holiday Invite and now, again, amidst a stellar gathering of 10 squads at Waukegan — half of which were representatives of the Mid-Suburban League.

The Huskies of Head Coach Don Von Ebers edged Hinsdale, 51.5 to 49 on the basis of one specialist competing for each school and with points awarded on an 11 for first, nine for second, eight for third, etc., basis.

"We would have beaten them on a raw score basis, too," a jubilant Von Ebers added. "We would have hit 49.35 to their 47.70."

Elk Grove, another serious state contender, was an impressive third with 46.5 while Evanston finished fourth with 43. York hit 36.5, Homewood-Flossmoor 31, host Waukegan 23, Wheeling 21.5, Prospect 18 and Arlington 16.

"We didn't have a major break all night," Von Ebers beamed. "We had a lot of misses Thursday night and it worked us, but every kid hit his routine tonight. We went ahead after the fourth event (parallel bars) and the fact that we were able to win by two and one-half points has made us very optimistic. Our dual meet with them (Hinsdale at Hersey, Feb. 2) should be a great one."

Hersey's winning score was derived from Jack McLaughlin's second-place 8.5 on trampoline, Bruce Freedman's 7.85 for fourth on side horse, Joey Shepherd's blue-ribbon 8.3 on high bar, Mike Murphy's 7.85 for third on parallel bars, Tom Doczi's second-place 8.2 on rings and Steve Schwabe's 8.45 third-place tie on floor exercise.

Elk Grove drew raves off Dave Khoshaba's fourth-place 7.55 on tramp, Bob Siemianowski's runnerup 8.25 on horse, Scotty Phillips' third-slot 7.25 on high bar and 8.15 first on parallel bars, Jack Henry's 7.7 for sixth on rings and Kerry McMahon's 7.55 for sixth in free ex.

Wheeling's eighth-place bid was sparked by Greg Moriarity's 6.3 tramp average, Dave Peterson's 7.4 horse routine, a 5.95 by Jimmy Styles on high bar, Gary Glader's 6.4 on p-bars, Pete Hendricks' 6.55 on rings and Drew Parlee's 6.7 on free ex.

Bob McKoe's 7.0 on trampoline was the first score for Prospect which also counted Steve Scheibel's 5.65 on horse, Jim McBride's 3.4 on high bar, Alan Carlstedt's 6.75 on p-bars, Paul Shively's 7.4 on rings and Doug Zahour's 7.4 on the floor.

Arlington was third after the first event as Bob Flubacher clicked for a 7.6 on tramp and added Chris Freas' 5.2 on horse, Don Tatro's 5.45 on horizontal bar, Gary Glader's 6.4 on p-bars, Pete Hendricks' 6.55 on rings and Drew Parlee's 6.7 on free ex.

In another Saturday confrontation, Rolling Meadoes blitzed Maine East, 124.44 to 94.49, to increase its overall record to 7-1. Blaine Dahl's brilliant 8.35 on side horse showed the way for the winners who also got strong supporting roles from Mike Godawa's 7.8 on rings and stunning 7.09 all-around average, Al Sabatka's 7.55 tramp total and steady 7.45 and 7.35 performances by Godawa on parallel bars and free ex, respectively.

HANDSTANDING Paul Shively of Prospect is just a junior this season, but has already clicked for a 7.95 average on still rings.

Martha Seitz Directs Harper Women In Season-Opening Triangular Sweep

The Harper Junior College Women's Gymnastics team is only in its second year of existence, but the gals under head coach Martha Lynn Bolt don't appear satisfied with last year's fourth place finish in the state meet.

Harper successfully opened its season with an impressive triangular triumph over Triton and Moraine Valley. The winners collected 78.5 points to shade Triton's 75.2 and Moraine's 71.4.

"I was extremely pleased with the performance of the women new to the gymnastics team this year," Miss Bolt said. "The returning women also gave fine performances with Martha Seitz placing in all four events."

Martha was indeed the highlight of the meet for Harper. She parlayed two first place finishes with a pair of seconds en route to claiming a nifty 6.7 four-event, all-around average.

Martha opened with a second in floor exercise with a 6.4 and got ample support from teammates Kris Fredrickson (6.0), Kathy Oakley (5.6), Margaret Newmann (4.6) and Pat Parnow (4.3).

Martha claimed her first blue ribbon on balance beam with another 6.4 and was complemented by teammate Lynn Pearson's third place 6.0. Pat added a 5.2, Karen Anderson a 4.7 and Judy Kelly a 4.1 for the talented Harper squad.

Harper went 2-3 on the uneven parallel bars with Martha garnering a 7.2 and Pat Klewitz right behind with a 7.1. Lynn contributed a 7.0, Margaret a 6.6 and Kris a 6.2.

In the final vaulting competition, the girls insured a victory as Martha won the event with a 6.8, Kris nailed down second with a 6.2 and Lynn notched third with a 6.3 for a decisive Harper sweep. Pat recorded a 5.6 and Margaret a 5.5 for insurance.

Sue Chips, a finalist in the state meet last year at the "Beginning Level" performed at the Intermediate stage in an exhibition capacity and hit a sparkling 7.0 in floor exercise, 6.7 on balance beam, 6.4 on uneven parallel bars and a 5.9 in vaulting.

Harper's next meet will be Jan. 19 against Kishwaukee at Waubonsee.

SPOTLIGHT ON GYMNASTICS

Chapman: Gymnastics An Art

(Editor's Note — This is the first in an 11-part series featuring the coaches who have made the Mid-Suburban League what many consider the most fertile high school gymnastics territory in the nation. The coaches will appear alphabetically according to the schools they represent)

"Gymnastics is an art," according to Arlington varsity gymnastics coach Tom Chapman who quotes a saying on the wall at NCAA defending champion Southern Illinois University: 'Gymnastics is the only true sport — all others are contests.'

Chapman is the Mid-Suburban League's newest member of the coaching ranks, having transferred from Waukegan to fill the vacated shoes of former Card mentor Tom Walthouse.

Tom Chapman

"In gymnastics you are not competing against one another but for a score," Chapman emphasized. "A lot of stress is placed on the individual, but by the same token, individuals that can produce under stress build a strong team."

Chapman, having spent five years in Waukegan as freshman, sophomore and finally varsity coach, switched to Arlington and accepted the challenge of maintaining the Cardinals' standard of gymnastics excellence.

The 27-year-old graduate of Eastern Illinois University admits that the community, economic conditions and attitude of his kids are "more liberal" in Arlington Heights than Waukegan.

After prepping at Broadlands — a small high school near Champaign that offered nothing in the way of gymnastics — Chapman made his mark at EIU as a four-year performer on side horse, rings and parallel bars.

A student of Waukegan head coach Bill Ballanger for three years duing his freshman and sophomore coaching stints, Chapman took Waukegan to its best finish ever in the state meet (15th) last season.

"The key to any successful high school program is a feeder program developed in the junior high schools and even grade schools," he said.

"If a gymnast is introduced to the sport as a freshman in high school, he has an awful lot to learn in a short time. The main thing is his body awareness — finding out where he is and what he looks like at various spots in his routine.

"If he can learn and master these basics before he enters high school, a coach can almost specialize this individual right away. Of course, the gymnast must be devoted, dedicated and disciplined. It requires as much courage as anything else. And a lot of pain too," he added.

Stepping into the role as coach of a team that finished second in the state last year is demanding, to put it mildly. "Many people have wished me luck here," he said, "but my interpretation of luck is when preparation meets opportunity."

(Next week — Conant's Bob Ferguson)

MUSTANG bronc-buster Blaine Dahl tamed the side horse for a sparkling 8.15 Thursday as the Mid-Suburban League opened dual-meet competition. Dahl came back with a brilliant 8.35 Saturday to pace Rolling Meadows in a non-conference win and rates stop the area's weekly honor roll in his specialty.

Pendola's Injury Staggers Schaumburg

Arlington, Conant, Hersey, Elk Grove Roll

Gymnastics Editor

While Arlington, Hersey, Elk Grove and Conant were making the most noise in the opening night of Mid-Suburban League gymnastics competition, the shrill from Schaumburg was nearly as penetrating.

The Saxons failed to sweep one of the four double-dual meets that the others had accomplished and rather than cries of jubilation, Schaumburg wailed in shrieks of disaster.

Head coach Gary LaRocco watched his self-proclaimed band of challengers crumble under shock of a broken arm suffered by versatile Manny Pendola.

"He was doing a fly-away off the high bar," LaRocco recalled from his position as spotter underneath the apparatus. "I tried to catch him coming down and I thought I broke his fall, but he apparently reached back with his arm. It was a clean break."

Pendola, who suffered a serious back injury in last year's conference meet and "was just beginning to gain his strength back," according to LaRocco, was the Saxons' top performer this season.

Pendola's crippling blow crushed the already-undermanned Saxons who were competing without the services of trampman Carlos Ramirez (another broken arm) and Mike Lefebvre and Asle Klemma (flu victims). In some respects, it was surprising that Schaumburg scored 62.68 in their absence.

Conant claimed both the Saxons and Palatine (105.93) as double-dual meet victims by virtue of soaring to a robust 126.74. The stellar mark fell just short of the Cougars' school record of 121.06 set in 1971.

Hersey, another twin-winner, hit a brilliant 137.17 to outlast Rolling Meadows' 120.95 and Fremd's 93.26. Arlington, after bowing in its only other duel of the season, climbed to 107.80 and successfully launched its defending MSL title over Wheeling's 98.92 and Glenbard North's 96.68.

In the fourth triangular-like setup, Elk Grove "slipped" to a booming 130.50 after a 132 performance two weeks earlier, but still had an easy time of whipping Forest View's 91.22 and Prospect's 85.16.

Conant's overwhelming success was derived from four event winners. Tom Gardner led the assault with a sparkling 8.1 in floor exercise and a 5.54 all-around average. Also entering the winner's circle were Mike Cohen on side horse (6.7), Dean Miller on high bar (7.45) and Tom Hall on trampoline (7.45).

Palatine earned a split decision for the evening by finishing strongly behind its one-two brother punch of Ken (7.35) and Larry (7.1) Evensen on parallel bars and Dick (7.65) Alcina on rings. Jim Buckley topped all Saxon scorers with an opening 5.75 on floor exercise.

Hersey's overall depth detoured Rolling Meadows' plans for an upset. The Huskies crowned three event champions off Blake Frodin's 8.05 free ex display, a superb 8.45 by Joe Shepherd on high bar and Jack McLaughlin's super 8.15 on trampoline.

Meadows, only in its sophomore year of gymnastics competition, saw side horse ace Blaine Dahl earn a blue ribbon with an 8.15 and the area's top all-arounder Mike Godawa capture parallel bars with a nifty 7.2 en route to a 6.85 average. The effort narrowly bested Hersey's Shepherd who posted a 6.77.

Fremd saved its best for last as ringsman Don Knigge strained to a dazzling 7.95 routine and a gold medal. Teammate Jim Benson notched a second on parallel bars with a 7.95.

In the closest and most exciting meet of the evening, Arlington conquered the century mark and barely nudged Wheeling and Glenbard.

The Cardinals of first-year coach Tom Chapman boasted event champs in Geoff Reider on side horse (7.85) and Bob Flubacher on trampoline (7.45).

Wheeling countered with Bill Harvel's winning 7.15 on p-bars and dual-triumphs by Gary Pagano and George Olson (6.6's) on rings.

Elk Grove assured a headlining showdown with Hersey Thursday with its stunning 130.50 total. The Grenadiers swept all seven trophies from Forest View and Prospect en route to the double verdict.

Manny Pendola

All-arounder Scott Phillips recorded a splendid 8.0 on high bar and added it to derive a 6.30 average from five events of work. Teammate Kerry McMahon won free ex with a fine 7.65 and Bob Siemianowski bounced the side horse for a 7.4.

Dave Khoshaba bounced to a winning 7.85 average on tramp while Bill Bosslet straightened out the parallel bars with a 7.0 effort. Jack Henry was tops on rings with a 7.85 routine.

Forest View's all-arounder Don Lanham posted identical 5.75's on both free ex and p-bars, added a 6.45 on rings with a 6.75 on horizontal bar and came up with a nifty 5.52 average.

The bulk of Prospect's scoring came from Paul Shively's 7.05 on rings and Alan Carlstedt's 6.5 parallel bar performance. Head coach Pat Kivland has bolstered his under levels with several former varsity candidates in hopes of capturing the sophomore conference crown.

Chances Coming To Meet Stars

THERE'S MORE to being a sports fan than just viewing conflict on the field of battle.

Sometimes it can be just as entertaining to hear what athletes and figures related to sports have to say in a relaxed state away from the heat of competition.

More and more in recent years, the real fan is interested in much more than how a body performs or what a team accomplishes in terms of wins. More people are becoming interested in athletes as human beings, as people with feelings and thoughts and distinct personalities just like you and me.

And more fans want to see how a famous figure comes off in person, how somber or witty or articulate or shallow he sounds, as the case may be. We want to get to know, or at least feel we know, these household names as more than just "third baseman," "halfback," or whatever.

In keeping with this sort of trend in the public's demands, we see each year more and more promotions allowing us to meet athletes off the field — at banquets, speeches, autograph-signing sessions, and special events. These have existed for some time, but seem to grow in number every year.

They're a good idea because they benefit everyone — the featured figure, teams represented by the stars and the public. It's good public relations for the team, very good money for the star (sometimes up to $1000 for as little as a one-hour appearance for the very biggest national names) and a chance for the ordinary fan, at reasonable cost, to get some insight into a figure close-up.

The Herald area has always been fortunate to attract many such special promotional events, probably because of the considerable sports interest and vast advertising and customer potential of the area.

This coming week, in particular, offers a bonanza for area fans with four different opportunities to get good personal looks at men we normally only read about and see pictured in newspapers.

Leading off is the fourth annual Our Lady of the Wayside (Arlington Heights) father and son sports night, which in recent years has showcased an all-star lineup of speakers at the Catholic church and grade school on Park and Mitchell in Arlington. This year's event starts at 7:30 tomorrow night.

Next on the docket is an appearance by the newly-formed White Sox basketball team for the first time in this area. The Sox cagers will take on an Elk Grove High School faculty team at the school Sunday night at 6:30.

Then, at noon Monday, comes another in a series of Paddock Publications Pro Sports Luncheons which for two years have showcased some highly-interesting guest speakers. One of the most colorful available anywhere has been lined up for this one — controversial White Sox radio announcer Harry Caray.

And to top it all off comes a replay of major-league baseballers - turned - hardcourt performers when the Cubs meet a Rolling Meadows faculty contingent at 7:30 Wednesday night, Jan. 17.

To start again in chronological order...

This year's Wayside sport-tacular, as the Herald has publicized in recent weeks, will feature Ron Santo of the Cubs; Ed Spiezio of the Sox; John Carmichael, former long-time sports editor of the Daily News; and George Rennix, for years a top referee in the National Football League.

The first three names need no introduction to most sports fans, especially baseball nuts. I will not go into highlights of their backgrounds here since they have appeared in these pages in recent weeks.

However, I would like to single out Rennix — not only because officials are not usually big names, even the best, but also because Rennix in particular is a fine after-dinner speaker. Anyone who heard him speak at Wayside's sports night two years ago knows that. He possesses a wealth of humorous stories and anecdotes from his 15 years of NFL officiating — able now to laugh at himself although he, like all refs, has absorbed much more abuse and far less credit than he deserves.

Rennex, now retired after 15 years service on NFL battlegrounds (including three championship games), plus many more years including a Rose Bowl before that, has become a supervisor and evaluator of NFL refs.

As for the Sox roundballers, they've won three f their first four games in their initial campaign. "They're pretty good," says promoter and team announcer Phil Ashback, "but not like pros. They're not that much better than the average guy at basketball just because they're big-league baseball players.

"There are some college-caliber players, though, like Gail Hopkins and Walt Williams (both since traded away), plus Carlos May when he gets hot and Tom Bradley. Hopkins and Bradley had college scholarships in basketball. The others are Ed Spiezio (again!), Rick Reichardt, Chuck Brinkman, Moe Drabowski and Al Weis."

Truthfully, the Sox play primarily to pick up a few extra bucks and capitalize on their fame since not all have steady jobs throughout the off-season. But they do it for a good time, too, and to stay together with some teammates during the hot-stove season. And this extra activity certainly doesn't hurt the club's public relations — especially as Ashback noted, when they stay after to sign autographs.

The Sox have been well-received on the hardcourt. In their opener they drew a standing - room - only throng of 4300!

The Cubs basketball squad is quite similar except that it has been in operation longer — several years now. It's been a highly-successful team, too, and among its victims two years ago was a Prospect faculty team.

Santo, who can be an engaging conversationalist, will make his second area appearance within the week along with well-known stars Don Kessinger, Jenkins, Paul Popovich, J. C. Martin, Jim Hickman, Milt Pappas, Dan McGinn, Ken Rudolph, Rick Monday, Glenn Beckert, Randy Hundley (the latter two are from Palatine), Billy Williams and Rick Reuschel.

An autograph-signing area will be roped off after the game.

Caray's appearance at the Paddock luncheon also is being well-publicized and for anyone familiar with him, not much need be said. Few figures in the sports world today are more charismatic or more popular — especially in Chicago these days.

So, if you're interested in rare looks at some of these men away from the seriousness of their jobs, here's your chance. Your nominal admission fees will be well-spent. As Joe Namath would say: I guarantee it!

No Snow But Lots Of Fun

Papreck, Magnusen Fire Sharp 78s In Eskimo Open

Eskimos might not have been too thrilled with the conditions Sunday at Buffalo Grove Golf Club. You see, there wasn't enough snow to make a sled of huskies go.

However, a lot of sun and not much wind made it just about the best day in recent memory for the annual Eskimo Open — a golf tournament for the most fanatical of players.

Buffalo Grove, one of two sites for the 18-hole tourney, was mastered by Dick Papreck and Stan Magnusen, both with outstanding 78's over the par 72 layout. Magnusen, of Park Ridge, posted a pair of 39's; Papreck, of Northbrook, went 38-40.

One woman — Jerry Johnson of Buffalo Grove — braved he elements. Despite the freezing weather, Jerry went around the 18 holes in 104 strokes. Not many men could turn in a good score like that in January.

Steve Levinthal, of Lincolnwood, was the youngest participant. The 11-year-old played nine holes.

STRAINING FOR THE TOUCH after the first leg of the 200-yard medley relay is Prospect backstroker Chris Prinslow against Elk Grove Friday at Kopp's Pool. Prinslow and his teammates captured the medley in 1:46.8, but Elk Grove took over after that. Paced by the Bolin brothers — Scott and Brent — the Grenadiers shocked the Knights, 48-47. 'Father Is With Me All The Time' Says Vince Jr., Son To A Legend (Around Super Bowl time, the Late Vince Lombardi is always news. First, he coached the winning team in the first two Super Bowls ever played. Second, the winning team now receives the Vince Lombardi Trophy.

And Lombardi lives in another way. Perhaps no other coach has had the impact on the philosophy of modern-day coaches — from Little League to the NFL — that Lombardi has had.)

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK (NEA) — "It's hard, really, to be me," said Vince Lombardi Jr. "Father is with me all the time — constantly. People miss him. People always remind you of that. But under no circumstances do I try to be his carbon copy. I'm a product of my generation, he was a product of his. My philosophy is different from his."

Possibly the most legendary bit of philosophy held by Vince Lombardi Sr., the late Green Bay Packer and Washington Redskin coach, is that "Winning isn't everything — it's the only thing."

"A lot of people question that now," said Vince Lombardi Jr., in his law office in Minneapolis. "I guess I'm not willing to sacrifice all that he did for winning. Like I'm not willing to be gone from my family as much as he was. He had his way. I have mine."

Lombardi, now 30 years old, was recently elected to the Minnesota House of Representatives. His party affiliation was Independent, but he said he will caucus with the Conservatives. He represents the Lino Lakes suburban area, where he lives with his wife and three boys, ages 6, 5 and 1½, and one daughter, 4.

"I guess parents always say that they will bring up their children different from their parents," said Lombardi. "So did I. For one thing, I was not going to be as physical with my kids as father was with me, not as strict. He was not one to spare the rod." — Lombardi laughed. — "Where did he hit me? Anywhere he could catch me.

"But I find myself saying some of the same things to my kids — 'If I get hold of you you won't sit down for a week!'

"The thing he emphasized most was schoolwork. If I fell down in grades he wouldn't let me out of the house until the next marketing period. I had nothing to except study. But I remember one time I was a sophomore in high school, when we still lived in New Jersey. I got thrown out of school for a day, for a very minor matter. I was told to bring my father and mother to see the principal the next day.

"I was really in trepidation, waiting for my father to come home. "When I told him what happened, he didn't say 'boo.' I was steeling myself for the worst. But he knew that I felt bad enough, so he didn't have to say anything. He had a great sense of timing. Though I wish he had been a little more non-physical like that a little more often."

When Lombardi was 16, his father got the head coaching job at Green Bay, and so the family of four (including a younger sister), moved to Wisconsin. It was here that young Vince began to feel the pressures of being the son of a legend-to-be.

"I played football and the report around the high school, a Catholic school named Premontre, was that I was supposed to be the greatest thing since sliced bread," Lombardi recalled. "They figured, if he's the coach's son, he's got to be great. They had me up to 6-2, when at my very best I was 5-10, 195."

Lombardi became a starting fullback on the team, yet he felt his father never really cared very much.

"I'd come home and I'd say, 'Dad, I scored a touchdown today.' He'd say, 'Oh yeah?" I thought he wasn't interested in me as an athlete, only as a student. But later I'd hear that he was pleased when I did well on the football field.

"In retrospect, I guess it was good that he never pressured me to be an athlete. He probably sensed that I was having enough pressure on me — by myself and by others — and he didn't want to add. Everyone expected big things of me, including me, because I was Vince Lombardi's son. I used to feel very, very tense before games."

Lombardi received a football scholarship to St. Thomas College in St. Paul, Minn. He eventually became a starting fullback and captain of the football team. One of the few times he remembers his father interceding in his college career was at the beginning of his sophomore year.

A BIG DAY in the life of the late Vince Lombardi Sr. as two Packers hoist him aloft after winning the pro title in Green Bay.

"I took a room off campus," said Lombardi. "Father called the dean of men and told him to send me home. He didn't want me living off campus. Well, I got a room in a dormitory."

Lombardi recalls something else about college days. "I may have been the only kid in school who hated to go home for summer vacation." Lombardi laughed again. "Father always found the hardest jobs for me to do at home — construction, loading boxes into semi-trailers in a pickle factory. He made it a point never to find me an easy job.

"He learned about the value of hard work from his father. My grandfather was strict, too, in the ways of the old country. I remember father saying that he always had to do a lot of busy work around the house. They lived in Brooklyn but they had a barn, and father remembered having to tear up the barn floor and then his father made him put the planks down again. And it had to be a good job! Or my grandfather would be mad and get physical."

"So father learned early the philosophies that would carry him through his life: appealing to an individual's pride, integrity, singleness of purpose, commitment to excellence — winning.

"Some of those things I have accepted and live by, too. But there are pluses and minuses. I had great respect for my father. I was in awe of him. And because of this we weren't what you'd call buddies, never really the closest. He was dedicated to his work — and he was a great success at it. But he wasn't home that much. He was very busy. We'd talk on occasion but you mostly had to fend for yourself.

"But life was exciting, to be in the center of it. And for a kid, to go to training camp with a pro football team — wow!

"I saw that his philosophies at home were the same with his football team. He drove them like he tried to drive me. But he was also aware that everyone's an individual. He had to take everything into proper context. He has been a great influence on a lot of coaches — not just in the pros — but on the lower levels, down to pre-high school football coaches. And from what I've seen and heard, I'm not convinced that younger kids are prepared for the strain that some well-meaning coaches place on them. Maybe you can't overemphasize the striving for excellence, but I think you can overemphasize the striving for victory.

"What made father so unusual was that he was so articulate and so successful. And you know, it wasn't until his last year or so of life that he realized that he had more to offer people than just football. He realized that people wanted to hear the things he had to say about malcontents and misfits receiving too much emphasis when the achievers and doers should get it. He was surprised at the impact.

"One thing I take a tremendous amount of satisfaction in is that father didn't realize his dream of becoming a head pro coach until he was 46 years old. I think of this when I'm feeling impatient about not having accomplished all I've wanted. And I'm only 30. So father's greatest example for me, possibly, is that you've got to serve your apprenticeship — put in your time, make your mistakes."

Champagne Ready For Mixed Tourney

"Champagne is ready, come and get it!"

Those were the words of Bill Noel of Armanetti's Wine Cellar in Rolling Meadows as he referred to the prizes for Paddock Publications Champagne Tourney for mixed bowling leagues.

Tourney founder Bob Paduock immediately grabbed a truck, and picked up the 290 splits of champagne encased within 290 packets of gifts which will be given to 290 expected keglers in the event at Thunderbird Lanes Saturday night, Jan. 27.

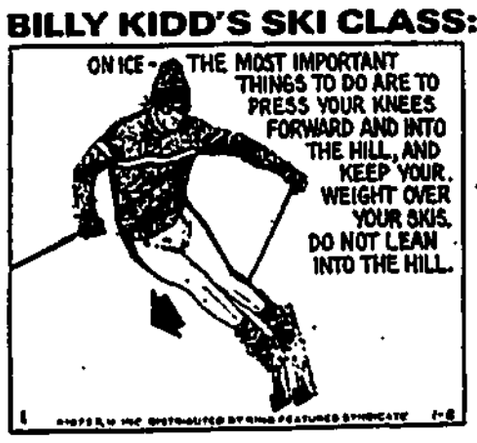

In addition to the champagne and gimmicks, each of the bowlers will also receive an official tourneys patch, and a chance at the prize money:

1st Place $151.80, 2nd Place $116.38, 3rd Place $80.96, 4th Place $65.78, 5th Place $50.60, 6th Place 40.48. High Game Out of Money (Actual) $10.00.

In addition, each team will receive a free color pic. Deadline for entries in both the mixed league tournament and women's league event at Thunderbird Lanes Jan. 27-28 is Saturday, Jan. 13.

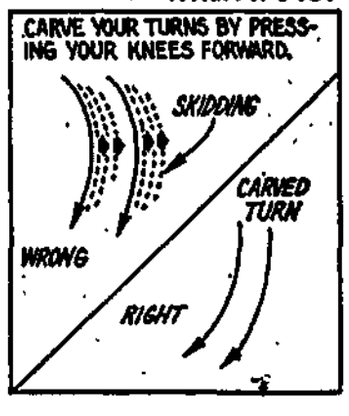

One-hundred teams have already entered the women's event at Thunderbird Lanes as of Wednesday morning.

STRAINING FOR THE TOUCH after the first leg of the 200-yard medley relay is Prospect backstroker Chris Prinslow against Elk Grove Friday at Kopp's Pool. Prinslow and his teammates captured the medley in 1:46.8, but Elk Grove took over after that. Paced by the Bolin brothers — Scott and Brent — the Grenadiers shocked the Knights, 48-47. 'Father Is With Me All The Time' Says Vince Jr., Son To A Legend

(Around Super Bowl time, the Late Vince Lombardi is always news. First, he coached the winning team in the first two Super Bowls ever played. Second, the winning team now receives the Vince Lombardi Trophy.

And Lombardi lives in another way. Perhaps no other coach has had the impact on the philosophy of modern-day coaches — from Little League to the NFL — that Lombardi has had.)

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK (NEA) — "It's hard, really, to be me," said Vince Lombardi Jr. "Father is with me all the time — constantly. People miss him. People always remind you of that. But under no circumstances do I try to be his carbon copy. I'm a product of my generation, he was a product of his. My philosophy is different from his."

Possibly the most legendary bit of philosophy held by Vince Lombardi Sr., the late Green Bay Packer and Washington Redskin coach, is that "Winning isn't everything — it's the only thing."

"A lot of people question that now," said Vince Lombardi Jr., in his law office in Minneapolis. "I guess I'm not willing to sacrifice all that he did for winning. Like I'm not willing to be gone from my family as much as he was. He had his way. I have mine."

Lombardi, now 30 years old, was recently elected to the Minnesota House of Representatives. His party affiliation was Independent, but he said he will caucus with the Conservatives. He represents the Lino Lakes suburban area, where he lives with his wife and three boys, ages 6, 5 and 1½, and one daughter, 4.

"I guess parents always say that they will bring up their children different from their parents," said Lombardi. "So did I. For one thing, I was not going to be as physical with my kids as father was with me, not as strict. He was not one to spare the rod." — Lombardi laughed. — "Where did he hit me? Anywhere he could catch me.

"But I find myself saying some of the same things to my kids — 'If I get hold of you you won't sit down for a week!'

"The thing he emphasized most was schoolwork. If I fell down in grades he wouldn't let me out of the house until the next marketing period. I had nothing to except study. But I remember one time I was a sophomore in high school, when we still lived in New Jersey. I got thrown out of school for a day, for a very minor matter. I was told to bring my father and mother to see the principal the next day.

"I was really in trepidation, waiting for my father to come home. "When I told him what happened, he didn't say 'boo.' I was steeling myself for the worst. But he knew that I felt bad enough, so he didn't have to say anything. He had a great sense of timing. Though I wish he had been a little more non-physical like that a little more often."

When Lombardi was 16, his father got the head coaching job at Green Bay, and so the family of four (including a younger sister), moved to Wisconsin. It was here that young Vince began to feel the pressures of being the son of a legend-to-be.

"I played football and the report around the high school, a Catholic school named Premontre, was that I was supposed to be the greatest thing since sliced bread," Lombardi recalled. "They figured, if he's the coach's son, he's got to be great. They had me up to 6-2, when at my very best I was 5-10, 195."

Lombardi became a starting fullback on the team, yet he felt his father never really cared very much.

"I'd come home and I'd say, 'Dad, I scored a touchdown today.' He'd say, 'Oh yeah?'" I thought he wasn't interested in me as an athlete, only as a student. But later I'd hear that he was pleased when I did well on the football field.

"In retrospect, I guess it was good that he never pressured me to be an athlete. He probably sensed that I was having enough pressure on me — by myself and by others — and he didn't want to add. Everyone expected big things of me, including me, because I was Vince Lombardi's son. I used to feel very, very tense before games."

Lombardi received a football scholarship to St. Thomas College in St. Paul, Minn. He eventually became a starting fullback and captain of the football team. One of the few times he remembers his father interceding in his college career was at the beginning of his sophomore year.

A BIG DAY in the life of the late Vince Lombardi Sr. as two Packers hoist him aloft after winning the pro title in Green Bay.

"I took a room off campus," said Lombardi. "Father called the dean of men and told him to send me home. He didn't want me living off campus. Well, I got a room in a dormitory."

Lombardi recalls something else about college days. "I may have been the only kid in school who hated to go home for summer vacation." Lombardi laughed again. "Father always found the hardest jobs for me to do at home — construction, loading boxes into semi-trailers in a pickle factory. He made it a point never to find me an easy job.

"He learned about the value of hard work from his father. My grandfather was strict, too, in the ways of the old country. I remember father saying that he always had to do a lot of busy work around the house. They lived in Brooklyn but they had a barn, and father remembered having to tear up the barn floor and then his father made him put the planks down again. And it had to be a good job! Or my grandfather would be mad and get physical."

"So father learned early the philosophies that would carry him through his life: appealing to an individual's pride, integrity, singleness of purpose, commitment to excellence — winning.

"Some of those things I have accepted and live by, too. But there are pluses and minuses. I had great respect for my father. I was in awe of him. And because of this we weren't what you'd call buddies, never really the closest. He was dedicated to his work — and he was a great success at it. But he wasn't home that much. He was very busy. We'd talk on occasion but you mostly had to fend for yourself.

"But life was exciting, to be in the center of it. And for a kid, to go to training camp with a pro football team — wow!

"I saw that his philosophies at home were the same with his football team. He drove them like he tried to drive me. But he was also aware that everyone's an individual. He had to take everything into proper context. He has been a great influence on a lot of coaches — not just in the pros — but on the lower levels, down to pre-high school football coaches. And from what I've seen and heard, I'm not convinced that younger kids are prepared for the strain that some well-meaning coaches place on them. Maybe you can't overemphasize the striving for excellence, but I think you can overemphasize the striving for victory.

"What made father so unusual was that he was so articulate and so successful. And you know, it wasn't until his last year or so of life that he realized that he had more to offer people than just football. He realized that people wanted to hear the things he had to say about malcontents and misfits receiving too much emphasis when the achievers and doers should get it. He was surprised at the impact.

"One thing I take a tremendous amount of satisfaction in is that father didn't realize his dream of becoming a head pro coach until he was 46 years old. I think of this when I'm feeling impatient about not having accomplished all I've wanted. And I'm only 30. So father's greatest example for me, possibly, is that you've got to serve your apprenticeship — put in your time, make your mistakes."

Champagne Ready For Mixed Tourney

"Champagne is ready, come and get it!"

Those were the words of Bill Noel of Armanetti's Wine Cellar in Rolling Meadows as he referred to the prizes for Paddock Publications Champagne Tourney for mixed bowling leagues.

Tourney founder Bob Paddock immediately grabbed a truck, and picked up the 290 splits of champagne encased within 290 packets of gifts which will be given to 290 expected keglers in the event at Thunderbird Lanes Saturday night, Jan. 27.

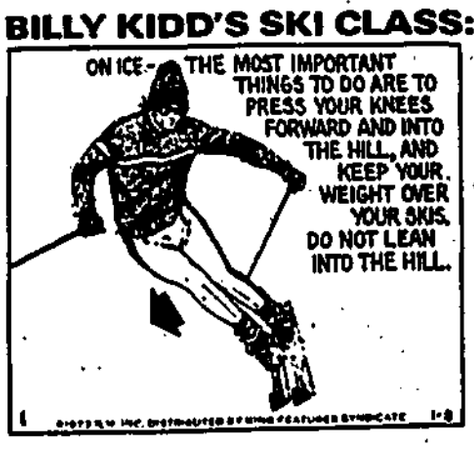

In addition to the champagne and gimmicks, each of the bowlers will also receive an official tourneys patch, and a chance at the prize money:

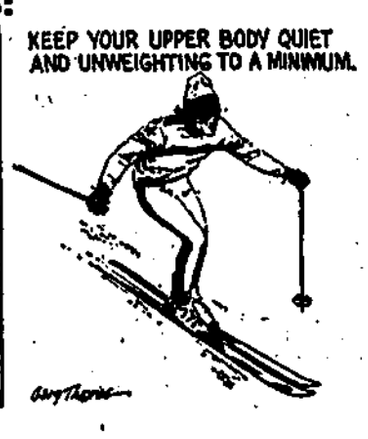

1st Place $151.80, 2nd Place $116.38, 3rd Place $80.96, 4th Place $65.78, 5th Place $50.60, 6th Place 40.48. High Game Out of Money (Actual) $10.00.

In addition, each team will receive a free color pic. Deadline for entries in both the mixed league tournament and women's league event at Thunderbird Lanes Jan. 27-28 is Saturday, Jan. 13.

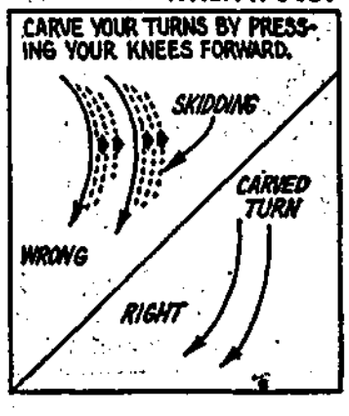

One-hundred teams have already entered the women's event at Thunderbird Lanes as of Wednesday morning.

The Herald Newspaper does not knowingly accept HELP WANTED ads that indicate a preference based on age from employers covered by the

IN EMPLOYMENT ACT.

HELP WANTED headings directed specifically toward either men or women are used merely for the convenience of our readers, to let them know which jobs have historically been more attractive to persons of one sex than the other. The placement of an ad under a heading is not in itself an expression of a preference, limitation, specification or discrimination based on sex. Notice of Public Hearing

THE ARLINGTON HEIGHTS PLAN COMMISSION WILL CONSIDER AMENDMENTS TO CHAPTER 28, ZONING REGULATIONS, AND CHAPTER 29, SUBDIVISION CONTROL REGULATIONS OF THE ARLINGTON HEIGHTS VILLAGE CODE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Public Hearing will be held on Wednesday, January 24, 1973 at 8:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building, 33, South Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights, Illinois, at which time the Arlington Heights Plan Commission will consider amendments to Chapter 28, Zoning Regulations, and Chapter 29, Subdivision Control Regulations of the Arlington Heights Village Code, with regard to additions or deletions to residential lot standards in the following cases:

In Chapter 28-11.3-3.1 and 11.4-3.1 it is stated that corner lots shall have a width at the established building line of not less than ninety feet and no separate area requirement for a corner lot is included. In Chapter 29-307 the minimum width required, in the case of a corner lot, is seventy-five feet at the building setback line and the minimum area is 9,900 square feet. Also, in 29-307 minimum widths of residential lots measured at the building setback lines thereof are related to lot areas; in Chapter 28-11.2-3.1, 11.3-3.1 and 11.4-3.1 these widths are related to zoning districts.

Chapter 28-11.3-4.1 and 11.4-4.1 refer to front yards of not less than 25 feet; whereas Chapter 29-306 refers to building setback lines of 30 feet and 20 feet, all subject to certain conditions.

In Chapter 28-4.1 the maximum floor area ratio is listed as 1.0 for the R-5 Multiple-Family Dwelling District and as 1.5 for the R-6 Multiple-Family Dwelling District; whereas, in Chapter 28-11.6-3, 1.5 is required in the R-5 District and in 28-11.7-4, 2.0 is required in the R-6 District.

In Chapter 28-3.2-85 and 3.2-95 in definitions of Lot Depth and Lot Width, reference to minimum lot width measurement along an arc, as specified in Chapter 29-307, is omitted.

Also considered will be an amendment to Chapter 28-4.3 regarding the Zoning Classification of annexed land as R-1 One-Family Dwelling District; to add: "or R-3 One-Family Dwelling District of said land has previously been divided in lots of area or dimension less than required in the R-1 District."

Also considered will be amendments to Chapter 28 with regard to the following definitions:

3.2-44 Dwelling
3.2-45 Dwelling Unit
3.2-51 Dwelling Row
3.2-57 Family
3.2-109 Planned Development

Also considered will be amendments with regard to the following sections of Chapter 29:

In 29-201 the filing of six copies of a preliminary plat of subdivision is required. According to the Plan Commission application, the filing of 20 copies is required.

According to 29-304, permanent dead-end streets shall be no longer than 660 feet. In Ordinance No. 67-93 "Thoroughfare Plan" maximum cul-de-sac lengths are listed according to zoning district with 500 feet as maximum.

In 29-306, block standards as to length, width, plat requirements and crosswalks through blocks may be revised or deleted.

In Chapter 29 all of Article VI, Contributions for Connection to Existing Public Facilities, may be revised or deleted.

Interested persons will be given an opportunity to be heard.

by BOB LAHEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Four Arrested, Linked To 30 Area Burglaries

Up to 30 area burglaries over the last four months may have been solved by the weekend arrests of four youths by Elk Grove Village police.

Police in Elk Grove Village have charged all four youths in connection with five burglaries, while Mount Prospect police have charged one of the youths with three counts of burglary, and Des Plaines police are considereing two charges of burglary and one of theft against that same youth.

Elk Grove Village police charged Philip Devine, 17, of 557 Oak St., Elk Grove Village, with burglary; James T. Hickey, 18, of 876 Marshall Dr., Des Plaines, with burglary; a 16-year-old Elk Grove Village juvenile with burglary; and James Nemoff, 18, of 340 Beau Dr., Des Plaines, with possession of stolen goods.

IN ADDITION, Mount Prospect police have charged Nemoff with three counts of burglary.

Burglary victims from the three towns are being called in by police to identify the more than 50 items recovered at Nemoff's apartment Friday during a search warrant raid. Through this identification process, all three police departments hope to solve other burglaries.

Mount Prospect Det. Richard L. Pascoe said there is a good chance that all 10 recent burglaries in an eight-block-square area in the southern portion of that village may be linked to Nemoff. Reportedly, Nemoff acted alone on Nov. 3 and Nov. 9 when homes in the areas bounded by Elmhurst Road, Golf Road, Emerson Street and Hiawatha Trail were burglarized. He was charged with committing a burglary on each of those two nights plus a third one that occurred Sept. 17.

Elk Grove Village police would say only that they knew the names of the four suspects prior to the search of Nemoff's apartment. But other police sources said that one of the four had been questioned by Elk Grove Village police in connection with one burglary. The suspect then reportedly told police about the other three.

ACCORDING TO Elk Grove Village police, Nemoff cannot be traced to any of the other burglaries, except that they were using his apartment to store the stolen items.

When Elk Grove Village and Des Plaines police arrived at the apartment Friday, they reportedly found jewelry, stereo equipment, televisions, marijuana, four lawn statues and 16 $50 savings bonds. Most of these items have yet to be identified by their owners.

Nemoff is to appear in Niles court this morning. He remains in the house of corrections with bond totaling $55,000 set for him.

Hickey is free on $2,000 bond. Devine is out on $1,000 bond, and the juvenile was released to his parents. A court date of Feb. 14 has been set on the Elk Grove Village charges. Mount Prospect police expect a court date to be set this morning on charges they filed.

Woman Charged In Fray With Husband, Friend

Ruby Lee Svendsen, 43, Northfield, was charged with aggravated battery Sunday after she allegedly fired two shots at her husband, Robert, missing both times, then struck her husband and a woman, with the gun handle.

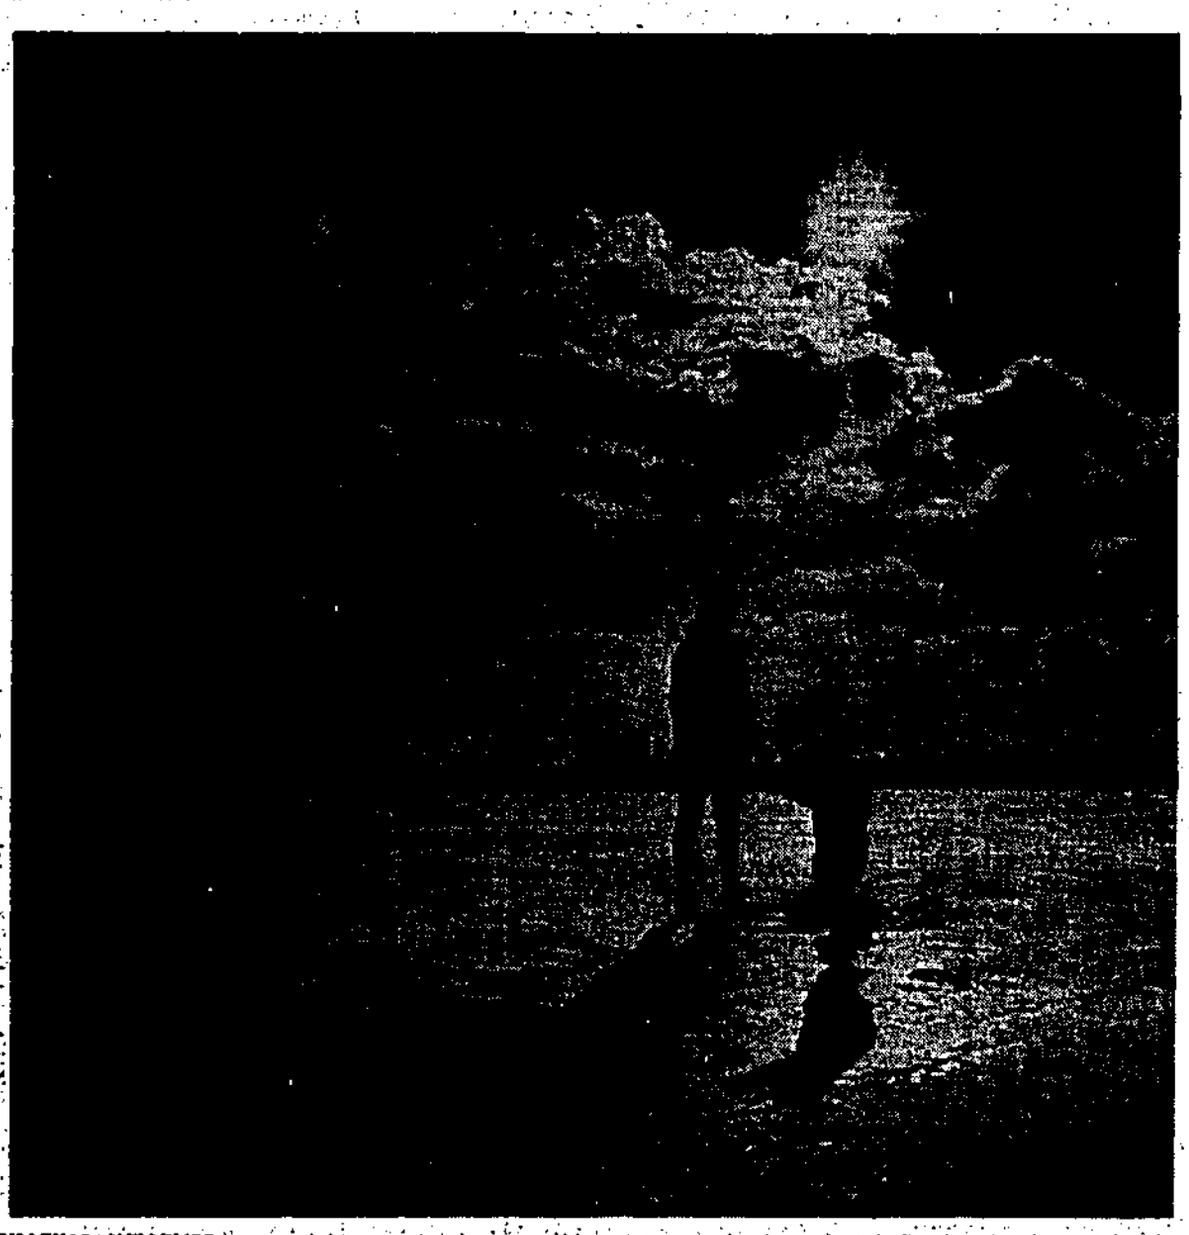

The incident occurred early Sunday morning at a quadroplex unit in the 800 block of Wellington Avenue, Elk Grove Village.

Police said Mrs. Svendsen reportedly followed her husband to the injured woman's Elk Grove Village residence. According to authorities, an argument ensued between Mrs. Svendsen and her husband.

Mrs. Svendsen allegedly drew an automatic pistol and fired two shots at her husband, missing both times. Reportedly, she then struck her husband and the woman with the handle of the pistol.

The woman occupant of the residence was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in the village where she was treated for cuts of the head and abrasions of the finger and released. Svendsen was not treated.

Mrs. Svendsen was released on $5,000 bond and was scheduled to appear Jan. 31 in the Elk Grove Village branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Trustee Vanderweel First To File

Elk Grove Village Trustee Nanci Vanderweel turned in the first petition yesterday, followed by candidates Melvin Bytnar and Trustee George Spees as filing opened for the April 17 village board elections. All three are seeking four-year trustee terms.

Although he has not filed, Trustee Ted Staddler announced yesterday he would run for a four-year term instead of a two-year term as previously announced. He said he picked up new petitions to be signed Saturday.

Candidates have until Feb. 12 to pick up and return petitions. They must collect between 155 and 247 signatures of eligible voters in the village to be placed on the ballot.

This year village board offices up for election are president, clerk, one 2-year trustee term and three 4-year trustee terms.

MRS. VANDERWEEL, 215 Fleetwood Ln., and George Spees, 140 Crest Ave. won two-year trustee terms in the village elections in 1970. Bytnar, 236 Wellington Ave., announced his candidacy in December.

All three are running as independents.

Mrs. Vanderweel has said the program she was most proud to be associated with during the last two years was the community blood donor plan approved by the village board in November.

Spees is serving as the trustee's representative to the Community Service board of directors. He has said he takes particular pride in the maturing of a mental health program under the board's direction.

Bytnar said the village needs to define its five, 10 and 20-year goals clearly for good long-range planning. He said this includes planning for the expansion and improvement of village services.

Walker To Set Conference On Watershed

A meeting to discuss the Upper Salt Creek Watershed program will be arranged between members of Gov. Daniel Walker's staff and Tom Hamilton, chairman of the watershed steering committee.

No date has been set for the meeting. Hamilton said Walker staff members agreed to the meeting when Hamilton offered to explain the plans for flood control on the Salt Creek.

Hamilton made the offer after Norton Kay, Walker's press aide, said Walker had made no definite plans because the new governor was not familiar with work that had been done.

KAY SAID the governor planned to move as quickly as possible on the program.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a multi-million dollar plan to build a series of flood controls across the creek. Included is a floodwater retention basin in Ned Brown Forest Preserve, in unincorporated Elk Grove Township that would create a lake of several hundred acres.

The initial watershed plan was a $26.5 million program that would be financed through federal, state and local government funds. The plan is now in Washington, being reviewed by various federal agencies.

In September, former governor Richard Ogilvie announced that the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and start work immediately.

THE U.S. Soil Conservation Service approved the state's action after a seris of meetings last year among the conservation service and various state and local agencies.

The conservation service is the agency through which any federal funds would be administered.

At a meeting Friday of the conservation service and state agencies, the possibility of either a water-retention structure or a widening of Salt Creek in the vicinity of Wood Dale was discussed.

Hamilton said state officials want to widen the creek at a cost of $12 million. The state officials thought the widening was better than building a retention structure at a cost of $15 million.

WIDENING would provide sufficient flood control for the type of storm that could be expected to occur only once in 10 years.

But Hamilton said there were other

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Adams told the Herald he was driving northbound on Mount Prospect Road south of the Chicago & North Western Railway outer belt tracks when he saw McCalvin walking on the railroad tracks.

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

Blood Reserve Reported Dwindling

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usually considered a blood supply area .He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking donors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

Two Charged With Aggravated Assault

Mark Arnold Tyler, 21, and Richard Hinckley, 19, both of Addison, were charged with aggravated assault Sunday after they allegedly stopped alongside a car driven by an 18-year-old Elk Grove Village woman and attempted to force her to the side of the road with a gun.

Police said the woman ran through a red light and notified authorities. The pair was apprehended by Elmhurst police at Ill. Rte. 83 and North Avenue.

Tyler also was charged with reckless conduct.

points to consider about the retention structure in addition to the cost:

—The structure would have the capacity to handle flood waters that would result from a storm expected to occur only once in 100 years.

—There would be recreational advantages resulting from a retention structure.

—Federal funds would be available for retention structure work, there would be no federal funds for widening the creek.

INTRODUCING A COIN PHONE YOU CAN USE WHEN YOU DON'T HAVE ANY COIN.

Have you ever tried to make a call from a coin phone and not had the right change? Or deposited your money only to find the phone wasn't working?

You won't have these problems with Dial Tone First service now being introduced at Elk Grove Village coin phones.

Because Dial Tone First means just what it says.

When you pick up the receiver, you get a dial tone first—before you deposit your dime or nickels. And that means two things.

1. When you hear the dial tone, you know the phone is working. Then you can deposit your money and make your call.

2. If you don't have change, you can dial the Operator, who will place a local call for you. The Operator will dial the number and make the call "collect." Or you can arrange to charge the call to your home phone or credit card. (The charge for the call will be more, however, because the call was placed for you.)

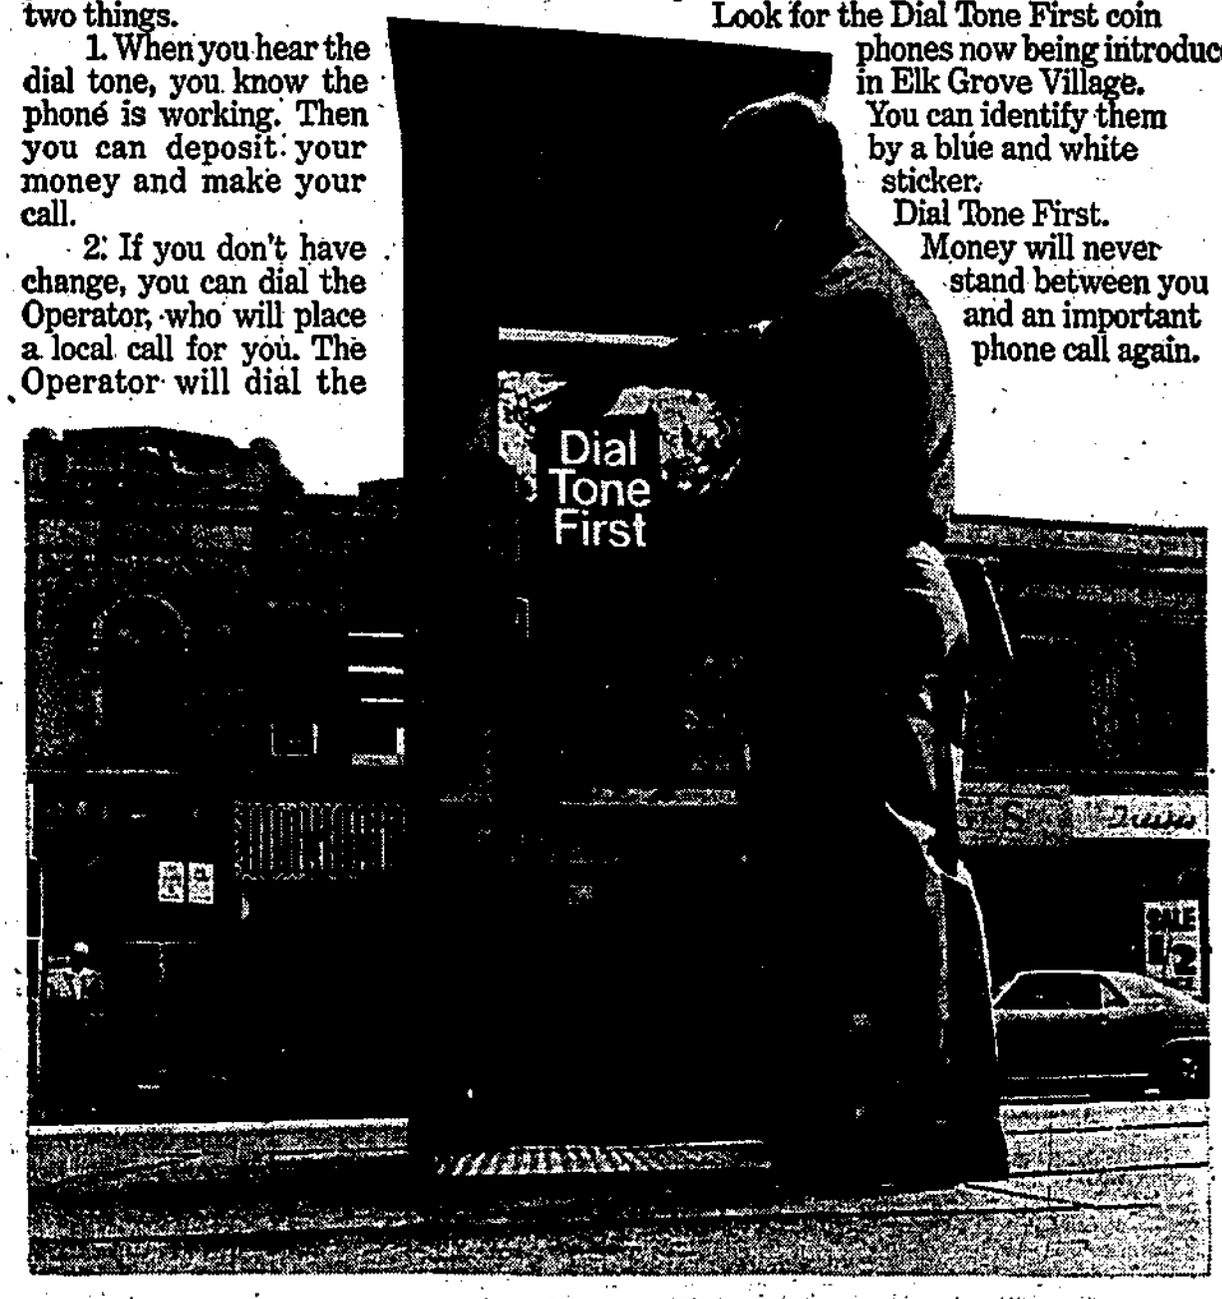

And if you're caught in an emergency without change, the Operator will dial the police or fire department number for you —without charge.

With Dial Tone First you still place your Long Distance calls as usual. But now, you won't need a dime to reach the Operator.

Look for the Dial Tone First coin phones now being introduced in Elk Grove Village. You can identify them by a blue and white sticker.

Dial Tone First.

DIAL TONE FIRST HAS STARTED IN ELK GROVE VILLAGE.

Oil Shortage, 1973 'Gas Eaters' Blamed

Gasoline Price Predicted To Reach 50 Cents Per Gallon

Gasoline retailers in the Chicago metropolitan area have woeful news for motorists, especially those driving late-model gas eaters. They predict prices for regular gasoline will climb to 50 cents a gallon, if not within the next few months then at least by year-end.

Although these dealer representatives agree with oil industry experts that the shortage of all petroleum products is becoming more severe, in the Midwest, the prediction of higher pump prices is not universal. Expecting 50 cents for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney," the oil industry people contend. They add that Phase II regulations will keep the lid on prices.

"I believe Chicago area motorists will be paying 50 cents a gallon for (regular) gasoline in the next 30 to 90 days," said Robert Jacobs, executive director of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association. "But the retailer has never had anything to say about the price of his gasoline."

A SHORTAGE of supply is causing the pressure for higher pump prices, according to Jacobs. "We've had some dealers run out of supplies," he said. The association asks its dealers to call in for help if they are cut off by their jobber (supplier)

As of this week the dealer group is able to gain partial supplies for dealers cut off by their suppliers. Jacobs believes the critical period within the Chicago metropolitan area will occur within four to six weeks, however, as the shortage in gas becomes more widespread.

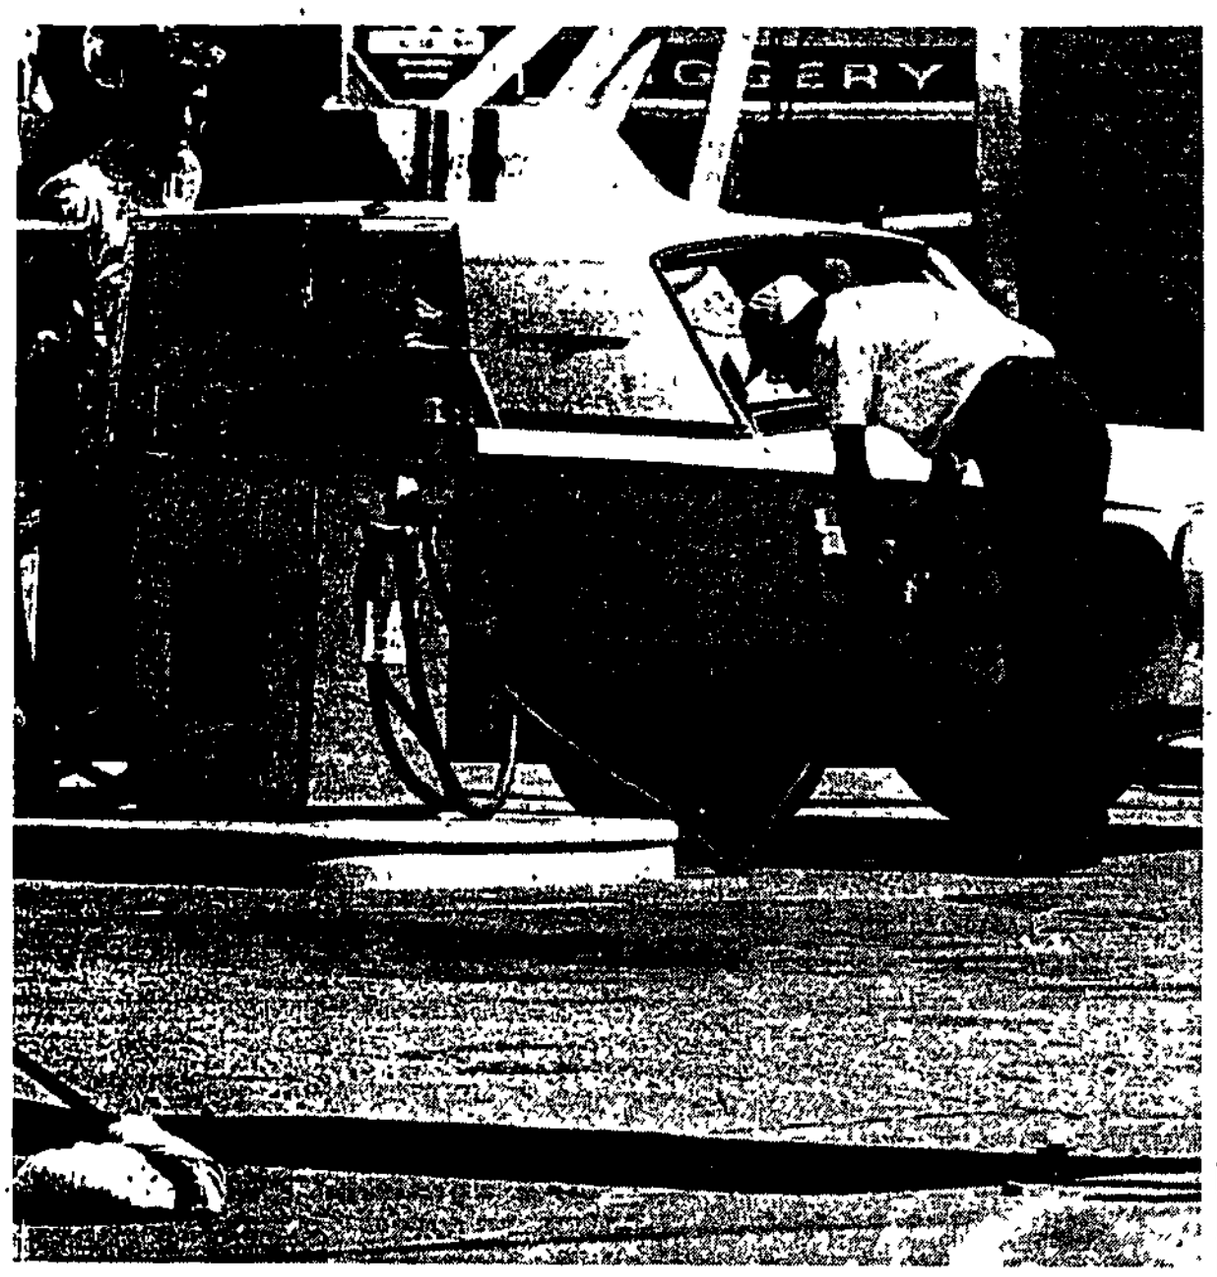

"It's the same crisis as in the heating oil business" he continued. "Since fuel oil is in critically short supply, the refineries are turning out added supplies of heating oil and in turn producing less gasoline

"We have no control over our destiny when it comes to prices. No matter what price they pay, motorists should be grateful for the supply," he added.

JACOBS SAID new autos generally get less mileage per gallon as a result of pollution control systems added on late models. This is increasing gasoline consumption at a period when the supply is short.

E. G. Albano, executive officer of the Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago, seconds the prediction that prices will rise significantly as a result of tight supply. Pump prices finally made it up to "normal" levels, he said, at 40 9 cents a gallon for regular gasoline in many areas.

This follows a continuing series of price wars in which pump prices were slashed below this level. "But by the end of the year we could see a price of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline," Albano said.

THE COST OF DRIVING may take an upward turn if the price of regular gasoline jumps to 50 cents a gallon, as predicted by retailer groups. Current supply shortages and heavy demand are the reasons.

Major oil companies supply their own dealers first, leaving independent gasoline dealers out in the cold during a supply shortage, according to Albano. He said there are many area independents who have been cut off by their regular suppliers. Some independents shut down on weekends because of the pinch. Albano sees the supply shortage as a move by major oil companies to squeeze out independent dealers.

Most oil industry experts are waiting to solve the heating (number two) oil problem before they consider a way out of the less serious gasoline shortage, counters Herbert Hugo. He is Midwest bureau chief for Platt's Oilgram, a daily petroleum industry publication. And the prediction of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney" he added, as Phase II controls would not allow for this increase.

TURNING TO THE fuel oil problem, he said, "Every 24-hour period the fuel oil picture gets worse. It has reached a serious crisis stage. It was only a minor crisis a month ago. As of this morning, for example," Hugo said Monday, "some area major oil company distributors are notifying their customers that they are being put on allocation basis

"This is when it begins hitting John Q. Public," Hugo continued. "When he starts getting more concerned is when he calls up and asks for 400 gallons of oil and only gets 200 gallons."

The heating oil shortage is moving closer to home, he said. About 25 schools in Rockford, and two hospitals are among those affected by a Kelley-Williamson Oil Co. announcement last Thursday that it has exhausted its supply of heating oil for many Rockford area customers.

Fuel oil price relief is needed to assist in gaining added supplies said Hugo. Previous attempts to raise fuel oil prices have been denied by the Price Commission. This could in turn take the pressure off gasoline supplies, he said. If the petroleum industry is not able to increase the output of gasoline supplies, Hugo predicts a severe crisis could develop within two to three months.

WAYNE PARTHUN, managing director of the Oil Heat Marketers Association in Chicago, also noted the heating oil shortage and gasoline shortage, but said there is no definite indication that prices in either market will rise significantly in the near future.

"We don't talk of a shortage. We talk of a tight situation," said Parthun. "From a canvass of our own members we find there is an adequate supply. We don't foresee any shortage in the near future."

Fuel oil supplies at the beginning of the current heating season were at least as good as the previous year, he said. But a combination of cold weather and increased demand has created a shortage. Since the heating season began last September, the Chicago area has experienced 48 per cent colder weather than the previous season, in terms of degree days. Degree days are a measure of the difference between the actual recorded temperature and an average temperature

Heavier demand for fuel oil results from the large numbers of industrial and other large users being cut off by the natural gas companies, Parthun continued, in addition to users making the transition from coal to oil as an energy supply for environmental reasons. No major allocations of heating oil are being cut off in the Chicago metropolitan area yet, he said.

6-Man, 6-Woman Kerner Jury Picked

A jury of six men and six women has been chosen to hear the racetrack bribery trial of former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner and his longtime friend, Theodore Isaacs.

The jury will consist of:

Louis B. Kenney, Chicago, an airport operations engineer; Mrs. Mattie L. Parker, Chicago; Donald Rogan, Aurora, a machinist; James Robinson, Chicago, a lift truck operator; Mrs. Bernice Geister, Palos Heights, housewife; Delbert McKinney, Aurora, a brake operator, and Richard J. O'Brien, Chicago, a printer.

THE 12 were elected from 31 persons who had been chosen tentatively last week. Defense and prosecution attorneys exercised their right to dismiss 18 of the 31, leaving 13 eligible.

The 13th person, Mrs. Estelle Filipiak, Chicago, a widow, is eligible to become an alternate juror.

KERNER, 61, a U.S. Appeals Court judge on leave of absence, and Isaacs, 62, who served as state revenue director under Kerner, were indicted in December, 1971. They are charged with bribery, conspiracy, mail fraud and income tax evasion for allegedly accepting racetrack stock at bargain prices and giving certain racetracks favored treatment in return during Kerner's seven years as governor.

The first three days of trial proceedings were used to interview more than 60 prospective jurors.

The panel of 31 tentatively chosen included 20 men and 11 women, most of them from Chicago and its suburbs and a few from Joliet, Aurora and Waukegan.

Most were middle-aged blue collar workers and few have more than a high school education.

Many were dismayed when they found they would be locked up for the duration of the trial, which was expected to last six to eight weeks.

"I'd be a bundle of nerves," one truck driver told the judge. "I would get frustrated and nervous."

HE WAS DISMISSED as was a woman who protested that her husband could not possibly do without her for that long.

"Who would make his coffee?" she asked.

The Riverdale brick mason who was selected as a juror, summed up the feelings expressed by most of those chosen.

"Basically, I don't think anyone wants to be away from his family for that long," he said. "But someone has to do it and I would be willing to."

Laird Estimates '73 Draft At 5,500; Smallest Yet

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Sec. Melvin R. Laird estimated no more than 5,500 men will be drafted this year—only one tenth as many as last year and the smallest number drafted in any year when there has been conscription.

The draft authority expires June 30 and Laird has already said there will be no calls in January or February. He told the House Armed Services Committee the March draft call would be less than 2,500 and that in April, May and June — the last three months of the draft — "no more than an average of 1,000 men per month will be needed."

Laird volunteered the information in his final report to Congress. He will leave the government in 12 days and will be replaced as defense secretary by Elliot L. Richardson. He devoted only seven pages in his 104-page report to the subject of Vietnam, declaring that Vietnamization "is virtually completed." He did not elaborate.

"BECAUSE OF the sensitivity of the negotiations, I will refrain from any further comment on this matter or any other matter which could impact on the negotiations," Laird said.

Laird did not mention the bombing campaign against North Vietnam.

During all the years of the draft — during the Civil War, World War I, Word War II, and continuously since 1948 — the fewest number of men ever called was 14,036 in 1949, in a year in which calls were issued for only a single month.

In his report Laird raised doubts that a draft-free military was possible in the long run.

"All of us must recognize that we are breaking new ground and that no one at this point can guarantee absolutely that the United States will be able to maintain an all-volunteer force for the indefinite future," he said.

Laird made but two new proposals. He asked Congress to provide funds for co-ed facilities at the service academies to allow the enrolling of women. And he proposed that the entire budget system be revamped because the current system of funding defense one year at a time has been "unsatisfactory." He said authorizations should be made "in terms of programs," for instance providing for the building of a fleet of bombers over a period of a decade instead of funding the program year by year.

Midland College Vocal Group To Perform

The Midland College "Clef Dwellers," a swing vocal music group, will perform at 7 p.m. tomorrow at Hersey High School in Arlington Heights.

The program is being presented by the Hersey High School chapter of the American Field Service (AFS) as a community service.

The program will feature rock, pop, folk and gospel music. Members of the "Clef Dwellers," all students at Midland Lutheran College in Fremont, Neb., will perform at high schools and churches in the Chicago area through January. The group included 17 singer-dancers, a 12-member orchestra and a choreographer-dancer.

Walker Inaugurated, Promises 'People Government'

by BOB LAIIEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

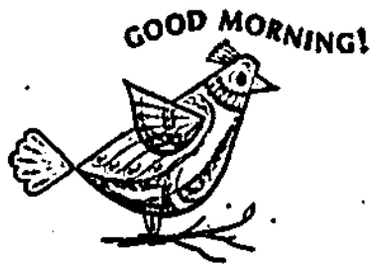

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Formerly Headed Zoning Board

Cargill Admits Owning Lots Rezoned For Apartments

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Douglas Cargill, former chairman of the Wheeling Zoning Board of Appeals, has admitted in a sworn deposition he is the owner of 47 lots the village board rezoned for apartments in the West Strong Street area of Wheeling.

The deposition quotes Cargill as admitting, Dec. 14, 1972, that he owned all 47 of the lots rezoned for apartments which are the subject of a Cook County Circuit Court battle between the village and West Strong Street area homeowners.

The deposition, taken under oath and notarized, and filed with the court clerk Jan. 4, is a part of the file in the suit which is scheduled to come to trial later this week.

The statements attributed to Cargill in the notarized deposition were made over objections of attorney Jack Siegel, representing the Village of Wheeling in the lawsuit.

Cargill's possible ownership of one or more of the rezoned lots has been a point of contention in the rezoning ever since the zoning board of appeals hearing in March 1972 when the property was first considered for rezoning.

THE LAND is owned in a bank trust held by the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank, however, so the actual ownership of the property previously was not made public.

Cargill did not attend the zoning board hearing at which the apartment rezoning was recommended when asked, at that time, by the Herald if he owned the property, Cargill refused to comment.

In the deposition on file with the court clerk, Cargill testified he was a 40-year resident of Wheeling and said he served on the Wheeling Zoning Board of Appeals from 1950 until April 1972.

Siegel is quoted in the deposition as objecting to a question about Cargill's education in zoning matters, saying that Cargill did not participate in the rezoning of the 47 Strong Street lots.

The attorney representing the village also objected to a question of whether Cargill owned any of the lots, saying the information was not "relevant and material" to the suit, which seeks to have the apartment zoning on the 47 lots rescinded.

When asked, during the deposition, "How many lots do you own?" (in the Strong Street area) Cargill answered, "Forty-seven."

THE QUESTIONING in the deposition establishes the lots are the same ones rezoned for the apartment project by the Wheeling Village Board last year.

Under oath Cargill said he bought the lots over a period of years, beginning in 1955 and ending within the last year or two.

Cargill was subpoenaed to make the deposition by John M. Burke, attorney representing the homeowners in the suit, who have objected to the rezoning on the grounds the apartment building lots are interspersed among single-family homes in the sparsely developed neighborhood.

Attorneys representing developer Victor Smigel, the contract purchaser of the 47 lots, have contended the property long had remained vacant and could not economically be developed with single-family homes.

Village board members, when approving the rezoning, said the project would bring water and sewer lines to the subdivision as one benefit of the rezoning.

THE CASE originally was scheduled to come to trial before Judge Robert Downing yesterday. But shortly after noon, Downing told the attorneys in the case that three other trials had been scheduled for this week in his courtroom. The judge set no definite date for the trial, but said he expected it could begin Thursday or Friday.

Siegel yesterday told the judge Cargill had been harassed and said Mrs. Cargill was "nervous." He asked Judge Downing to "take steps to see he. (Cargill) is not harassed."

Judge Downing said he, "would hope there would be no further harassment" of Cargill and Burke said he would instruct his clients, the 42 residents who own property near the 47 rezoned lots, not to harass Cargill, although he said he knew of no harassment.

Cargill declined to comment when a Herald reporter questioned him about

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usually considered a blood supply area. He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year

DESPITE EFFORTS by blood banks to establish community donor organizations, the Northwest suburban blood supply is dwindling, although the situation is not yet as critical as in metropolitan Chicago. Some officials blame the shortage on new laws prohibiting use of purchased blood.

Youth Dies As 'Prank' Backfires

What started out as a prank turned into death for a 15-year-old Wheeling youth Sunday morning, according to Wheeling police.

William Ivie, 833 E. Colonial Dr., was found dead after he apparently accidentally hanged himself with a belt on a closet door at his home, police said.

A Cook County Coroner's jury ruled yesterday that the death was accidental. They ruled after hearing testimony that the youth liked to pull pranks on his younger brother, and this started out as one such prank.

Police said the Wheeling High School sophomore was in a good mood when he told his father, James Ivie, that he was going to clean his room. About 10 minutes later the father heard a noise, but assumed it was his son moving furniture while cleaning, said police.

Officials said the youth's younger brother thought William was playing another prank and did not bother to answer a call for help. Police said that by the time the youth was found he was unconscious. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

The Ivies moved to Wheeling one year ago from Athens, Ga., where the youth will be buried Friday.

Church Will Show Billy Graham Show

Fireplace Fire Blamed For $1,000 Home Blaze

An early-morning fire Sunday in Prospect Heights caused about $1,000 damage to the home of Bill Williams, 400 Kewanee Ct. Prospect Heights Fire Chief Donald Gould said the fire was caused by a faulty fireplace. Firemen were called to the home shortly after 3 a.m. after members of the Williams family smelled smoke. No one was injured.

Murderer Caught In Des Plaines After Fleeing Prison

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Walter McCalvin

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

Residents Buying Flood Insurance

by NANCY COWGER

Residents of the Northwest suburbs are beginning to take advantage of federally subsidized flood insurance, although sales still are low.

James Reichardt, of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs, directing the program, said "there has been root growth" in the program's use. Purchases of the policy are "really beginning to pick up," he added.

Under the federal subsidy, a homeowner can purchase up to $17,500 of home coverage for between $60 and $70, said Charles Brazelton, an agent for State Farm Fire and Casualty Co., service representative for this area. Without federal subsidies, said Reichardt, the insurance would cost 10 times that much, since the subsidy is 90 per cent of the premium cost.

More important, said Reichardt, is the fact flood insurance cannot be legally refused in an area approved for the federal program. Homeowners with an experience of flooding three or four times a year likely could not find a company willing to sell them flood insurance, without the federal subsidies, said Reichardt. With them, the homeowner can purchase the insurance and collect on claims every time he is flooded.

The program also provides for up to $5,000 insurance on the contents of a home, and this provision is available to home or apartment renters, as well as to homeowners, said Brazelton.

ALTHOUGH THE insurance is available in most Northwest suburban communities, a few still have not applied. Rolling Meadows, Inverness, the Barrington communities, Streamwood and Bartlett do not yet participate. Also, while Cook County has applied for acceptance in the program, it has not yet been approved, said Reichardt. The county application was incomplete, and county officials still must complete "a couple of the necessary steps," he said. Until the county is approved, residents of unincorporated areas cannot purchase the insurance at subsidized rates.

Noting "it takes a while for something like this to get off the ground," Reichardt said he was "not discouraged" by the number of policies which have been purchased. "The most important thing at this point in an eligible community is it's just a matter of the individual homeowner deciding whether to buy it. It's an individual people decision — the local governments have taken the necessary steps. They've taken the action necessary to make it available to the people," Reichardt said.

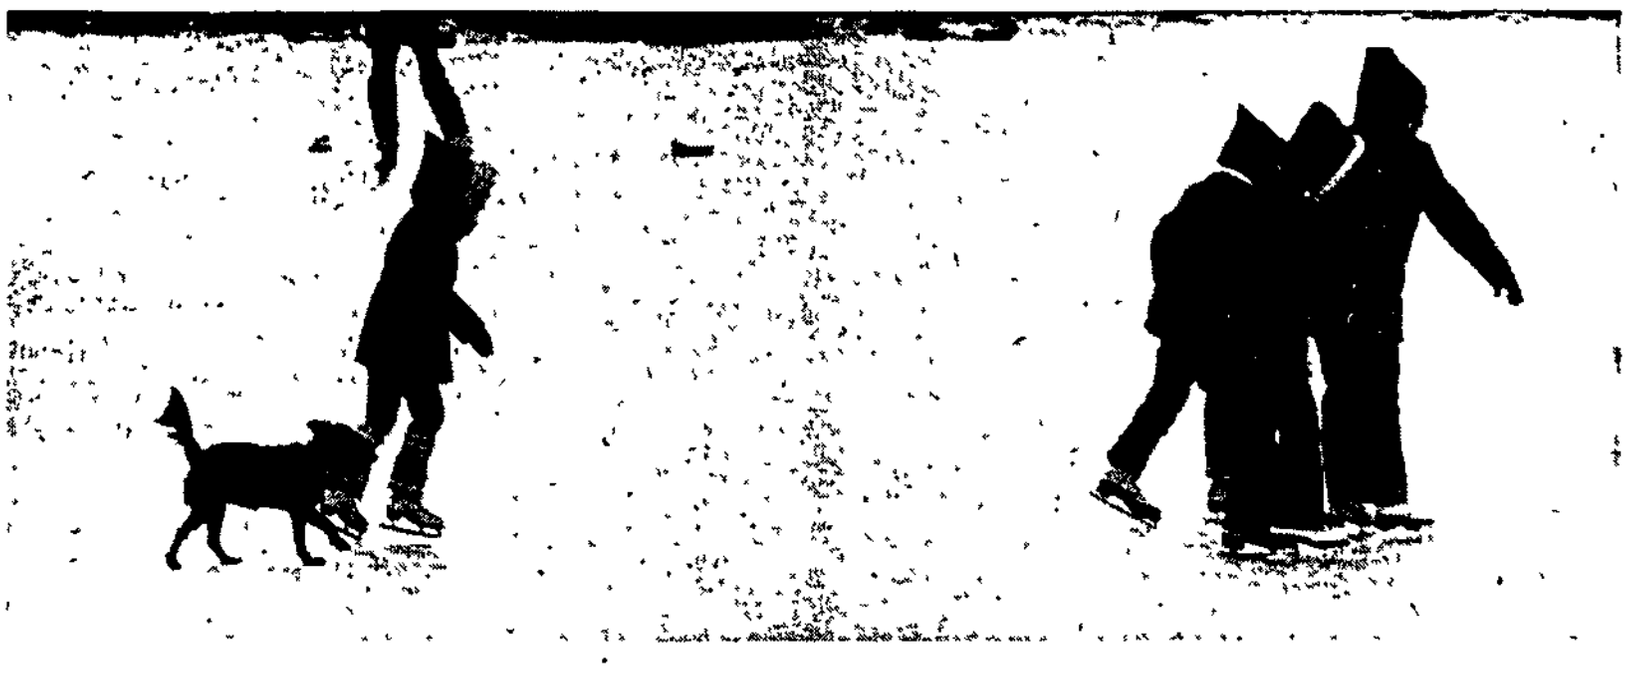

A homeowner may purchase the insurance anytime after the community has been approved for the subsidy, as long as the community renews its eligibility each year, Reichardt said. Brazelton pointed out persons buying within the first 30 days after a community is approved can receive immediate coverage. After the 30 days, there is a 15-day waiting period between receipt of the policy and the time coverage starts, he said. The only community in the area approved less than 30 days ago is Wheeling, which officially qualified as of Dec. 15.

IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, the first community in the area to qualify, 107 policies had been sold as of Dec. 1, 1972, Brazelton said. Arlington Heights homeowners became eligible to purchase the policies in January, 1972.

Also as of last Dec. 1, Palatine residents had purchased 34 policies, Mount Prospect residents had purchased seven, Des Plaines homeowners had bought four, Schaumburg residents had purchased three and Elk Grove Village residents had bought two policies.

In Hoffman Estates and Buffalo Grove, no policies had been purchased, although residents were eligible to buy them.

Brazelton said sales the month previously had been considerably lower, and estimated totals might be twice as high as of today. He also pointed out Wheeling residents were listed as not having purchased any policies, although they were not eligible until two weeks after his latest statistical breakdown.

Police Will Inaugurate Central Radio Dispatch

by DAVID MAHSMAN

Three area police departments will inaugurate the use of central radio dispatch this week the culmination of an idea that was originated nearly four years ago.

Under central dispatch, one radio room — located in Arlington Heights — will be used to take calls and dispatch police for Arlington Heights, Elk Grove and Mount Prospect. And there are hopes that Buffalo Grove may soon get in on the action.

When central dispatch goes into operation, residents of the member municipalities will still dial the same telephone number as always to reach their police departments. But the call will be picked up at central dispatch in Arlington Heights, and police on the caller's beat will be radioed from there.

FOR THE PAST four months, 12 radio operators have been studying the beat structures in the three municipalities, readying themselves for the start of the central dispatch program.

The idea for a central dispatch program in this area was originated in 1969 by Police Chiefs L. W. Calderwood, Arlington Heights; Harry Jenkins, Elk Grove Village; and Cy Campbell, then chief in Rolling Meadows.

The three thought there was a need for improved radio communication in this area, said Capt. Maury English, Arlington Heights police. Radio frequencies alloted to police departments by the FCC had become too crowded, causing separate police radio dispatchers to interfere with communications of other departments, English said.

The chiefs examined studies made of radio frequency allocations in the Chicago area and had another study made by the Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT) to determine if central dispatch would be feasible here, English said.

Some problems came up. IIT surveyed seven or eight area police departments, but most said they didn't want in on the program. They just didn't see the benefit, English said. And about the same time Lewis Case replaced Campbell as Rolling Meadows police chief, that city got new radio equipment of its own. Rolling Meadows was out.

BUT MOUNT PROSPECT was looking at a new radio system and expressed interest in the central dispatch idea, English said. Officials there took a trip to Muskegon, Mich., a city that is part of central dispatch program. Mount Prospect officials were impressed, just as had been those in Arlington Heights and Elk Grove Village, English said.

Some 18 months after the first meeting on central dispatch had taken place, the three communities decided to seek federal funding of a central dispatch project. Seven months later, the application was approved and the grant came through the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (ILEC).

The grant is for some $700,000 and includes funds for equipment and operation of the system. Member municipalities provide in-kind services — planning, setting up, operators and training, English said.

In December, 1971, bids were let for the equipment and engineering studies were begun, English said. It was hoped that central dispatch would become a reality in this area by last August, but FCC frequency changes, a need to test for the best location of the radio room and late equipment delivery stalled implementation.

Central dispatch was supposed to start last week, but last-minute problems with the antenna caused another delay. But English said that all that is needed is antenna adjustment so that all areas in the central dispatch project will be covered. He said barring any further problems, the system will be operational later this week.

ENGLISH SAID he sees many benefits in the new system over the old.

Each police officer will carry a personal radio with him at all times, so that he can be reached wherever he may be. English said this system has proved elsewhere to aid apprehension of suspects in crime and to get help faster for an officer in trouble.

Central dispatch should reduce the amount of radio traffic, as well, he said. He explained that this is important so that radio transmission isn't blocked by other departments, causing lost time in dispatching police.

English said the member departments will save money "in the long run." They were looking at updating their equipment anyway, and the number of radio operators will be reduced. Currently, Arlington Heights uses eight operators, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village each use five, for a total of 18 operators. Central dispatch uses 12 operators, and are paid by the member municipalities based on population.

English said the cost per municipality would be reduced even more if other area municipalities would come into the system. He said at least one more community could be handled by central dispatch without increasing the number of dispatchers.

Buffalo Grove police are already looking favorably on getting in on central dispatch. Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh was a lieutenant with the Elk Grove Village Police Department during the initial stages of the idea, and was in on planning the central dispatch system.

"Central dispatch is a very imaginative idea," Walsh said. "I think we're a progressive enough department to get in on the ground floor."

Luxury Complex To Be Discussed

The Buffalo Grove Plan Commission tomorrow will discuss plans for the first phase of the luxury residential complex proposed by the James Otis Development Co of Northbrook.

The project, located in the northwest corner of the village, next to Long Grove, is designed to include 648 units. Townhouses, apartments and cluster or duplex homes are planned.

Wednesday, Otis is expected to submit his proposal for the construction of 108 two and three-bedroom townhouses. This is the first stage of what probably will be a four-year project.

In support of a citizen-initiated moratorium on annexation and building, the plan commission two months ago deferred approval of Otis' plans until the proposed village master plan was completed. The agency last week approved a plan that will now go to the village board for a public hearing before it is adopted.

Village Engineer Arnold Seaberg said Otis hopes to begin construction in the spring, pending approval of his plans by the plan commission, appearance commission and the village board.

Seaberg said he does not anticipate any problems with the Otis layout.

"I haven't gone over the engineering yet, but there doesn't seem to be any drastic change from the original concept of the project that we saw in the preliminary plans," he said.

Blood Supply Here Dwindling

holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking donors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

Paper Drive Slated

The VFW Auxiliary will conduct its annual paper drive Jan. 12-15 to raise funds for its community activities.

The auxiliary has set up a drop-off box in the parking lot of the Sears Outlet Store at Dundee Road and Rte. 83. Papers being left at the site should be tied and bundled.

'Progress' Party Wins Top Ballot Spot

The To Over-all Progress Party (TOP) won first place on the ballot in the upcoming village elections by being the first to file nominating petitions with the village clerk.

The TOP party filed its petitions at 8 a.m. Monday, six minutes ahead of the Wheeling Independent Party (WHIP). Monday was the first day to file petitions for the April 17 election.

There were approximately 640 signatures on the WHIP petitions and 747 on the TOP petitions. The parties each needed only 108 signatures to be placed on the ballot. This figure is 5 per cent of the number of voters in the last village election.

The petitions are now open for public inspection at the Wheeling Village Hall. Objections to the petitions will be accepted for five days following the last filing date, Feb. 12.

Challenges can be filed with the village clerk and will be reviewed by a special electoral board. Objections can be filed on any irregularity in the filing procedure, the gathering of petitions or in the signatures themselves.

FILING FOR THE WHIP party was candidate for village clerk, Marlene Bokina. She was accompanied by WHIP members Ida V. O'Reilley and Micki Pilt, and candidate for trustee, Constance Heitkotter. Other candidates on the WHIP slate are Otis "Skip" Hedlund for village president and Harold Fagan and Don Jackson for trustees.

Village Clerk Evelyn Diens filed for the TOP party. She was accompanied by trustees Bill Hein and Al Lang, both candidates, and Dick Missing, who is running for the trustee position now held by Michael Valenza. Also on the TOP slate is Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon.

While there is more than a month left for candidates to file for a place on the ballot, Mrs. Diens said no one else has requested nominating petitions. She added, however, that petitions are available from any election supply company.

The WHIP and TOP parties are currently working on their campaign platforms. It is expected these platforms will be announced later this month.

by BOB LAHEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Only Trustee Driscoll Secures Petition Forms

Village Election Campaign Under Way; Filing Begins

Yesterday was the first day for filing petitions of candidacy in the April 17 Buffalo Grove municipal election, but no one has filed. Trustee Jerry Driscoll is the only person who has even picked up the forms in the village clerk's office.

Driscoll said Monday that he probably will file the petitions. Village trustees Tom Mahoney and Ed Fabish also are up for reelection.

Mahoney told the Herald Monday that he has not yet decided if he will seek another term. Fabish was not available for comment.

Village Clerk Verna Clayton said the delay in filing may not be too unusual. She said candidates were also slow to submit their petitions for the election two years ago. She suggested that perhaps candidates have put off filing to shorten the length of their campaigns.

There is a definite advantage to candidates who file as soon as possible. Mrs. Clayton plans to set up the ballots with the candidates' names listed in order by the date they are filed. Slates of candidates will be named first on the ballot, with independent nominees following.

TO QUALIFY as a candidate, a person must be a registered voter who has lived in the community for at least one year by the time of the election. He must never have defaulted the village. (For example, failed to pay his taxes.)

Petitions are available in Mrs. Clayton's office in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., during business hours.

A slate petition is necessary for political parties planning to run a list of candidates. The signatures of 122 local registered voters are required. Persons running as independent candidates must file a petition with not less than 122 and no more than 192 signatures.

In addition to the petitions, each candidate must file a statement of economic interest, commonly known as an "ethics statement." Mrs. Clayton, in turn, will file the statements with the clerk of the county in which the candidate resides.

VILLAGE ATTY. Richard Rayse stressed the importance of returning the statements of economic interest, saying that should a candidate fail to submit the form, the validity of his candidacy could possibly be challenged.

Feb. 17 is the last day a candidate may withdraw from the race. It is also the last day that objections to certificates of nomination may be registered.

Monday also was the first day for filing petitions for the park district election, which will be conducted the same day as the race for village board.

According to park district secretary Joyce Johnson, no one had filed by mid-afternoon Monday, only two residents had picked up petitions.

THERE IS NO residency requirement for park board candidates. They must simply be registered voters in the community. The terms of Dede Armstrong and Rex Lewis will expire this year.

Mrs. Armstrong has not said definitely whether she plans to run again, and Lewis has not been available for comment.

The deadline for filing park board petitions is Jan. 15.

The forms may be submitted to Mrs. Johnson at the park district office, 150 Raupp Blvd. today between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., tomorrow, between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., Thursday, between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., Friday, between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. and Monday, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

On 'Who's Who' List

Six teachers in Prospect Heights Dist. 21 have been named Outstanding Elementary Teachers of America. Their names will appear in Who's Who Among American School Educators.

The teachers are Helen Armstrong, John Muir School; Jane Ellis, music teacher; Kathleen Kite, art teacher; Helen Leaf, Betsy Ross School; Judith Rosenberg and Bernice Spieker, both of Eisenhower School.

The teachers were nominated by principals and selected by a national committee.

DESPITE EFFORTS by blood banks to establish community donor organizations, the Northwest suburban blood supply is dwindling, although the situation is not yet as critical as in metropolitan Chicago. Some officials blame the shortage on new laws prohibiting use of purchased blood.

Blood Reserve Reported Dwindling

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usual ly considered a blood supply area .He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year

Youth Dies As 'Prank' Backfires

What started out as a prank turned into death for a 15-year-old Wheeling youth Sunday morning, according to Wheeling police.

William Ivie, 833 E. Colonial Dr., was found dead after he apparently accidentally hanged himself with a belt on a closet door at his home, police said.

A Cook County Coroner's jury ruled yesterday that the death was accidental. They ruled after hearing testimony that the youth liked to pull pranks on his younger brother, and this started out as one such prank.

Police said the Wheeling High School sophomore was in a good mood when he told his father, James Ivie, that he was going to clean his room. About 10 minutes later the father heard a noise, but assumed it was his son moving furniture while cleaning, said police.

Officials said the youth's younger brother thought William was playing another prank and did not bother to answer a call for help. Police said that by the time the youth was found he was unconscious. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

The Ivies moved to Wheeling one year ago from Athens, Ga., where the youth will be buried Friday.

Church Will Show Billy Graham Show

The Billy Graham film, "The Lost Generation," will be shown at 6 p.m. Sunday at the First Baptist Church, Elmhurst Road at Edward Street, Wheeling.

There is no admission charge for the show, described as a documentary investigating attitudes on dissent, violence, the mood of America and the answers that can be found by this generation.

Fireplace Fire Blamed For $1,000 Home Blaze

An early-morning fire Sunday in Prospect Heights caused about $1,000 damage to the home of Bill Williams, 400 Kewanee Ct. Prospect Heights Fire Chief Donald Gould said the fire was caused by a faulty fireplace. Firemen were called to the home shortly after 3 a.m. after members of the Williams family smelled smoke. No one was injured.

by BOB LAIIEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Blood Reserve Reported To Be Dwindling In Suburbs

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usually considered a blood supply area. He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking donors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

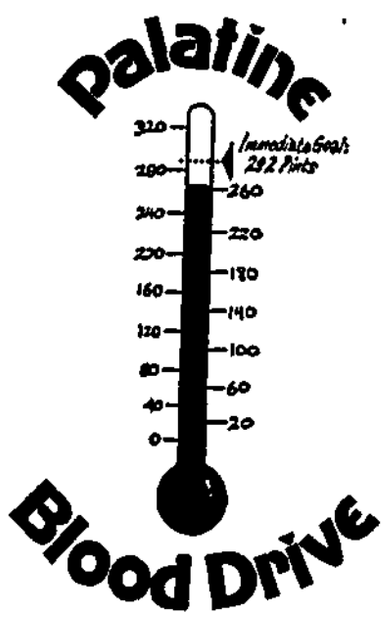

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

DESPITE EFFORTS by blood banks to establish community donor organizations, the Northwest suburban blood supply is dwindling, although the situation is not yet as critical as in metropolitan Chicago. Some officials blame the shortage on new laws prohibiting use of purchased blood.

27 Blood Donors Still Needed

Just 27 more volunteers are needed for the Palatine Health Department to reach its immediate goal of blood donors.

According to Wayne Browning, who is heading the village-wide blood drive, 265 Palatine residents have offered to donte a pint of blood each. A total of 292 donors is being sought for the first drawing Saturday.

Volunteers can call the health department, at 358-7555, between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to sign up for the blood drive. The deadline for volunteering is tomorrow.

Free babysitting will be provided Saturday for the children of donors.

Saturday's blood drawing will be the first of several in the village's attempt to obtain 1,200 units of blood.

THE FIGURE represents 4 per cent of the population of Palatine, and if it can be reached, all Palatine residents would be eligible to receive an unlimited supply of blood from the American Red Cross for one year.

If the drive is successful, it is likely to become an annual event.

In addition to Palatine residents, immediate family members living outside the household would be covered, including financially dependent children, grandparents and parents who are blood dependents.

Prospective donors must be between 18 and 65 years of age and in good health.

Of the 265 volunteers so far, 53 were recruited by Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 PTAs, 32 by the Very Interested Parents of Palatine High School students, 16 by the Palatine Rotary Club and 15 each by the Palatine League of Women Voters and Palatine Jaycees. Other donors came forward on their own initiative.

175-Room Holiday Inn For Village?

Preliminary plans are being made to build a 175-room Holiday Inn motel next to Uncle Andy's Cow Palace just northwest of Palatine.

John Bakos, owner of the Cow Palace, at Northwest Highway and Quentin Road in Palatine Township, confirmed yesterday that he is negotiating with Holiday Inns Inc. for a franchise.

The well-known Cow Palace restaurant would remain at the northeast corner of the intersection until a new restaurant, complete with banquet facilities and meeting space, is built in conjunction with the motel, according to Bakos.

The motel would front on Northwest Highway, with access on Quentin Road.

BAKOS, WHO HAS owned the Cow Palace and the two acres it occupies for five years, recently purchased the adjoining five acres from Jack Denzer for an undisclosed price.

Bakos said he is in the process of arranging financial backing from area banks, as well as negotiating with Holiday Inns Inc., which is based in Memphis, Tenn., for a franchise.

The motel chain often awards franchises to businessmen who build the Holiday Inn in accordance with the company's specifications.

Bakos, who has 10 years' experience in the motel business, said that if he is unable to obtain a Holiday Inn franchise, he would contact the Ramada Inn chain.

"I've gotten a good response so far," he said, "but before they give us a definite go-ahead, we'll have to submit specific plans."

BAKOS SAID the Northwest Highway-Quentin Road site was selected for the new motel because it's "the most convenient. We're already here (with the restaurant). And I think there's a need."

The nearest Holiday Inn to the site is in Rolling Meadows, a 196-room motel on Algonquin Road near Ill. Rte. 53.

Plans also are being considered for a Holiday Inn at Rte. 53 and U.S. 12 in Arlington Heights, but that site would not be developed until Rte. 53 is extended, in at least four years.

The only major motel in Palatine is the 197-room Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, at Northwest Highway and Rte. 53. It was opened in December, 1970.

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Adams told the Herald he was driving northbound on Mount Prospect Road south of the Chicago & North Western Railway outer belt tracks when he saw McCalvin walking on the railroad tracks.

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

School Board Asks Architect's Report

High School Dist. 211 Board of Education agreed informally Monday night to have the architect for Hoffman Estates High School make a presentation to show their capability for designing district high school number six.

The board decided to have Unteed and Associates make the presentation because the firm has undergone a reorganization since designing Hoffman Estates High School, the district's fifth higher education building.

The board wants to find out if Unteed can prepare a design for high school number six, which is to be built on a 60-acre site in Winston Park subdivision in Palatine, which will be both expandable and transferable for use for a seventh high school building.

Board Pres. Robert Creek told the members, meeting as a committee-of-the-whole on planning, that if the district commits itself to an architect for the sixth high school building, it is also committed for the seventh. The seventh high school will also be built on a 60-acre site.

MARVIN PLATE, the district's director of research and planning, told board members he has had a "good working relationship" with the Unteed firm.

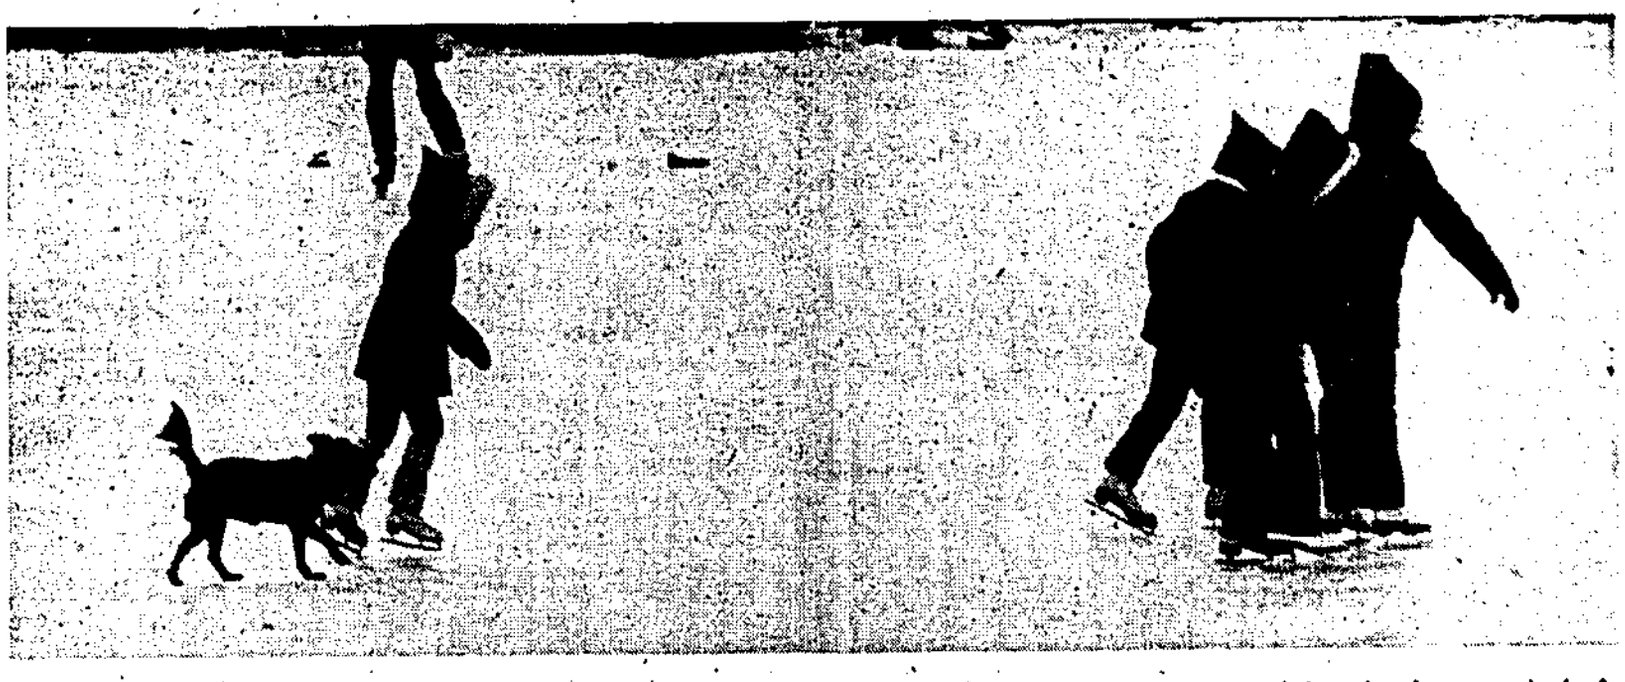

The board also briefly discussed the future of Palatine High School, the oldest building in the district. Creek said that over the next decade the building will need "extensible monies" for repairs, and that the building cannot be made any larger.

Creek suggested that the Palatine High School building be considered for use as a career education center, because it appears that districts 211 and 214 will never come to a joint agreement on such a facility.

Although the board had said last month it would also begin discussion of an addition to the administration building at 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Creek suggested that study be delayed until the board is further into the planning stages for the district's sixth high school.

SCHOOL SUPT. Richard Kolze did tell the board, however, that the administration building should be half again as large as it is now. He said there is a need for additional office space, one or two small conference areas and more washrooms.

Board Member Alexander Langsdorf added that he would like to see a storage area constructed that would not be under an office area, as is the case now. He said the current situation could be a fire hazard.

BUT BABY, IT'S COLD outside. But kids will be kids, and in spite of the weather or temperature, they will take to the ice and enjoy a little winter sport. Even the family pet joins in, and he is probably better prepared for the ice than are the kids. He has his own fur coat, making a bulky parka unnecessary. And those four legs are a heck of a lot better for keeping balance than two.

Village Will Join Conservation Unit

Palatine homeowners looking for professional advice on how to prevent erosion in their backyards and what kinds of flowers to plant will soon be able to get that advice — no strings attached.

The Palatine Village Board, last night, voted unanimously to join the North Cook County Soil and Water Conservation District, based in Lake Zurich.

The village's membership allows both the municipality and individual property owners free engineering consultation in regard to environmental problems.

Parts of the village annexed since 1950 have actually been members of the conservation district, but few residents have been aware of the available services.

With the expected formal approval by the Illinois Department of Agriculture, the entire village will be included in the conservation district.

The district offers its services at no charge to promote environmental effort. The district has no taxing power, but is funded by federal and state grants.

Playboy Club Feminique Goal

The Lake Geneva Playboy Club is the next destination for the Palatine Park District Feminique outing Feb. 21, with registration beginning at 9 a.m. Thursday.

Luncheon at the club will include three menu selections, then an open afternoon for recreational activities. During the two-hour period, women may choose to swim for $1 an hour, ice skate for $1 an hour, toboggan for $1.50 an hour, snowmobile at $7.80 per half hour and $12.50 per hour, ski for approximately $10, or use the health club, with sauna, whirlpool and massage machines.

The trip will cost $9.50 for the bus, luncheon, tax and gratuity. Forty spaces are available for the outing, and phone reservations are accepted at 359-0033. Such reservations must be paid at the park district office, 262 E. Palatine Rd., within a week after the space is reserved.

Independents Can File For Office

Independents can now file petitions with the Palatine village clerk to be listed on the April 17 local election ballot.

The deadline for filing is Feb. 12.

Independent candidates must submit petitions bearing the signatures of 5 per cent of the voters in the last local election, or 204 signatures.

New political parties also may file slates now, under the same guidelines as independent candidates.

The only new party is expected to be the Village Independent Party. It filed a slate of candidates in the last election, when it was known as the Village Incumbent Party.

At stake are the offices of village president, village clerk and four trustee seats.

Nominating petitions can be obtained at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

Slimnastics Program

The Salt Creek Rural Park District is offering a slimnastics program for ladies in Palatine Township.

The program will feature workouts, trampoline, tennis, tumbling, sauna and swim. The registration fee is $4 for six weeks. Interested persons may call 259-6890 to register.

Democrats Seek Candidates For Township Election

Palatine Democrats are scouting for candidates to oppose incumbent Republicans in the April 3 township election.

Potential candidates will be considered at a Jan. 14 meeting, according to screening committee chairman Ed Sullivan Jr. Township residents interested in running on the Democratic ticket can contact him at 358-4478 or reach their precinct captain, Sullivan said.

"We could fill a slate with Palatine candidates right now, but we want some other people from the various areas in the township," Sullivan said. Besides Palatine, the township takes in Rolling Meadows, Inverness, unincorporated areas and portions of Arlington Heights, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Barrington and South Barrington.

REPUBLICANS, who have headed township government in recent years, also will have to settle on at least one new face in the upcoming township election. A state constitutional revision calls for the addition of another auditor position to the three existing ones.

Until now, voting members of the board of auditors included the township supervisor and clerk. After April, the clerk's vote will be taken over by the fourth auditor.

The death of Clerk Margaret Chapman last spring caused the only change in the current board of auditors since 1964. Township auditors for the past two terms are M. Russell Bramwell, Carl H. Bals and Richard F. Bayer. Howard I. Olsen is supervisor.

At least two people on the five-member board have publicly decided to run for reelection. Olsen said he would accept the Republican Party's nomination if it is offered at the Feb. 6 caucus.

Current Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney also said she will run for office. She was appointed to the position last year following Mrs. Chapman's death.

BRAMWELL, one of the three auditors, said yesterday he is undecided about another election attempt.

Auditors Bayer and Bals were unavailable for comment on their election plans yesterday.

The township board has been embroiled in an attempt by the Palatine League of Women Voters to abolish township government. A vote on the issue was averted by the courts before last November's general election. And an Illinois Appellate Court ruling on the LWV lawsuit is not expected by the April 3 election.

Some of the Democratic candidates may run on a ticket to eventually abolish the township level of government in Palatine. But differences of opinion within the Democratic party will probably rule out an all-abolition or all-pro township slate, according to committeeman Richard A. Mugalian.

Road maintenance and the Palatine Township Youth Committee, which runs the Bridge youth counseling service, are two main functions of Palatine Township.

The board of auditors has also organized a committee to investigate day care needs in the township. Approximately $50,000 will be available for next year's budget through federal revenue sharing funds. The 1972 township budget totaled just under $150,000.

Pinderski To Head Chamber

Jerome W. Pinderski, a local attorney, is expected to be installed Saturday as president of the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Inc.

Pinderski, of Barrington, is the unopposed nominee for the post by the chamber's nominating committee. He currently is second vice president of the organization. Also nominated, and expected to be elected by acclamation, are B. F. Brieske, of Vision-Wrap Industries, Inc., as first vice president, and R. J. Andres, of R. J. Andres Associates, as second vice president. Brieske is currently on the chamber's board of directors.

The installation of officers will take place at a dinner dance Saturday at the Lancer Steak House in Schaumburg.

Cocktails are to be served at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m., then the program. Dancing will be accompanied by the Freddie Mills' band.

Tickets are being sold at the chamber office, 235 N. Northwest Hwy., for $11 a person, until 5 p.m. Thursday. Tickets will be available at the door for $12.50 a person.

School Board To Meet

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education will hold its regular meeting at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Carl Sandburg School, 2600 Martin Ln., Rolling Meadows.

Curriculum presentations on the jazz band and new science program at Sandburg School will be made during the meeting. The board will also be accepting bids on a gymnasium divider for Sandburg School, sewing machines for Palatine Hills Junior High and Winston Park School, in Palatine, and industrial art equipment for Palatine Hills Junior High School.

Inverness Studies Land-Use Plan

First reports tonight by village subcommittees may lead the way to Inverness approval of a master land-use plan which has been scrutinized for nearly a year.

The plan, prepared by Robert Teska for Barton-Aschman Associates is designed to maintain as much of the character of present-day Inverness as possible while allowing higher-density development in certain portions of the village.

Proposed developments in and around the sparsely-populated village have threatened the one-acre per home Inverness minimum zoning standards. The board meeting begins at 8 p.m. in the Inverness field house.

Before considering the comprehensive plan, the village commissioners will be honoring Inverness resident Jan Schwettman, who was instrumental in starting the area paramedic program. Paramedics began using their training last month to provide medical care at the scene of an emergency through cooperation of local hospitals.

175-Room Holiday Inn For Village?

the Cow Palace was attacked yesterday by the president of the Lake Park Estates Homeowners Association.

Donald G. Bellm, president of the unincorporated subdivision which lies immediately north of the Bakos property, said the proposed site "strikes me as an utterly absurd place to have a motel.

"I can assure you the homeowners association would violently object to it."

BELLM CITED traffic hazards and sanitary facilities as the basis of his objections. The Cow Palace, like the homes in Lake Park Estates, operates on a septic system. Bellm said the homeowners group would insist that a hookup be made to the new Metropolitan Sanitary District interceptor if a motel is built on Quentin Road.

Prior to operating the Cow Palace for five years, Bakos was assistant general manager for one year, then general manager, for two years, of the O'Hare Inn; and was associated with the Jupiter motel chain for five years, and the Carriage House chain for two years.

The Cow Palace, known for its landmark Fiberglas cow, has been in Palatine for five years. It had been operated as a restaurant under other names for many years.

The name "Uncle Andy's Cow Palace" was selected in 1965 by the three new owners of the restaurant, who honored Andy Sellas, founder and owner of the Mid-City Dairy Co., who gave them financial backing and encouragement when they entered the restaurant business.

Because of Sellas' love of animals, particularly cows, they chose the cow to be included in the name of the new enterprise, and to be erected outside the restaurant.

Walker To Hold Watershed Parley

A meeting to discuss the Upper Salt Creek Watershed program will be arranged between members of Gov. Daniel Walker's staff and Tom Hamilton, chairman of the watershed steering committee.

No date has been set for the meeting. Hamilton said Walker staff members agreed to the meeting when Hamilton offered to explain the plans for flood control on the Salt Creek.

Hamilton made the offer after Norton Kay, Walker's press aide, said Walker had made no definite plans because the new governor was not familiar with work that had been done.

KAY SAID the governor planned to move as quickly as possible on the program.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a multi-million dollar plan to build a series of flood controls across the creek. Included is a floodwater retention basin in Ned Brown Forest Preserve, in unincorporated Elk Grove Township that would create a lake of several hundred acres.

The initial watershed plan was a $26.5 million program that would be financed through federal, state and local government funds. The plan is now in Washington, being reviewed by various federal agencies.

In September, former governor Richard Ogilvie announced that the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and start work immediately.

THE U.S. Soil Conservation Service approved the state's action after a seris of meetings last year among the conservation service and various state and local agencies.

The conservation service is the agency through which any federal funds would be administered.

At a meeting Friday of the conservation service and state agencies, the possibility of either a water-retention structure or a widening of Salt Creek in the vicinity of Wood Dale was discussed.

Hamilton said state officials want to widen the creek at a cost of $12 million. The state officials thought the widening was better than building a retention structure at a cost of $15 million.

WIDENING would provide sufficient flood control for the type of storm that could be expected to occur only once in 10 years.

But Hamilton said there were other points to consider about the retention structure in addition to the cost:

—The structure would have the capacity to handle flood waters that would result from a storm expected to occur only once in 100 years.

—There would be recreational advantages resulting from a retention structure.

—Federal funds would be available for retention structure work, there would be no federal funds for widening the creek.

"No one wants the channel works (widening) done," he said.

Another meeting between the state and federal officials was scheduled for Feb.9

by BOB LAHEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Crucial Stage Next Week

Blood Reserve Reported To Be Dwindling In Suburbs

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryan, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usual ly considered a blood supply area .He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking donors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

DESPITE EFFORTS by blood banks to establish community donor organizations, the Northwest suburban blood supply is dwindling, although the situation is not yet as critical as in metropolitan Chicago. Some officials blame the shortage on new laws prohibiting use of purchased blood.

Ald. Jacobson Will Seek Reelection

Alderman Frederick Jacobson yesterday formally declared his candidacy for relection in Rolling Meadows' 5th Ward.

Jacobson, 3204 E. Frontage Rd., who was elected to the city council in 1969 as an independent candidate, turned in petitions to place his name on the April ballot.

He has been president of the city's board of health and has held various posts with the local Jaycees, including president.

The incumbent alderman said he will run on his record and has several goals if reelected. "I think there should be a closer relationship betwee the park district and the city," he said.

He mentioned other priorities for the city council including a citywide blood program, stringent requirements on new apartment construction, flood prevention and planning for future water needs.

Ald. Frederick Jacobson

TWO RESIDENTS of the 5th Ward may challenge Jacobson in the April election. Rudolph Balek, a former alderman whom Jacobson defeated in 1969, and Jeanne Weber, a library board member, have picked up petitions at city hall but had not returned them with the required signatures yesterday.

Persons interested in seeking election to the city council may pick up nominating petitions at city hall, 3600 Kirchoff Rd. One alderman will be elected from each of the five city wards.

Besides Jacobson, incumbents in the five wards are: Merrill Wuerch (1st), Tom Waldron (2nd), Stephen Eberhard (3rd) and Daniel Weber (4th).

Weber said yesterday he has not decided whether he will seek reelection. He said he wants to continue but is not certain he will have enough time because of expanded duties with his job. All other incumbents will run for another four-year term.

Couple Killed In Auto Crash

A Rolling Meadows couple were killed Sunday night when their car went out of control and crashed on the Tri-State Tollway.

State police identified the couple as Dean Chapin, 27, of 2201 Algonquin Parkway and his wife, Janet E., 20, who was the driver.

According to state police reports the car was northbound on the Tristate when it left the roadway, hit a median, smashed into a bridge pillar and finally became wedged between a guard rail and bridge pillar.

Police said the one-car accident occurred at 10:14 p.m. about two miles south of the Eisenhower Expressway. There were no witnesses to the accident.

Democrats Seek Candidates For Township Races

Palatine Democrats are scouting for candidates to oppose incumbent Republicans in the April 3 township election.

Potential candidates will be considered at a Jan. 14 meeting, according to screening committee chairman Ed Sullivan Jr. Township residents interested in running on the Democratic ticket can contact him at 358-4478 or reach their precinct captain, Sullivan said.

"We could fill a slate with Palatine candidates right now, but we want some other people from the various areas in the township," Sullivan said. Besides Palatine, the township takes in Rolling Meadows, Inverness, unincorporated areas and portions of Arlington Heights, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Barrington and South Barrington.

REPUBLICANS, who have headed township government in recent years, also will have to settle on at least one new face in the upcoming township election. A state constitutional revision calls for the addition of another auditor position to the three existing ones.

Until now, voting members of the board of auditors included the township supervisor and clerk. After April, the clerk's vote will be taken over by the fourth auditor.

The death of Clerk Margaret Chapman last spring caused the only change in the current board of auditors since 1964. Township auditors for the past two terms are M. Russell Bramwell, Carl H. Bals

Murderer Caught In Des Plaines After Fleeing Prison

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Adams told the Herald he was driving northbound on Mount Prospect Road south of the Chicago & North Western Railway outer belt tracks when he saw McCalvin walking on the railroad tracks.

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

Walker To Hold Watershed Parley

A meeting to discuss the Upper Salt Creek Watershed program will be arranged between members of Gov. Daniel Walker's staff and Tom Hamilton, chairman of the watershed steering committee.

No date has been set for the meeting. Hamilton said Walker staff members agreed to the meeting when Hamilton offered to explain the plans for flood control on the Salt Creek.

Hamilton made the offer after Norton Kay, Walker's press aide, said Walker had made no definite plans because the new governor was not familiar with work that had been done.

KAY SAID the governor planned to move as quickly as possible on the program.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a multi-million dollar plan to build a series of flood controls across the creek. Included is a floodwater retention basin in Ned Brown Forest Preserve, in unincorporated Elk Grove Township that would create a lake of several hundred acres.

The initial watershed plan was a $26.5 million program that would be financed through federal, state and local government funds. The plan is now in Washington, being reviewed by various federal agencies.

In September, former governor Richard Ogilvie announced that the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and start work immediately.

THE U.S. Soil Conservation Service approved the state's action after a seris of meetings last year among the conservation service and various state and local agencies.

The conservation service is the agency through which any federal funds would be administered.

At a meeting Friday of the conservation service and state agencies, the possibility of either a water-retention structure or a widening of Salt Creek in the vicinity of Wood Dale was discussed.

Hamilton said state officials want to widen the creek at a cost of $12 million. The state officials thought the widening was better than building a retention structure at a cost of $15 million.

WIDENING would provide sufficient flood control for the type of storm that could be expected to occur only once in 10 years.

But Hamilton said there were other points to consider about the retention structure in addition to the cost:

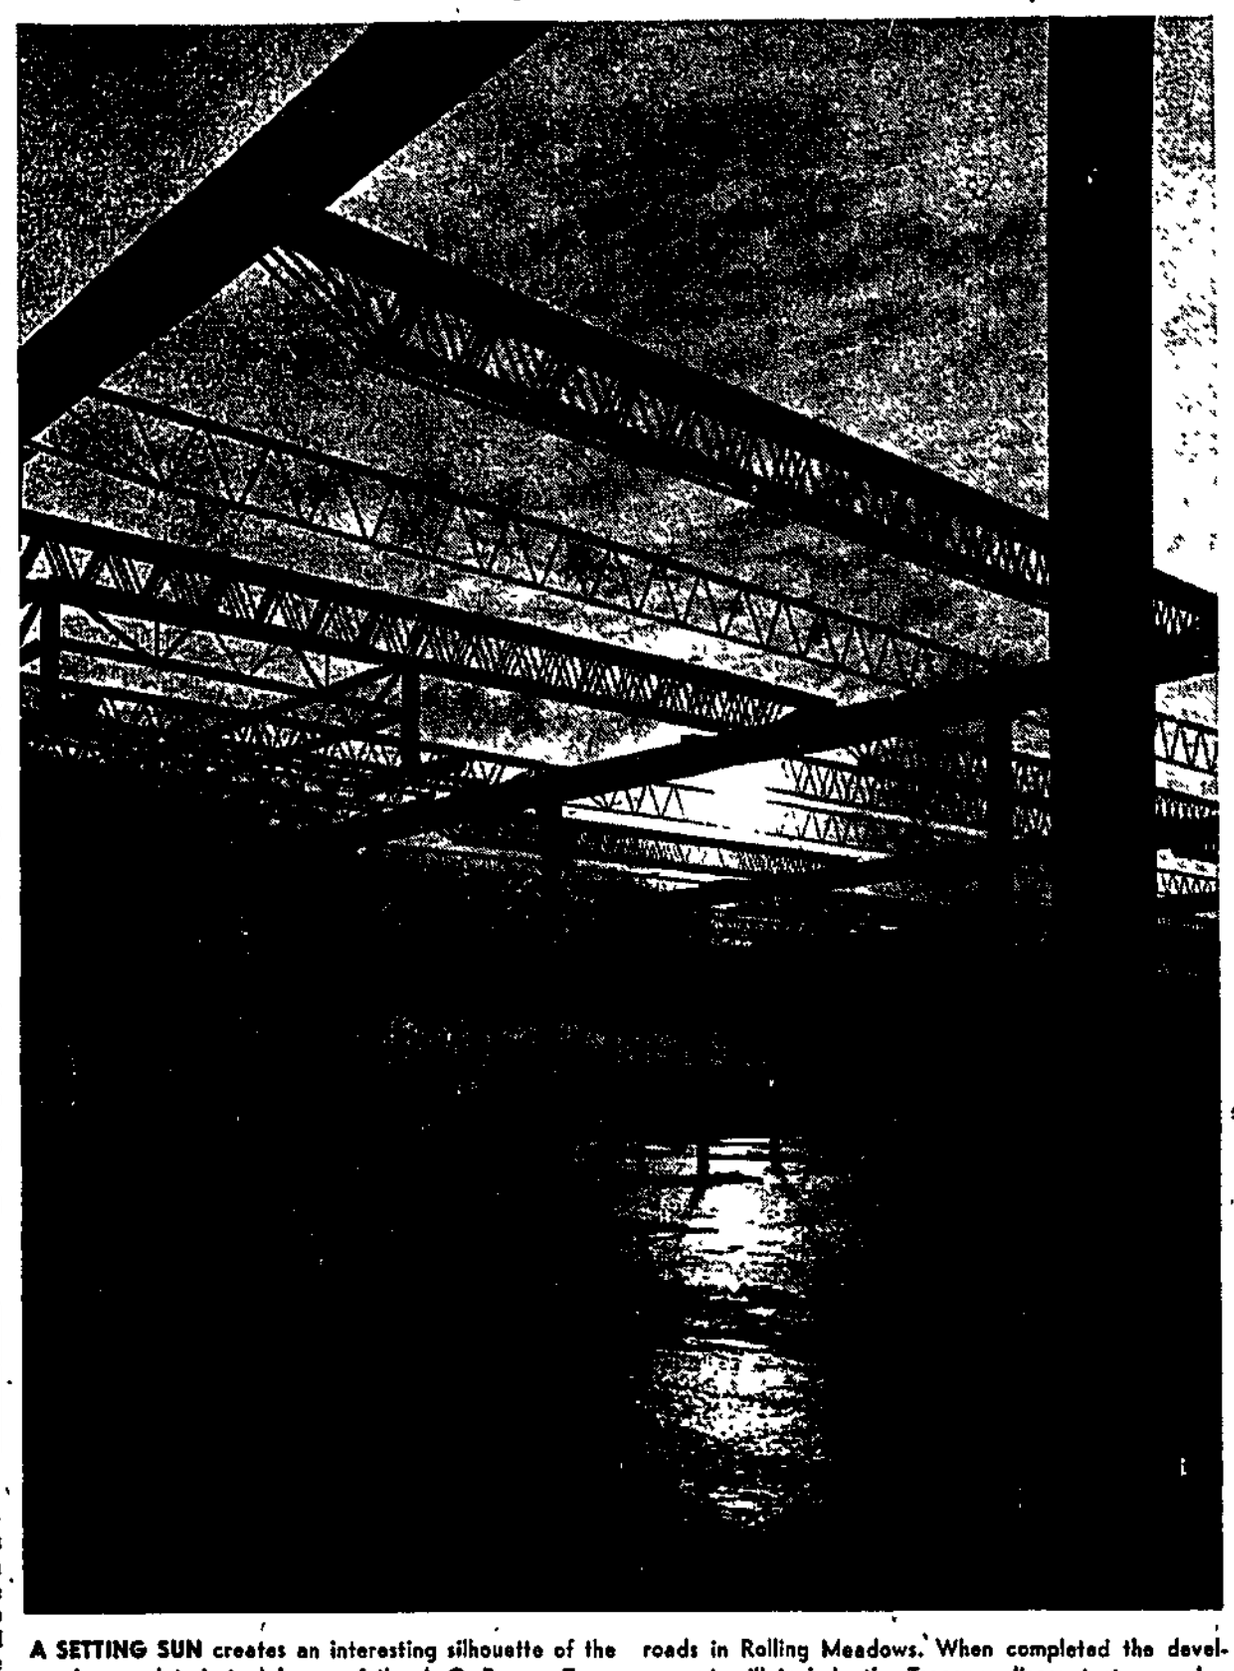

—The structure would have the capacity to handle flood waters that would result from a storm expected to occur only once in 100 years.

—There would be recreational advantages resulting from a retention structure.

—Federal funds would be available for retention structure work; there would be no federal funds for widening the creek.

"No one wants the channel works (widening) done," he said.

School Board To Meet

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education will hold its regular meeting at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Carl Sandburg School, 2600 Martin Ln., Rolling Meadows.

Curriculum presentations on the jazz band and new science program at Sandburg School will be made during the meeting. The board will also be accepting bids on a gymnasium divider for Sandburg School, sewing machines for Palatine Hills Junior High and Winston Park School, in Palatine, and industrial art equipment for Palatine Hills Junior High School.

Slimnastics Program

The Salt Creek Rural Park District is offering a slimnastics program for ladies in Palatine Township.

The program will feature workouts, trampoline, tennis, tumbling, sauna and swim. The registration fee is $4 for six weeks. Interested persons may call 259-6890 to register.

Ecumenical Service Set By 4 Churches

Clergy from four area churches will participate in an ecumenical prayer service at 8 p.m. Jan. 22 at Trinity Lutheran Church, 3201 Meadow Dr., Rolling Meadows.

The service, scheduled to fall within Christian Unity Week, is being co-sponsored by Trinity Lutheran Church, Community Church of Rolling Meadows, Bethel Lutheran Church in Hoffman Estates and St. Colette Church in Rolling Meadows. Refreshments will be served after the service.

Christian Unity Week runs from Jan. 18 to Jan. 25 and is set aside throughout the world for special prayers for greater unity among all Christians.

Hofmann Promoted By State Police

Illinois State Trooper Richard H. Hofmann of Rolling Meadows has been promoted to sergeant.

Hofmann currently acts as the court liaison officer but soon will assume new duties with Dist. 15 in Oak Brook. Upon graduation from the Illinois State Police Academy, he was assigned to the Des Plaines state police division.

Scouting News

A Mexican Fiesta at Trinity Lutheran Church in Rolling Meadows was the recent setting for the Camp Fire Girls Kayati District annual meeting and awards dinner.

Following a Mexican dinner of tacos, enchiladas and flan dessert, awards were presented to several Camp Fire Girls.

Marbeth Bissell, Karen Cutler, Laura Hersig, Susan Johnson and Joy Miller received ten year girl memberships.

GROUP ORGANIZATION charms were given to Carole Bergstrom, Kay Burke, Dorothy Dougherty, Barbara Gibbs, Cheri Herzog, Linda Hughes, Lucretia Johnson, Fae Kerkera, Carol Miller, Terry Nowadowski, Gerry Rogers and Carol Strand.

The Rolling Meadows Leaders association presented special awards charms to Doris Graham, Phyllis Haslem, Fran Lindquist, Pepper Seibert and Louise Zaloudek. Special awards charms also went to Kay Burke, Sue Hayward, Janel Lonergan and Jan Morris of Palatine and Ann Jesse of Lake Zurich.

Wakan awards, for five years of outstanding service as leaders were given to Carol Strand, Cathy O'Connor, Beverly Keagle and Pat Johnson.

Charlotte Joy Farnsworth awards for three years of service to Camp Fire Girls on the district level were presented to Fae Kerkera of Lake Zurich and Linda Noga of Rolling Meadows. Barba Gibbs received the shannequas award for five years of outstanding service on the district level.

A special award was presented by representatives of the Rolling Meadows and Palatine Combined Appeal to Linda Noga of Rolling Meadows and Kay Burke of Palatine for their help in this year's drive.

Democrats Seek Township Candidates

and Richard F. Bayer. Howard I. Olsen is supervisor.

At least two people on the five-member board have publicly decided to run for reelection. Olsen said he would accept the Republican Party's nomination if it is offered at the Feb. 6 caucus.

Current Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney also said she will run for office. She was appointed to the position last year following Mrs. Chapman's death.

BRAMWELL, one of the three auditors, said yesterday he is undecided about another election attempt.

Auditors Bayer and Bals were unavailable for comment on their election plans yesterday.

The township board has been embroiled in an attempt by the Palatine League of Women Voters to abolish township government. A vote on the issue was averted by the courts before last November's general election. And an Illinois Appellate Court ruling on the LWV lawsuit is not expected by the April 3 election.

Some of the Democratic candidates may run on a ticket to eventually abolish the township level of government in Palatine. But differences of opinion within the Democratic party will probably rule out an all-abolition or all-pro township slate, according to committeeman Richard A. Mugalian.

Road maintenance and the Palatine Township Youth Committee, which runs the Bridge youth counseling service, are two main functions of Palatine Township.

The board of auditors has also organized a committee to investigate day care needs in the township. Approximately $50,000 will be available for next year's budget through federal revenue sharing funds. The 1972 township budget totaled just under $150,000.

Parks To Sponsor Trip To Flower Show

The Salt Creek Rural Park District is sponsoring a Women's Break-Away Afternoon on Thursday to see the Chicago Park District's 60th annual Christmas Flower Show at the Garfield Park Conservatory.

The trip will leave Rose Park, 530 S. Williams Dr., Palatine, at 11:45 a.m., and return around 3:15 p.m. The fee is $1.50 and persons may register by calling 259-6890.

BUT BABY, IT'S COLD outside. But kids will be kids, and in spite of the weather or temperature, they will take to the ice and enjoy a little winter sport. Even the family pet joins in, and he is probably better prepared for the ice than are the kids. He has his own fur coat, making a bulky parka unnecessary. And those four legs are a heck of a lot better for keeping balance than two.

Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Des Plaines

4 Arrested; Police Link Them To 30 Area Burglaries

Up to 30 area burglaries over the last four months may have been solved by the weekend arrests of four youths by Elk Grove Village police.

Police in Elk Grove Village have charged all four youths in connection with five burglaries, while Mount Prospect police have charged one of the youths with three counts of burglary, and Des Plaines police are considering two charges of burglary and one of theft against that same youth.

Elk Grove Village police charged Philip Devine, 17, of 557 Oak St., Elk Grove Village, with burglary; James T. Hickey, 18, of 876 Marshall Dr., Des Plaines, with burglary; a 16-year-old Elk Grove Village juvenile with burglary; and James Nemoff, 18, of 340 Beau Dr., Des Plaines, with possession of stolen goods.

IN ADDITION, Mount Prospect police have charged Nemoff with three counts of burglary.

Burglary victims from the three towns are being called in by police to identify the more than 50 items recovered at Nemoff's apartment Friday during a search warrant raid. Through this identification process, all three police departments hope to solve other burglaries.

Mount Prospect Det. Richard L. Pascoe said there is a good chance that all 10 recent burglaries in an eight-block-square area in the southern portion of that village may be linked to Nemoff. Reportedly, Nemoff acted alone on Nov. 3 and Nov. 9 when homes in the area bounded by Elmhurst Road, Golf Road, Emerson Street and Hiawatha Trail were burglarized. He was charged with committing a burglary on each of those two nights plus a third one that occurred Sept. 17.

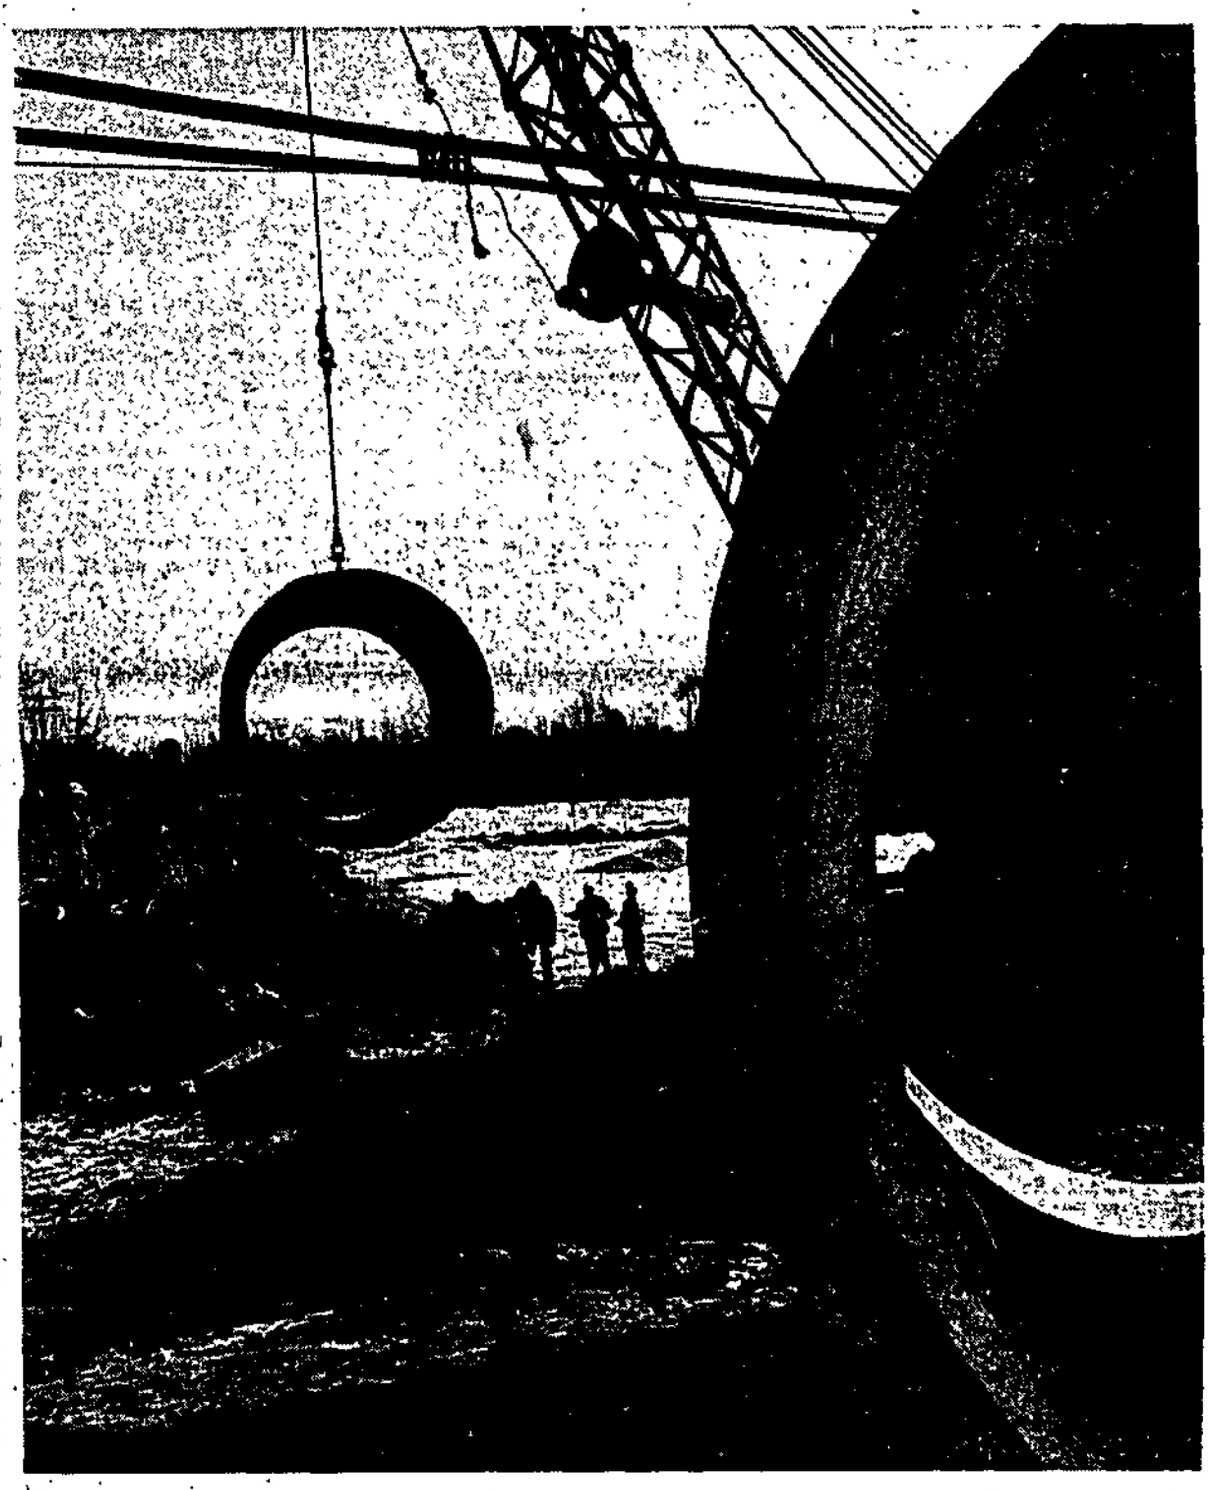

Elk Grove Village police would say only that they knew the names of the four suspects prior to the search of Nemoff's apartment. But other police sources said that one of the four had been questioned by Elk Grove Village police in connection with one burglary. The suspect then reportedly told police about the other three.

ACCORDING TO Elk Grove Village police, Nemoff cannot be traced to any of the other burglaries, except that they were using his apartment to store the stolen items.

When Elk Grove Village and Des Plaines police arrived at the apartment Friday, they reportedly found jewelry, stereo equipment, televisions, marijuana, four lawn statues and 16 $50 savings bonds. Most of these items have yet to be identified by their owners.

Nemoff is to appear in Niles court this morning. He remains in the house of corrections with bond totaling $55,000 set for him.

Hickey is free on $2,000 bond. Devine is out on $1,000 bond, and the juvenile was released to his parents. A court date of Feb. 14 has been set on the Elk Grove Village charges. Mount Prospect police expect a court date to be set this morning on charges they filed.

STORM SEWER INSTALLATION has resulted in the closing of Busse Road from Central Road south to Rte. 58 in Mount Prospect. Work is expected to continue through tomorrow. Meanwhile, traffic is being rerouted onto Elmhurst Road east of Busse. The work is part of Special Assessment '71, a storm sewer project to alleviate flooding in the southwestern part of Mount Prospect.

New System To Cut Time On Budget

New budget procedures are being followed this year by the Mount Prospect Village Board in an attempt to cut down the amount of time spent preparing the budget.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert has asked all village trustees and commission members to submit in writing by Feb. 1 items they feel should be included in the budget. This would include any new programs.

These recommendations will then be considered by Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley who prepares the actual budget with the aid of Finance Director Richard Jesse. Eppley will present a draft form of the budget to the village board by March 1.

Then instead of the village's finance committee going through the budget item by item, as has been done in past years, the village board will meet as a committee-of-the-whole.

TEICHERT has scheduled March 13 for the first of these meetings. Subsequent meetings, if necessary, will be held March 27 and April 10.

A special board meeting will be called for April 24 for the budget to be passed. By law, the new budget must be in effect by May 1.

"I believe the procedure whereby the entire board works on the budget will not only make each member more knowledgable as to the contents of the budget," Teichert said, "but it will also eliminate the need for committee reports and explanations to other board members and allow for conflicts to be resolved progressively rather than at the time of the ultimate decision."

Teichert said he also hoped the line-by-line examination of the budget by the board will be abandoned this year "leaving the specifics of expenditures within the hands of the administration."

Various village department heads are now preparing their individual departmental budget requests.

Girl, 14, Hit By Car In Serious Condition

A 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl remained in serious condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines, after she had been struck Sunday night by a car while crossing Euclid Avenue in the village.

Police said Carleen Balzer, 1804 Ivy Ln., ran in front of a car driven by Adwait E. Hartwig, 49, of 728 N. Beverly, Arlington Heights, about 6:20 p.m. A girl who was with her, Lori Franks, 14, of 1902 Ivy Ln., told police they had thought the traffic had cleared.

Hartwig told police that when he was approaching Burning Bush Lane he saw someone run in front of him and then applied his brakes. He estimated he was traveling 40 miles per hour at the time. (The posted speed limit there is 50 mph.)

Police have charged Hartwig with failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. He will appear in Mount Prospect branch of circuit court Feb. 21.

Murderer Caught In Des Plaines After Fleeing Prison

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Adams told the Herald he was driving northbound on Mount Prospect Road south of the Chicago & North Western Railway outer belt tracks when he saw McCalvin walking on the railroad tracks.

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

When Marjorie Boswell, director of health services in Mount Prospect, and her husband, Bill, visited Europe recently, they didn't stick to the usual tourist attractions.

Because of her job, Marjorie was interested in viewing European health service practices and talking to people in this field.

In England, for instance, the Boswells visited the country home of Dr. and Mrs. Thompson. Dr. Thompson was formerly with the Ministry of Health in England. He was also a member of a NATO team that visited Palatine when Marjorie worked there as director of health services. The NATO team was particularly interested in the 100-bed emergency hospital package she supervised.

"I think food care is excellent in England," Marjorie said. "Their insect and rodent control program is free to all residents. They couldn't understand our method of rodent control. The English also do an excellent job with their air pollution problem."

Another surprise was the first-class treatment English dogs receive. Marjorie found her seatmate on one train trip was a large coachdog — traveling on a child's ticket.

"THE BRITISH are animal lovers," she explained. "I sometimes think they feel closer to their dogs than to their children. For 50 years England has had a dog anti-defecation ordinance, but no one has ever brought a case to law."

During their three-week vacation, the Boswells also spent two weeks in Spain, with a side trip to Morocco. They found that everything looked very clean in Spain. However, exposed food and lack of house screens attracted many flies.

"One comment was that they had to eat, too," said Marjorie. She also found mountain people there simply threw their garbage out a window into a ravine.

In Malago, Spain, the Boswells met with an officer in the department of environmental health. He asked Marjorie to write a letter inviting him to an environmental health meeting to be held in the United States in June.

Marjorie explained that the invitation must look as if it were entirely her idea. Spaniards are "very oppressed" under their dictatorship, she said. Armed guards were a common sight.

"People are put in jail for very insignificant things," she added. "Recently 23 people were jailed for being subversive."

MARJORIE FAVORS increased exchange of ideas through professional people of the world. She thinks that perhaps more can be accomplished in this way than through political exchange.

Youth Dies As 'Prank' Backfires

What started out as a prank turned into death for a 15-year-old Wheeling youth Sunday morning, according to Wheeling police.

William Ivie, 833 E. Colonial Dr., was found dead after he apparently accidentally hanged himself with a belt on a closet door at his home, police said.

A Cook County Coroner's jury ruled yesterday that the death was accidental. They ruled after hearing testimony that the youth liked to pull pranks on his younger brother, and this started out as one such prank.

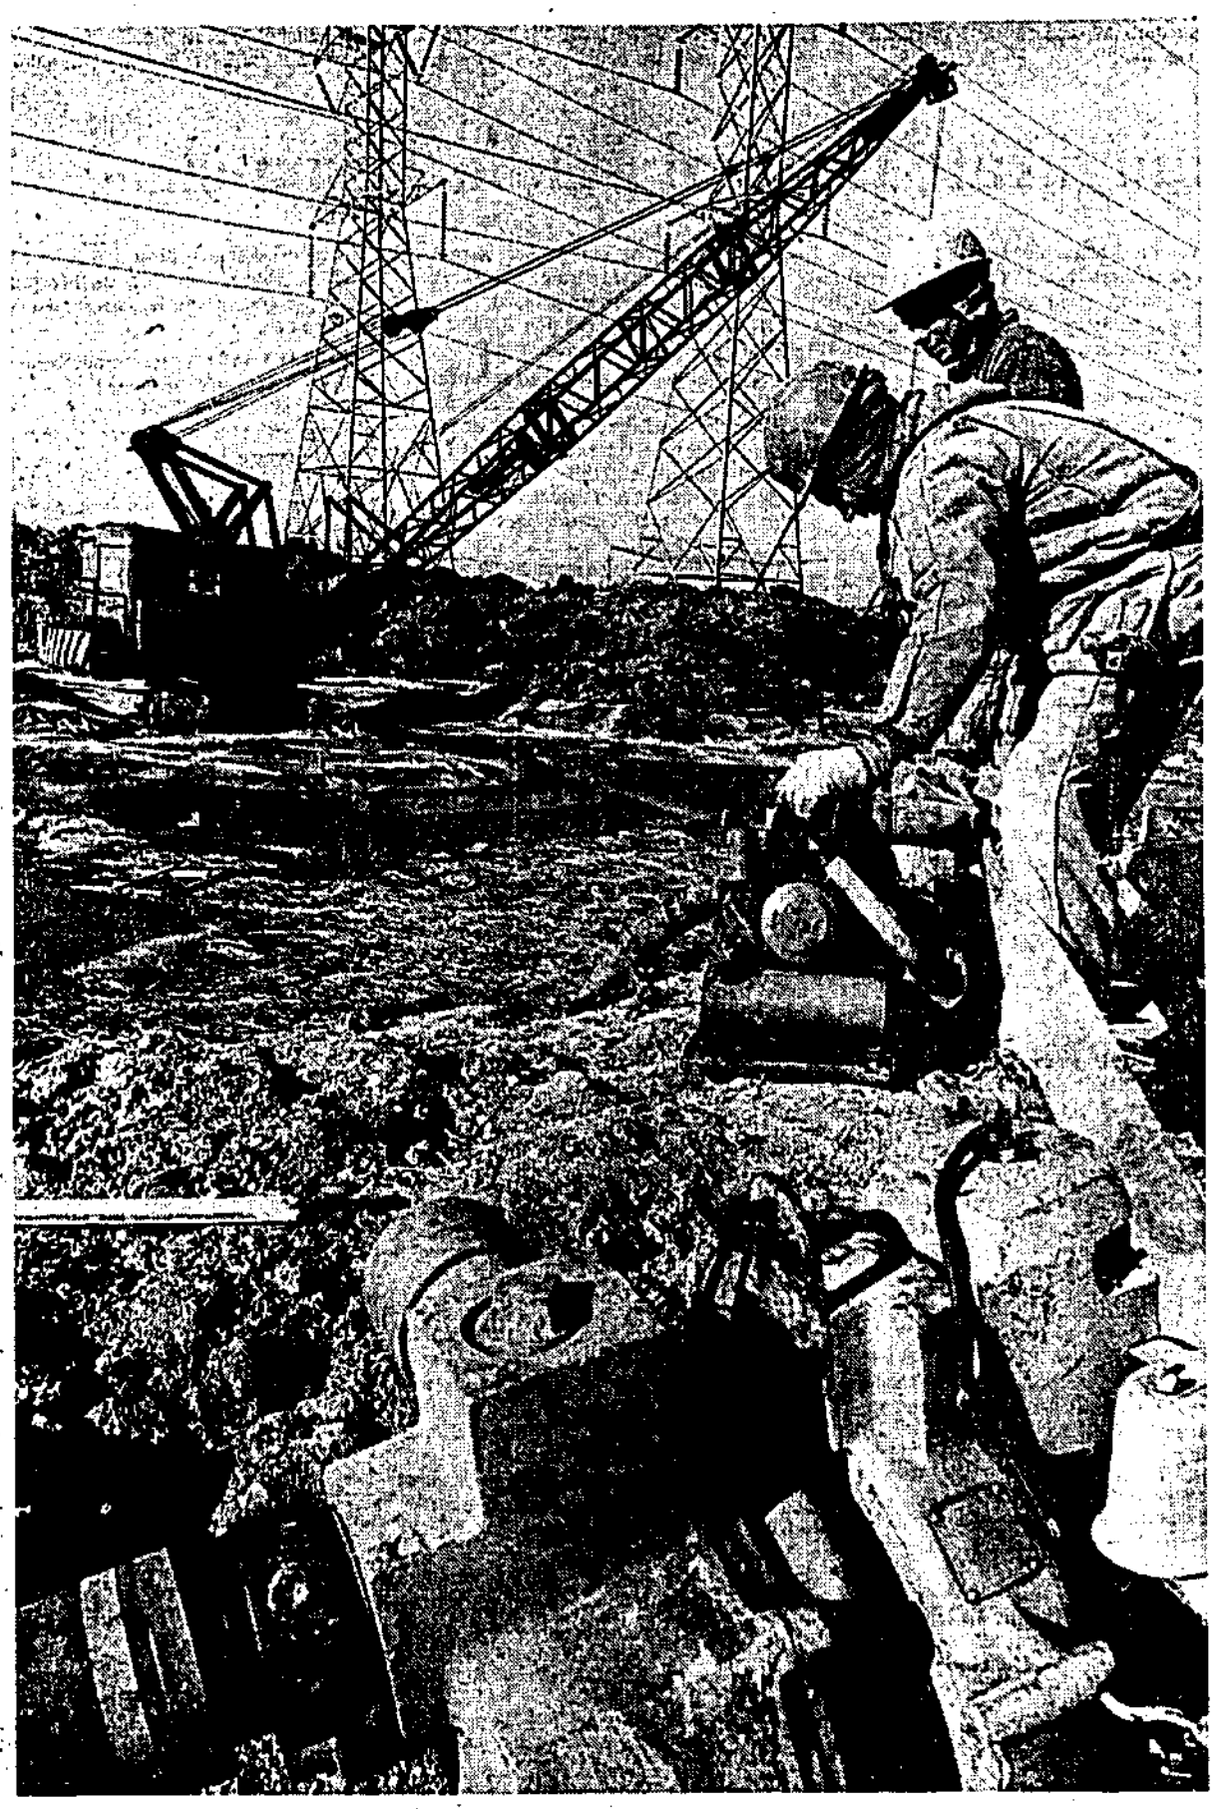

Police said the Wheeling High School sophomore was in a good mood when he told his father, James Ivie, that he was going to clean his room. About 10 minutes later the father heard a noise, but assumed it was his son moving furniture while cleaning, said police.

Officials said the youth's younger brother thought William was playing another prank and did not bother to answer a call for help. Police said that by the time the youth was found he was unconscious. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

The Ivies moved to Wheeling one year ago from Athens, Ga., where the youth will be buried Friday.

On Dean's List

Mary C. Martino, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael A. Martino, 519 S. Rammer Ave., Arlington Heights, has been named to the dean's list at Northwestern University, where she is a freshman.

WHILE WEATHER PERMITS, work is continuing on the first phase of the McDonald Creek improvement project in Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights. The work involves enlarging the Soo Line R. R. bridge over the creek just south of Euclid Avenue near Wolf Road. In the past, water backing up from the bridge has flooded along the creek. It may be as late as April before the job is complete, according to construction officials.

Preschool Program For Tots Slated

The Parents' Council on Early Education in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will offer a two-month preschool program for children who will be 5 years old by next Dec. 1.

The program, which will run during April and May, will be taught by volunteer "teacher-moms" at local schools. Areas of development that will be stressed in the preschool are language, socialization and motor skills.

The preschools will be held at the elementary school where the children will attend kindergarten.

A $7 fee will be charged for the preschool.

A copy of the child's birth certificate should be brought to registration. The schedule for registration is:

PRESCHOOL at Forest View, John Jay and Juliette Low schools will hold registration at 8 p.m., today, at Holmes Junior High School, 1900 W. Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect.

Preschool at Grant Wood, Clearmont, Salt Creek, Ridge and Mark Hopkins schools will be held at 8 p.m., Wednesday, at Grove Junior High School, Ridge and Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

Preschool at Admiral Byrd and Dan Cook schools will register at 8 p.m., Thursday, at Grove Junior High School, Ridge and Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

Preschool at Brentwood, Devonshire, Einstein and High Ridge Knolls Schools will be held at 8 p.m., Friday, at Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

Registration for Rupley and Robert Frost schools will be announced at a later date.

Senior Citizens To See Film '1776'

The Mount Prospect Extensioneers, a senior citizens group, is sponsoring a trip to the Norridge Theatre on Thursday to see the movie, "1776."

Tickets for the outing, including the movie and bus transportation, are $2.50. The bus will leave from the Community Presbyterian Church, 407 N. Main St., at 9 a.m. and will return around noon.

All residents, not only senior citizens, are invited to attend. For reservations, call Elizabeth Meyer at CL 5-3169.

Skis Reported Stolen

A pair of skis and bindings valued at $231 were stolen sometime Friday from a garage at 513 Hi-Lusi Ave., Mount Prospect. Police said there had been no forced entry to the garage of Robert T. Jackson. The theft was believed to have taken place between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Blood Reserve Reported Dwindling

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usually considered a blood supply area .He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking donors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

Oil Shortage, 1973 'Gas Eaters' Blamed

Gasoline Price Predicted To Reach 50 Cents Per Gallon

Gasoline retailers in the Chicago metropolitan area have woeful news for motorists, especially those driving late-model gas eaters. They predict prices for regular gasoline will climb to 50 cents a gallon, if not within the next few months then at least by year-end.

Although these dealer representatives agree with oil industry experts that the shortage of all petroleum products is becoming more severe, in the Midwest, the prediction of higher pump prices is not universal. Expecting 50 cents for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney," the oil industry people contend. They add that Phase II regulations will keep the lid on prices.

"I believe Chicago area motorists will be paying 50 cents a gallon for (regular) gasoline in the next 30 to 90 days," said Robert Jacobs, executive director of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association. "But the retailer has never had anything to say about the price of his gasoline."

. A SHORTAGE of supply is causing the pressure for higher pump prices, according to Jacobs. "We've had some dealers run out of supplies," he said. The association asks its dealers to call in for help if they are cut off by their jobber (supplier).

As of this week the dealer group is able to gain partial supplies for dealers cut off by their suppliers. Jacobs believes the critical period within the Chicago metropolitan area will occur within four to six weeks, however, as the shortage in gas becomes more widespread.

"It's the same crisis as in the heating oil business" he continued. "Since fuel oil is in critically short supply, the refineries are turning out added supplies of heating oil and in turn producing less gasoline.

"We have no control over our destiny when it comes to prices. No matter what price they pay, motorists should be grateful for the supply," he added.

JACOBS SAID new autos generally get less mileage per gallon as a result of pollution control systems added on late models. This is increasing gasoline consumption at a period when the supply is short.

E. G. Albano, executive officer of the Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago, seconds the prediction that prices will rise significantly as a result of tight supply. Pump prices finally made it up to "normal" levels, he said, at 40.9 cents a gallon for regular gasoline in many areas.

This follows a continuing series of price wars in which pump prices were slashed below this level. "But by the end of the year we could see a price of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline," Albano said.

Major oil companies supply their own dealers first, leaving independent gasoline dealers out in the cold during a supply shortage, according to Albano. He said there are many area independents who have been cut off by their regular suppliers. Some independents shut down on weekends because of the pinch. Albano sees the supply shortage as a move by major oil companies to squeeze out independent dealers.

Most oil industry experts are waiting to solve the heating (number two) oil problem before they consider a way out of the less serious gasoline shortage, counters Herbert Hugo. He is Midwest bureau chief for Platt's Oilgram, a daily petroleum industry publication. And the prediction of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney" he added, as Phase II controls would not allow for this increase.

TURNING TO THE fuel oil problem, he said, "Every 24-hour period the fuel oil picture gets worse. It has reached a serious crisis stage. It was only a minor crisis a month ago. As of this morning, for example," Hugo said Monday, "some area major oil company distributors are notifying their customers that they are being put on allocation basis.

"This is when it begins hitting John Q. Public," Hugo continued. "When he starts getting more concerned is when he calls up and asks for 400 gallons of oil and only gets 200 gallons."

The heating oil shortage is moving closer to home, he said. About 25 schools in Rockford, and two hospitals are among those affected by a Kelley-Williamson Oil Co. announcement last Thursday that it has exhausted its supply of heating oil for many Rockford area customers.

Fuel oil price relief is needed to assist in gaining added supplies said Hugo. Previous attempts to raise fuel oil prices have been denied by the Price Commission. This could in turn take the pressure off gasoline supplies, he said. If the petroleum industry is not able to increase the output of gasoline supplies, Hugo predicts a severe crisis could develop within two to three months.

WAYNE PARTHUN, managing director of the Oil Heat Marketers Association in Chicago, also noted the heating oil shortage and gasoline shortage, but said there is no definite indication that prices in either market will rise significantly in the near future.

"We don't talk of a shortage. We talk of a tight situation," said Parthun. "From a canvass of our own members we find there is an adequate supply. We don't foresee any shortage in the near future."

Fuel oil supplies at the beginning of the current heating season were at least as good as the previous year, he said. But a combination of cold weather and increased demand has created a shortage. Since the heating season began last September, the Chicago area has experienced 48 per cent colder weather than the previous season, in terms of degree days. Degree days are a measure of the difference between the actual recorded temperature and an average temperature.

Heavier demand for fuel oil results from the large numbers of industrial and other large users being cut off by the natural gas companies, Parthun continued, in addition to users making the transition from coal to oil as an energy supply for environmental reasons. No major allocations of heating oil are being cut off in the Chicago metropolitan area yet, he said.

Police Will Inaugurate Central Radio Dispatch

by DAVID MAHSMAN

Three area police departments will inaugurate the use of central radio dispatch this week the culmination of an idea that was originated nearly four years ago.

Under central dispatch, one radio room — located in Arlington Heights — will be used to take calls and dispatch police for Arlington Heights, Elk Grove and Mount Prospect. And there are hopes that Buffalo Grove may soon get in on the action.

When central dispatch goes into operation, residents of the member municipalities will still dial the same telephone number as always to reach their police departments. But the call will be picked up at central dispatch in Arlington Heights, and police on the caller's beat will be radioed from there.

FOR THE PAST four months, 12 radio operators have been studying the beat structures in the three municipalities, readying themselves for the start of the central dispatch program.

The idea for a central dispatch program in this area was originated in 1969 by Police Chiefs L. W. Calderwood, Arlington Heights; Harry Jenkins, Elk Grove Village; and Cy Campbell, then chief in Rolling Meadows.

The three thought there was a need for improved radio communication in this area, said Capt. Maury English, Arlington Heights police. Radio frequencies alloted to police departments by the FCC had become too crowded, causing separate police radio dispatchers to interfere with communications of other departments, English said.

The chiefs examined studies made of radio frequency allocations in the Chicago area and had another study made by the Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT) to determine if central dispatch would be feasible here, English said.

Some problems came up. IIT surveyed seven or eight area police departments, but most said they didn't want in on the program. They just didn't see the benefit, English said. And about the same time Lewis Case replaced Campbell as Rolling Meadows police chief, that city got new radio equipment of its own. Rolling Meadows was out.

BUT MOUNT PROSPECT was looking at a new radio system and expressed interest in the central dispatch idea, English said. Officials there took a trip to Muskegon, Mich., a city that is part of central dispatch program. Mount Prospect officials were impressed, just as had been those in Arlington Heights and Elk Grove Village, English said.

Some 18 months after the first meeting on central dispatch had taken place, the three communities decided to seek federal funding of a central dispatch project. Seven months later, the application was approved and the grant came through the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (ILEC).

The grant is for some $700,000 and includes funds for equipment and operation of the system. Member municipalities provide in-kind services — planning, setting up, operators and training, English said.

In December, 1971, bids were let for the equipment and engineering studies were begun, English said. It was hoped that central dispatch would become a reality in this area by last August, but FCC frequency changes, a need to test for the best location of the radio room and late equipment delivery stalled implementation.

Central dispatch was supposed to start last week, but last-minute problems with the antenna caused another delay. But English said that all that is needed is antenna adjustment so that all areas in the central dispatch project will be covered. He said barring any further problems, the system will be operational later this week.

ENGLISH SAID he sees many benefits in the new system over the old.

Each police officer will carry a personal radio with him at all times, so that he can be reached wherever he may be. English said this system has proved elsewhere to aid apprehension of suspects in crime and to get help faster for an officer in trouble.

Central dispatch should reduce the amount of radio traffic, as well, he said. He explained that this is important so that radio transmission isn't blocked by other departments, causing lost time in dispatching police.

English said the member departments will save money "in the long run." They were looking at updating their equipment anyway, and the number of radio operators will be reduced. Currently, Arlington Heights uses eight operators, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village each use five, for a total of 18 operators. Central dispatch uses 12 operators, and are paid by the member municipalities based on population.

English said the cost per municipality would be reduced even more if other area municipalities would come into the system. He said at least one more community could be handled by central dispatch without increasing the number of dispatchers.

Buffalo Grove police are already looking favorably on getting in on central dispatch. Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh was a lieutenant with the Elk Grove Village Police Department during the initial stages of the idea, and was in on planning the central dispatch system.

"Central dispatch is a very imaginative idea," Walsh said. "I think we're a progressive enough department to get in on the ground floor."

Man With Mail Address Here Robbery Suspect

A man with a Mount Prospect mailing address has been arrested by River Grove police in connection with Sunday's armed robbery at a Zayre Department Store in that western suburb.

River Grove police said they have arrested Anthony Saviano, 40, who listed an empty apartment at 932 Westgate Rd., and charged him with armed robbery. They said Saviano was identified from Chicago police photos by the manager of the department store. Saviano was picked up in Chicago.

A total of $39,822 was taken by three men after they walked into the River Grove store and forced the manager at gunpoint to open the safe. The other two men, for whom police have no leads as yet, are also reportedly in their 40s. The holdup took place about 3:30 p.m. while the store was crowded with shoppers.

Senior Citizens Can Sign For Lower Fare

Senior citizens in Mount Prospect can register for new Chicago Transit Authority (CTA) reduced-fare permits at the village manager's office, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Registration will be open from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and there is no time limit, according to Marian Woodward, who will be handling the registration.

The new permit will be required for senior citizens to qualify for reduced fares on CTA buses and rapid transit trains beginning Monday. To be eligible, a senior citizen must by 65 or older and provide proof of age. If this cannot be documented, CTA officials have said that applicants can sign a "certification of age" with forms available at registration time.

Also required are the applicant's Social Security number and a recent picture 1½ inches square.

Woman Charged In Fray With Husband, Friend

Ruby Lee Svendsen, 43, Northfield, was charged with aggravated battery Sunday after she allegedly fired two shots at her husband, Robert, missing both times, then struck her husband and a woman, with the gun handle.

The incident occurred early Sunday morning at a quadroplex unit in the 800 block of Wellington Avenue, Elk Grove Village.

Police said Mrs. Svendsen reportedly followed her husband to the injured woman's Elk Grove Village residence. According to authorities, an argument ensued between Mrs. Svendsen and her husband.

Mrs. Svendsen allegedly drew an automatic pistol and fired two shots at her husband, missing both times. Reportedly, she then struck her husband and the woman with the handle of the pistol.

The woman occupant of the residence was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in the village where she was treated for cuts of the head and abrasions of the finger and released. Svendsen was not treated.

Mrs. Svendsen was released on $5,000 bond and was scheduled to appear Jan. 31 in the Elk Grove Village branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

PTA Notes

Estubian Tina de San Pio, a group of strolling Spanish singers, will perform for the Westbrook School PTA at the annual PTA dinner on Tuesday, Jan. 23. The dinner, to be held at the school, 105 S. Walker Inaugurated, Promises 'People Government'

by BOB LAHEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

Revives Proposal Rejected By Voters

Local Hockey Association To Seek Indoor Ice Rink

The vice president of the Arlington Minor League Hockey Association will ask the Arlington Heights Park District to proceed with plans for an indoor ice rink, despite voter rejection of the facility last month.

William E. Schumann, vice president of the association, said he thinks an ice facility could be built with revenue bonds which would not affect the tax rate of the district taxpayers and does not require voter approval. The facility would be paid for by money generated by its use.

"We feel that building a facility with general obligation bonds would have been much easier, but we think it can be built with revenue bonds," said Schumann. "We have studied some facilities which have been built with revenue bonds, like Winnetka, which have been successful."

Though ice facilities throughout the area are known to be money-making businesses, some people are concerned about building them with revenue bonds. Some opponents of the idea say that the facility wouldn't produce enough money during the first few years of operation to pay off the obligation.

THOMAS THORNTON, director of parks and recreation, says that building an ice facility with revenue bonds has definite possibilities.

"There are park districts in the area which have been successful building an ice facility with revenue bonds," said Thornton. "There is a financial expert that I know of who is interested in talking about the situation with us."

Park board member Kay Muller says she is willing to listen to the presentation. Other board members could not be reached for comment yesterday.

During the past year, park district citizens committees have studied the possibility of constructing both indoor tennis and ice facilities in the district. The board decided last fall to construct a tennis facility with revenue bonds and ask the voters to approve a referendum to construct an ice facility.

The tennis facility, which will cost about $700,000, is now being constructed adjacent to Forest View High School, 2121 S. Goebbert Rd.

The ice facility, which would have cost $1,275,000, was part of the $2.55 million referendum which failed on Dec. 16.

The minor league hockey association officials are expected to attend tonight's park board meeting to ask the board to consider financing the ice facility with revenue bonds.

Woods: Flood Control First Priority

Village Pres. John Woods last night labeled flood control the number one priority facing the Village of Arlington Heights in 1973.

Woods called on the village board to arrive at a capital improvement program which is "realistic, workable and addresses the highest priority capital requirements."

Chief among these requirements "in expense and in long term service to the community" is flood control, he said.

Woods dismissed, however, the idea of a moratorium on new construction as a solution to the flooding west of the village. "The answer, in my judgment, is not to stop growth, but to assure that further community development is carefully controlled and that it is sound and enduring."

THE VILLAGE president's remarks came in a statement of objectives for the new year presented to the trustees last night.

Besides flood control, Woods called on the trustees to support a move to bring a juvenile branch of the circuit court to Arlington Heights.

He also recommended that plans to build a new police-courts building on south Arlington Heights Road directly across from the Municipal Building be pursued.

Woods also alluded to recent court disputes over the village's home rule powers.

"Perhaps our greatest objective for 1973 in home rule matters is to clarify the application of home rule to our village in monitoring the activities of the state legislature and through litigation where necessary," he said.

Woods, whose term as village president expires in April, recommended that the trustees find "a long range solution" to the garbage disposal dilemma. He called the acquisition of additional landfill area a "must" for 1973.

OTHER PRIORITIES mentioned included acquisition of the Nike base for village park land, continued support for efforts to secure drinking water from Lake Michigan and the construction of a west-bound entrance and exit from the Northwest Tollway.

Senior citizens' housing was also mentioned as "imperative" for 1973 and the recently-entered-into guaranteed blood assurance program was termed "one of the most gratifying actions ever undertaken by our village."

No 'Electioneering' By Palmatier

Trustee Frank Palmatier has been cleared by the Arlington Heights Caucus of any "electioneering" in connection with his announcement that he would seek caucus endorsement for village president.

Bill Griffith, chairman of the caucus's candidate recommendation committee, said yesterday both his committee and the caucus executive committee unanimously agreed that Palmatier's statement did not constitute electioneering.

Caucus bylaws prohibit the circulation of petitions or "general electioneering" by persons seeking the organization's endorsement.

The question of whether Palmatier had violated the bylaw by disclosing his candidacy to reporters had been raised by Alfred J. Lindsey, chairman of the 1970 candidate recommendation committee.

Area Reserve Blood Supply Dwindling

by LYNN ASINOF

While the serious blood shortage affecting metropolitan Chicago has not yet hit the Northwest suburbs, area hospitals are reporting a general depletion of their blood reserves. The hospitals, however, have not yet had to limit the use of their blood to emergencies.

Jack Ryon, a spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital in Arlinton Heights, said that the Northwest suburbs are usual ly considered a blood supply area .He said it is therefore normal that the downtown "consumer" area would show shortages first.

According to Roger Sullivan, director of the Beverly Blood Bank, the blood banks are the first places to feel the impact of a blood shortage. Sullivan said that Monday morning Beverly did not have one pint of blood in its reserves.

"We feel it first, and then the hospitals pick it up," he said. "It's sort of like a chain reaction. As it's felt in the city, it will move to the suburban area next. Once our inventories are depleted, then hospital supplies will be in a dangerous position within the next few days."

Robert Kilbride, spokesman for the Mid-America Chapter of the American Red Cross, called the shortage "predictable and predicted." He said the major cause of the shortage was the new law barring the use of paid blood donors.

KILBRIDE SAID the shortage is currently being felt because "every year there's a fall-off in blood donations around the Christmas and New Year holidays." He said blood is usable for only 21 days and that it is now approximately 21 days since the beginning of the holiday season.

According to Sullivan, blood shortages have occurred in January before. "It's more pronounced now because we're operating on a 100 per cent volunteer basis," he said. He explained that while volunteer donations have increased, they have not been sufficient to handle the demand.

Sullivan said the first effect of a blood shortage is the cancellation of elective surgery because of its drain on the blood supply. While several Chicago hospitals have postponed nonemergency surgery, none of the Northwest suburban hospitals has been forced to do so.

The hospitals are, however, seeking do-

DESPITE EFFORTS by blood banks to establish community donor organizations, the Northwest suburban blood supply is dwindling, although the situation is not yet as critical as in metropolitan Chicago. Some officials blame the shortage on new laws prohibiting use of purchased blood.

Murderer Caught In Des Plaines After Fleeing Prison

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Adams told the Herald he was driving northbound on Mount Prospect Road south of the Chicago & North Western Railway outer belt tracks when he saw McCalvin walking on the railroad tracks.

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

School Candidates Named Tomorrow

Potential candidates for the School Dist. 25 Board of Education will be named tomorrow at the school district nominating committee meeting.

The 96-member committee, commonly known as the Caucus, will also elect a screening committee to interview and rate the prospective candidates. Between Wednesday and Feb. 7 the eight-member screening committee will meet with each caucus nominee and rate them on a one to five scale on 12 different points.

When the caucus meets to endorse a candidate Feb. 7, each member will have the rating sheets along with a five-minute speech by each nominee upon which to base their vote. Caucus members are also invited to the in-depth interviews of all nominees.

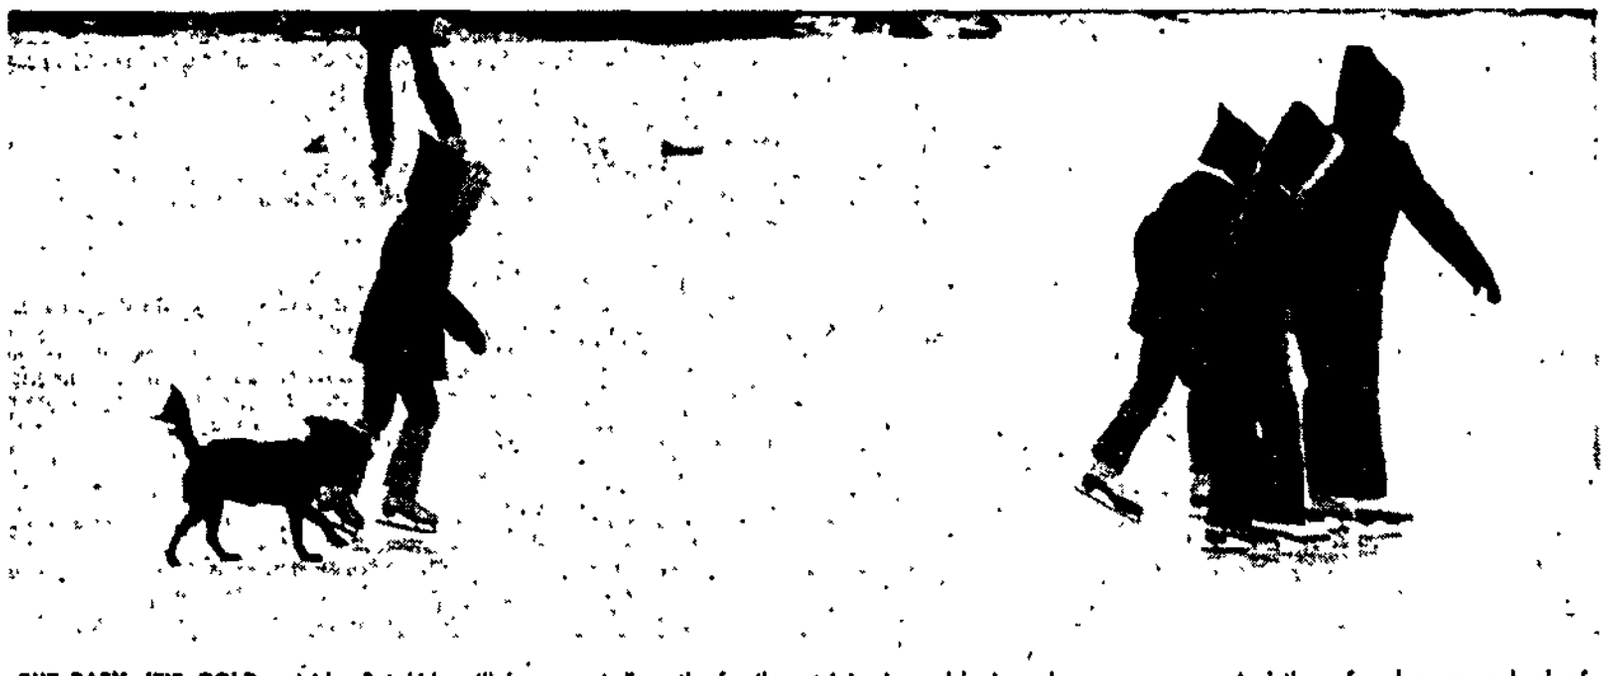

Though all nominating petitions should be in tomorrow night, the deadline has been extended in recent years because too few nominees were named. Last year, for example, when there were two seats vacant, only three names were brought before the committee. The deadline was extended for four extra days, however, and five more persons were added to the list.

THIS YEAR, caucus chairman Kay Roden is keeping her fingers crossed.

"I hope that a sufficient number of nominees will be brought before the committee Wednesday even though it hasn't worked out that way in recent years," said Mrs. Roden. "If need be we'll just extend the deadline again. Our job is to find qualified candidates."

After three candidates are endorsed for the three school board vacancies on Feb. 7, caucus members will discuss changes to the bylaws. A change has been submitted that would make it necessary for the caucus to endorse two candidates for each vacancy instead of one.

Board members whose three-year terms of office will expire in April include Board President H. Robert Powell, William Beck and Richard Schlott. Beck and Schlott have said they would like caucus-endorsement to run for a second term.

BUT BABY, IT'S COLD outside. But kids will be kids, and in spite of the weather or temperature, they will take to the ice and enjoy a little winter sport. Even the family pet joins in, and he is probably better prepared for the ice than are the kids. He has his own fur coat, making a bulky parka unnecessary. And those four legs are a heck of a lot better for keeping balance than two.

Northwest Hospital Joins Blood Replacement Plan

Northwest Community Hospital has become the first large institution to join Arlington Heights guaranteed blood replacement program.

The hospital has pledged one-pint donations from 20 per cent of its approximately 950 employes. In return, all employes and their families are guaranteed free blood replacement, regardless of whether or not they live in Arlington Heights.

Honeywell, Elementary School Dist. 25 and the Village of Arlington Heights and Paddock Publications Inc. also are reported weighing participation in the blood program.

Donations from hospital employes, and members of other groups who join the 20 per cent plan, contribute toward Arlington Heights' goal of 2,768 pints a year.

THAT NUMBER represents donations from four per cent of the village population and is enough to guarantee all Arlington Heights residents free blood replacement.

In addition to donations from groups such as companies, churches, civic and homeowners associations, a special citizens committee is also planning to seek blood donations from individual residents.

Each individual who donates to the program guarantees blood replacement for him and his family for a year.

A series of blood donation dates have been arranged during the next 12 months at different locations throughout the village.

The first donation date will be Feb. 4 at Arlington High School. The session is being sponsored by the Arlington Heights Jaycees.

"WE BELIEVE that the whole question of the recruitment of voluntary donors is becoming an increasingly critical problem in Illinois. It's going to take the combined cooperation of all groups within the villages in order to solve the problem of having enough blood," said Burton Chotiner, hospital vice president.

"As a health institution we have a dual responsibility. One is to try to help the blood banks educate the public and secondly, as an employer, we should be one of the organizations that sign on the dotted line' to try to recruit 20 per cent of our employes so that they and their families will be covered," he said.

Police Will Inaugurate Central Radio Dispatch

by DAVID MAHSMAN

Three area police departments will inaugurate the use of central radio dispatch this week the culmination of an idea that was originated nearly four years ago.

Under central dispatch, one radio room — located in Arlington Heights — will be used to take calls and dispatch police for Arlington Heights, Elk Grove and Mount Prospect. And there are hopes that Buffalo Grove may soon get in on the action.

When central dispatch goes into operation, residents of the member municipalities will still dial the same telephone number as always to reach their police departments. But the call will be picked up at central dispatch in Arlington Heights, and police on the caller's beat will be radioed from there.

FOR THE PAST four months, 12 radio operators have been studying the beat structures in the three municipalities, readying themselves for the start of the central dispatch program.

The idea for a central dispatch program in this area was originated in 1969 by Police Chiefs L. W. Calderwood, Arlington Heights; Harry Jenkins, Elk Grove Village; and Cy Campbell, then chief in Rolling Meadows.

The three thought there was a need for improved radio communication in this area, said Capt. Maury English, Arlington Heights police. Radio frequencies alloted to police departments by the FCC had become too crowded, causing separate police radio dispatchers to interfere with communications of other departments, English said.

The chiefs examined studies made of radio frequency allocations in the Chicago area and had another study made by the Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT) to determine if central dispatch would be feasible here, English said.

Some problems came up. IIT surveyed seven or eight area police departments, but most said they didn't want in on the program. They just didn't see the benefit, English said. And about the same time Lewis Case replaced Campbell as Rolling Meadows police chief, that city got new radio equipment of its own. Rolling Meadows was out.

BUT MOUNT PROSPECT was looking at a new radio system and expressed interest in the central dispatch idea, English said. Officials there took a trip to Muskegon, Mich., a city that is part of central dispatch program. Mount Prospect officials were impressed, just as had been those in Arlington Heights and Elk Grove Village, English said.

Some 18 months after the first meeting on central dispatch had taken place, the three communities decided to seek federal funding of a central dispatch project. Seven months later, the application was approved and the grant came through the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (ILEC).

The grant is for some $700,000 and includes funds for equipment and operation of the system. Member municipalities provide in-kind services — planning, setting up, operators and training, English said.

In December, 1971, bids were let for the equipment and engineering studies were begun, English said. It was hoped that central dispatch would become a reality in this area by last August, but FCC frequency changes, a need to test for the best location of the radio room and late equipment delivery stalled implementation.

Central dispatch was supposed to start last week, but last-minute problems with the antenna caused another delay. But English said that all that is needed is antenna adjustment so that all areas in the central dispatch project will be covered. He said barring any further problems, the system will be operational later this week.

ENGLISH SAID he sees many benefits in the new system over the old.

Each police officer will carry a personal radio with him at all times, so that he can be reached wherever he may be. English said this system has proved elsewhere to aid apprehension of suspects in crime and to get help faster for an officer in trouble.

Central dispatch should reduce the amount of radio traffic, as well, he said. He explained that this is important so that radio transmission isn't blocked by other departments, causing lost time in dispatching police.

English said the member departments will save money "in the long run." They were looking at updating their equipment anyway, and the number of radio operators will be reduced. Currently, Arlington Heights uses eight operators, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village each use five, for a total of 18 operators. Central dispatch uses 12 operators, and are paid by the member municipalities based on population.

English said the cost per municipality would be reduced even more if other area municipalities would come into the system. He said at least one more community could be handled by central dispatch without increasing the number of dispatchers.

Buffalo Grove police are already looking favorably on getting in on central dispatch. Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh was a lieutenant with the Elk Grove Village Police Department during the initial stages of the idea, and was in on planning the central dispatch system.

"Central dispatch is a very imaginative idea," Walsh said. "I think we're a progressive enough department to get in on the ground floor."

Walker To Set Conference On Watershed

A meeting to discuss the Upper Salt Creek Watershed program will be arranged between members of Gov. Daniel Walker's staff and Tom Hamilton, chairman of the watershed steering committee.

No date has been set for the meeting. Hamilton said Walker staff members agreed to the meeting when Hamilton offered to explain the plans for flood control on the Salt Creek.

Hamilton made the offer after Norton Kay, Walker's press aide, said Walker had made no definite plans because the new governor was not familiar with work that had been done.

KAY SAID the governor planned to move as quickly as possible on the program.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a multi-million dollar plan to build a series of flood controls across the creek. Included is a floodwater retention basin in Ned Brown Forest Preserve, in unincorporated Elk Grove Township that would create a lake of several hundred acres.

The initial watershed plan was a $26.5 million program that would be financed through federal, state and local government funds. The plan is now in Washington, being reviewed by various federal agencies.

In September, former governor Richard Ogilvie announced that the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and start work immediately.

THE U.S. Soil Conservation Service approved the state's action after a seris of meetings last year among the conservation service and various state and local agencies.

The conservation service is the agency through which any federal funds would be administered.

At a meeting Friday of the conservation service and state agencies, the possibility of either a water-retention structure or a widening of Salt Creek in the vicinity of Wood Dale was discussed.

Hamilton said state officials want to widen the creek at a cost of $12 million. The state officials thought the widening was better than building a retention structure at a cost of $15 million.

WIDENING would provide sufficient flood control for the type of storm that could be expected to occur only once in 10 years.

But Hamilton said there were other points to consider about the retention structure in addition to the cost:

—The structure would have the capacity to handle flood waters that would result from a storm expected to occur only once in 100 years.

—There would be recreational advantages resulting from a retention structure.

—Federal funds would be available for retention structure work, there would be no federal funds for widening the creek.

"No one wants the channel works (widening) done," he said.

nors to increase their blood reserves. Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said they are specifically looking for donors with type A-negative blood.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village reported that several persons hearing about the shortage in Chicago made appointments yesterday to donate blood. The hospitals asked that persons wishing to donate call to make appointments.

BLOOD BANKS servicing the Northwest suburbs expect upcoming blood drives to replenish their reserves. A spokesman for the North Suburban Blood Bank said their first drive is scheduled for Thursday. He said the bank is currently able to fill all of its orders for blood, but does not have any extra to send to Chicago hospitals.

Other blood drives are scheduled for this weekend in Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village.

Ski Lessons Offered

Adult ski lessons, sponsored by the Arlington Heights Park District, will begin Friday at Holiday Park. There are a few openings still available.

The six-week program costs $39 for lessons, lift tickets and equipment. For those who have their own ski equipment, the lessons cost $27. Registration is being held at Olympic Park, 600 N. Ridge.

No transportation will be provided to Holiday Park, located at U.S. 12 and Route 134 near Fox Lake.

Oil Shortage, 1973 'Gas Eaters' Blamed

Gasoline Price Predicted To Reach 50 Cents Per Gallon

Gasoline retailers in the Chicago metropolitan area have woeful news for motorists, especially those driving late-model gas eaters. They predict prices for regular gasoline will climb to 50 cents a gallon, if not within the next few months then at least by year-end.

Although these dealer representatives agree with oil industry experts that the shortage of all petroleum products is becoming more severe, in the Midwest, the prediction of higher pump prices is not universal. Expecting 50 cents for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney," the oil industry people contend. They add that Phase II regulations will keep the lid on prices.

"I believe Chicago area motorists will be paying 50 cents a gallon for (regular) gasoline in the next 30 to 90 days," said Robert Jacobs, executive director of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association. "But the retailer has never had anything to say about the price of his gasoline."

A SHORTAGE of supply is causing the pressure for higher pump prices, according to Jacobs. "We've had some dealers run out of supplies," he said. The association asks its dealers to call in for help if they are cut off by their jobber (supplier).

As of this week the dealer group is able to gain partial supplies for dealers cut off by their suppliers. Jacobs believes the critical period within the Chicago metropolitan area will occur within four to six weeks, however, as the shortage in gas becomes more widespread.

"It's the same crisis as in the heating oil business" he continued. "Since fuel oil is in critically short supply, the refineries are turning out added supplies of heating oil and in turn producing less gasoline.

"We have no control over our destiny when it comes to prices. No matter what price they pay, motorists should be grateful for the supply," he added.

JACOBS SAID new autos generally get less mileage per gallon as a result of pollution control systems added on late models. This is increasing gasoline consumption at a period when the supply is short.

E. G. Albano, executive officer of the Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago, seconds the prediction that prices will rise significantly as a result of tight supply. Pump prices finally made it up to "normal" levels, he said, at 40.9 cents a gallon for regular gasoline in many areas.

This follows a continuing series of price wars in which pump prices were slashed below this level. "But by the end of the year we could see a price of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline," Albano said.

Major oil companies supply their own dealers first, leaving independent gasoline dealers out in the cold during a supply shortage, according to Albano. He said there are many area independents who have been cut off by their regular suppliers. Some independents shut down on weekends because of the pinch. Albano sees the supply shortage as a move by major oil companies to squeeze out independent dealers.

Most oil industry experts are waiting to solve the heating (number two) oil problem before they consider a way out of the less serious gasoline shortage, counters Herbert Hugo. He is Midwest bureau chief for Platt's Oilgram, a daily petroleum industry publication. And the prediction of 50 cents a gallon for regular gasoline is "a lot of baloney" he added, as Phase II controls would not allow for this increase.

TURNING TO THE fuel oil problem, he said, "Every 24-hour period the fuel oil picture gets worse. It has reached a serious crisis stage. It was only a minor crisis a month ago. As of this morning, for example," Hugo said Monday, "some area major oil company distributors are notifying their customers that they are being put on allocation basis.

"This is when it begins hitting John Q. Public," Hugo continued. "When he starts getting more concerned is when he calls up and asks for 400 gallons of oil and only gets 200 gallons."

The heating oil shortage is moving closer to home, he said. About 25 schools in Rockford, and two hospitals are among those affected by a Kelley-Williamson Oil Co. announcement last Thursday that it has exhausted its supply of heating oil for many Rockford area customers.

Fuel oil price relief is needed to assist in gaining added supplies said Hugo. Previous attempts to raise fuel oil prices have been denied by the Price Commission. This could in turn take the pressure off gasoline supplies, he said. If the petroleum industry is not able to increase the output of gasoline supplies, Hugo predicts a severe crisis could develop within two to three months.

WAYNE PARTHUN, managing director of the Oil Heat Marketers Association in Chicago, also noted the heating oil shortage and gasoline shortage, but said there is no definite indication that prices in either market will rise significantly in the near future.

"We don't talk of a shortage. We talk of a tight situation," said Parthun. "From a canvass of our own members we find there is an adequate supply. We don't foresee any shortage in the near future."

Fuel oil supplies at the beginning of the current heating season were at least as good as the previous year, he said. But a combination of cold weather and increased demand has created a shortage. Since the heating season began last September, the Chicago area has experienced 48 per cent colder weather than the previous season, in terms of degree days. Degree days are a measure of the difference between the actual recorded temperature and an average temperature.

Heavier demand for fuel oil results from the large numbers of industrial and other large users being cut off by the natural gas companies, Parthun continued, in addition to users making the transition from coal to oil as an energy supply for environmental reasons. No major allocations of heating oil are being cut off in the Chicago metropolitan area yet, he said.

Residents Buying Flood Insurance

by NANCY COWGER

Residents of the Northwest suburbs are beginning to take advantage of federally subsidized flood insurance, although sales still are low.

James Reichardt, of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs, directing the program, said "there has been root growth" in the program's use. Purchases of the policy are "really beginning to pick up," he added.

Under the federal subsidy, a homeowner can purchase up to $17,500 of home coverage for between $60 and $70, said Charles Brazelton, an agent for State Farm Fire and Casualty Co., service representative for this area. Without federal subsidies, said Reichardt, the insurance would cost 10 times that much, since the subsidy is 90 per cent of the premium cost.

More important, said Reichardt, is the fact flood insurance cannot be legally refused in an area approved for the federal program. Homeowners with an experience of flooding three or four times a year likely could not find a company willing to sell them flood insurance, without the federal subsidies, said Reichardt. With them, the homeowner can purchase the insurance and collect on claims every time he is flooded.

The program also provides for up to $5,000 insurance on the contents of a home, and this provision is available to home or apartment renters, as well as to homeowners, said Brazelton.

ALTHOUGH THE insurance is available in most Northwest suburban communities, a few still have not applied. Rolling Meadows, Inverness, the Barrington communities, Streamwood and Bartlett do not yet participate. Also, while Cook County has applied for acceptance in the program, it has not yet been approved, said Reichardt. The county application was incomplete, and county officials still must complete "a couple of the necessary steps," he said. Until the county is approved, residents of unincorporated areas cannot purchase the insurance at subsidized rates.

Noting "it takes a while for something like this to get off the ground," Reichardt said he was "not discouraged" by the number of policies which have been purchased. "The most important thing at this point in an eligible community is it's just a matter of the individual homeowner deciding whether to buy it. It's an individual people decision — the local governments have taken the necessary steps. They've taken the action necessary to make it available to the people," Reichardt said.

A homeowner may purchase the insurance anytime after the community has been approved for the subsidy, as long as the community renews its eligibility each year, Reichardt said. Brazelton pointed out persons buying within the first 30 days after a community is approved can receive immediate coverage. After the 30 days, there is a 15-day waiting period between receipt of the policy and the time coverage starts, he said. The only community in the area approved less than 30 days ago is Wheeling, which officially qualified as of Dec. 15.

IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, the first community in the area to qualify, 107 policies had been sold as of Dec. 1, 1972, Brazelton said. Arlington Heights homeowners became eligible to purchase the policies in January, 1972.

Also as of last Dec. 1, Palatine residents had purchased 34 policies, Mount Prospect residents had purchased seven, Des Plaines homeowners had bought four, Schaumburg residents had purchased three and Elk Grove Village residents had bought two policies.

In Hoffman Estates and Buffalo Grove, no policies had been purchased, although residents were eligible to buy them.

Brazelton said sales the month previously had been considerably lower, and estimated totals might be twice as high as of today. He also pointed out Wheeling residents were listed as not having purchased any policies, although they were not eligible until two weeks after his latest statistical breakdown.

4 Arrested; Tied To 30 Burglaries

Up to 30 area burglaries over the last four months may have been solved by the weekend arrests of four youths by Elk Grove Village police.

Police in Elk Grove Village have charged all four youths in connection with five burglaries, while Mount Prospect police have charged one of the youths with three counts of burglary, and Des Plaines police are considereing two charges of burglary and one of theft against that same youth.

Elk Grove Village police charged Philip Devine, 17, of 557 Oak St., Elk Grove Village, with burglary; James T. Hickey, 18, of 878 Marshall Dr., Des Plaines, with burglary; a 16-year-old Elk Grove Village juvenile with burglary; and James Nemoff, 18, of 340 Beau Dr., Des Plaines, with possession of stolen goods.

IN ADDITION, Mount Prospect police have charged Nemoff with three counts of burglary.

Burglary victims from the three towns are being called in by police to identify the more than 50 items recovered at Nemoff's apartment Friday during a search warrant raid. Through this identification process, all three police departments hope to solve other burglaries.

Mount Prospect Det. Richard L. Pascoe said there is a good chance that all 10 recent burglaries in an eight-block-square area in the southern portion of that village may be linked to Nemoff. Reportedly, Nemoff acted alone on Nov. 3 and Nov. 9 when homes in the areas bounded by Elmhurst Road, Golf Road, Emerson Street and Hiawatha Trail were burglarized. He was charged with committing a burglary on each of those two nights plus a third one that occurred Sept. 17.

Elk Grove Village police would say only that they knew the names of the four suspects prior to the search of Nemoff's apartment. But other police sources said that one of the four had been questioned by Elk Grove Village police in connection with one burglary. The suspect then reportedly told police about the other three.

ACCORDING TO Elk Grove Village police, Nemoff cannot be traced to any of the other burglaries, except that they were using his apartment to store the stolen items.

When Elk Grove Village and Des Plaines police arrived at the apartment Friday, they reportedly found jewelry, stereo equipment, televisions, marijuana, four lawn statues and 16 $50 savings bonds. Most of these items have yet to be identified by their owners.

Nemoff is to appear in Niles court this morning. He remains in the house of corrections with bond totaling $55,000 set for him.

Hickey is free on $2,000 bond. Devine is out on $1,000 bond, and the juvenile was released to his parents. A court date of Feb. 14 has been set on the Elk Grove Village charges. Mount Prospect police expect a court date to be set this morning on charges they filed.

Woman Charged In Fray With Husband, Friend

Ruby Lee Svendsen, 43, Northfield, was charged with aggravated battery Sunday after she allegedly fired two shots at her husband, Robert, missing both times, then struck her husband and a woman, with the gun handle.

The incident occurred early Sunday morning at a quadroplex unit in the 800 block of Wellington Avenue, Elk Grove Village.

Police said Mrs. Svendsen reportedly followed her husband to the injured woman's Elk Grove Village residence. According to authorities, an argument ensued between Mrs. Svendsen and her husband.

Mrs. Svendsen allegedly drew an automatic pistol and fired two shots at her husband, missing both times. Reportedly, she then struck her husband and the woman with the handle of the pistol.

The woman occupant of the residence was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in the village where she was treated for cuts of the head and abrasions of the finger and released. Svendsen was not treated.

Mrs. Svendsen was released on $5,000 bond and was scheduled to appear Jan. 31 in the Elk Grove Village branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Meeting On Youth Conduct Set

A community meeting to discuss youth conduct around Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez, will be held Jan. 17 at 8 p.m. at Pioneer Park.

Invited will be residents of the area, members of the Arlington Heights Police Department, Park District and Youth Council.

"I have been informed that people around the park as well as those who use it are generally intimidated by the youth of the area," said Kay Muller, member of the park board. "It's not a major problem unless you live across from the park or use it, but the problems should be discussed and resolved."

Pioneer Park has been harder hit by vandalism in recent years than any other park in the district. Last summer, for example, about $1,000 in damage was done when several windows were broken.

Neighbors around the park have complained of youths drinking and using obscene language in the park.

Mike Mikels, director of the park, said children and adults will design and hand-out flyers to about 300 residents in the area to tell them about the Jan. 17 meeting.

Ice Carnival Preliminaries Are Tomorrow

Ice skaters in Arlington Heights who want to participate in the annual Rotary Ice Carnival may attend a preliminary meet tomorrow at their local parks.

Preliminaries for the carnival will be held from 6 to 10 p.m. at Camelot, Recreation, Hasbrook, Frontier, Patriot, Heritage and Hickory-Meadows Parks. The preliminaries will be held at Pioneer Park on Thursday.

The carnival will be held Jan. 20 at Hickory-Meadows park, Douglas Street, just north of Olive Street.

Included in carnival events this year will be races from 110 to 660 yards. Children under 10 years old will race in 110-yard contests. Children from 10 to 15 will race in 220-yard races. There will also be 440-yard races for anyone over 12 years old, and 660-yard races for anyone over 18 years old.

The carnival is sponsored by the Arlington Heights Rotary, which supplies ribbons and some judges, along with the park district.

Coordinating the carnival this year will be Raymond Nelson, a senior at Western Illinois University, who is working with the park district for a term as part of his curriculum.

Youth Dies As 'Prank' Backfires

What started out as a prank turned into death for a 15-year-old Wheeling youth Sunday morning, according to Wheeling police.

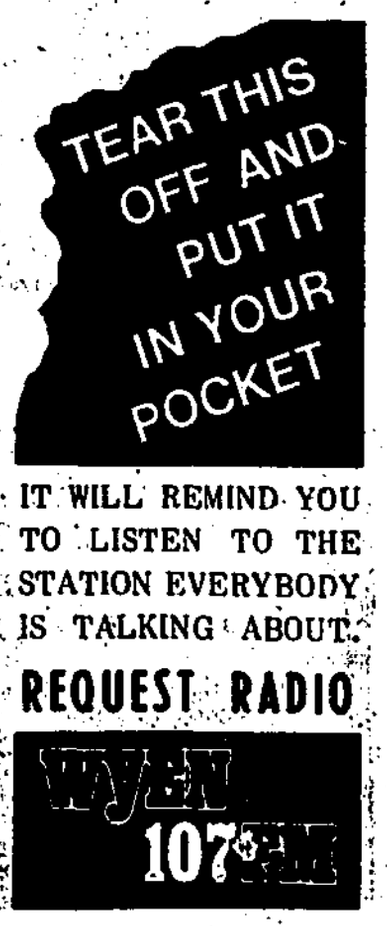

William Ivie, 833 E. Colonial Dr., was found dead after he apparently accidentally hanged himself with a belt on a closet door at his home, police said.

A Cook County Coroner's jury ruled yesterday that the death was accidental. They ruled after hearing testimony that the youth liked to pull pranks on his younger brother, and this started out as one such prank.

Police said the Wheeling High School sophomore was in a good mood when he told his father, James Ivie, that he was going to clean his room. About 10 minutes later the father heard a noise, but assumed it was his son moving furniture while cleaning, said police.

Officials said the youth's younger brother thought William was playing another prank and did not bother to answer a call for help. Police said that by the time the youth was found he was unconscious. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

The Ivies moved to Wheeling one year ago from Athens, Ga., where the youth will be buried Friday.

by BOB LAHEY
Herald Political Editor

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Standing before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the east entrance of the state Capitol, Gov. Daniel Walker of Deerfield yesterday promised the people of Illinois a new era of government of the people, by the people and for the people.

In a 20-minute inaugural address, the new governor elicited his most enthusiastic applause when he pronounced:

"To those who have grown rich on the public dollar, to those who have won secret grants and contracts, to those in government who put themselves first and the taxpayers second — to you I bring my first message from the people of Illinois: the free ride is over."

WALKER declared that he would use his new executive power as governor of Illinois, without awaiting legislative action, to end practices which he considers detrimental to the interest of the people.

Only twice at other times did the inaugural audience, estimated at some 10,000 persons, interrupt the new governor's remarks.

Both times their response was prompted by anti-government remarks.

After referring to what he called "loss of faith" because of dependence on bureaucrats and politicians, Walker declared, "Let government step back, let people step forward." That statement brought the first display of emotion from the crowd.

The audience was again moved to applause when Walker declared, "My deepest resolve as governor of Illinois will be to sweep the arrogance of bureaucracy from the halls of power, to let the voice of people be heard once again."

In order to carry out this program, Walker again promised to hold periodic "accountability sessions" throughout the state at which all citizens may have access to him and key members of his administration.

WALKER WAS inaugurated in the first outdoor ceremony in the state's history. Joining him on the platform were three former governors — Democrats William G. Stratton and Samuel S. Shapiro, and Walker's immediate predecessor, Republican Richard B. Ogilvie.

Other luminaries on the platform included Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, referred to in introductory remarks by every speaker except Walker, and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Conspicuously absent from the inaugural ceremonies were Republican U. S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and outgoing Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, whom Walker defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The outdoor ceremony apparently fulfilled the hopes of Walker aides for a public display of affection for the new

by JACK PENCHOFF

A convicted murderer who had escaped from Stateville prison in Joliet by hiding in a delivery truck was captured two hours later yesterday in Des Plaines.

Walter McCalvin, serving 75 to 125 years for murder and eight consecutive 15 to 30 year terms for armed robbery, was apprehended during a manhunt by Patrolman Ronald Adams as McCalvin was running toward the Northwest Tollway east of Mount Prospect Road.

According to police, McCalvin was one of several inmates who helped unload the delivery truck at the Illinois State Prison general store in Joliet.

POLICE SAID after the truck was emptied McCalvin jumped in the rear of the semi-trailer and hid beneath a stack of pallets.

According to the truck driver, Albert W. Stiles, 43, of East Peoria, two guards at the state prison checked the inside of the truck before it left the prison compound but missed the convict, who apparently had hidden under some loading pallets.

Stiles arrived at the next stop on his route, Bakeline Products, 1701 Winthrop, Des Plaines, about 12:50 p.m. When he opened the rear door, McCalvin jumped out of the truck and forced him inside.

McCalvin then locked the door, and fled on foot.

STILES SAID he yelled for help and was let out of the truck by a loading dock worker.

McCalvin was caught by Adams 20 minutes later about a quarter mile from Bakeline Products.

Adams told the Herald he was driving northbound on Mount Prospect Road south of the Chicago & North Western Railway outer belt tracks when he saw McCalvin walking on the railroad tracks.

Adams said McCalvin started running up a grassy hill towards the tollway but stopped when the police officer fired a warning shot. He did not resist arrest.

A prison knife with an eight-inch blade was found in McCalvin's jacket pocket. Stiles and police said the escapee never displayed the weapon.

According to Chicago police Area 2 homicide, McCalvin was arrested in 1970 after he raped the wife of the manager of the Bellcrest Hotel, 6930 S. Shore Dr., Chicago, during an armed robbery.

CHICAGO POLICE said McCalvin and an accomplice, Frank Morgan, now serving a 100 to 199-year term in Stateville for the crime, shotgunned to death Hobart Scott of Detroit, Mich., a patron in the hotel lounge at the time of the robbery.

Warden John Toomey of Stateville prison told the Herald McCalvin was the fifth convict to escape from Stateville prison in the last 20 years. Toomey said the last escape was in the fall of 1971. McCalvin has been an inmate at Stateville since March 26, 1971, according to Toomey.

Memorial Fund For Teacher Established By Colleagues

A memorial fund for Emil Orenic, teacher at Iroquois Junior High School and president of the Des Plaines Education Association who died Dec. 24, has been established by teachers at Des Plaines Elementary School Dist. 62.

Mr. Orenic, 46, a language arts teacher at Iroquois, suffered a heart attack in September and a third and fatal heart attack last month. The memorial fund will be given to his family.

Mr. Orenic was active in the education association since he began his career at Dist. 62 in 1958. He served twice as president, his last term extending from 1967 until his death. Charles Aguilla, teacher at Algonquin Junior High School, and vice president of the association has been named as his successor.

MR. ORENIC taught language arts and social studies at the old Thacker Junior High School in Des Plaines before being transferred to Iroquois in 1967. He was an accomplished musician and a member of the American Federation of Musicians. He taught individual lessons at Northwest Music School in Park Ridge and supervised after-school and summer activities for the Des Plaines Park District.

Mr. Orenic is survived by his wife, Mary of Chicago and four children, Lili Ann, Patti Ann, Kenneth and Margaret Ann, and his parents, Michael J. and Anna Orenic, three brothers, Judge of the Circuit Court of Will County, Michael A. of Joliet, Air Force Major Edward J. of Chicago, and William, principal of Troy Craughwell Public School, Joliet, and two sisters, Irene Bates of Chicago and Mary Matejcak, Joliet.

Funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Monica Catholic Church, Chicago, on Dec. 27. Interment was at Mt. Calvary Cemetery, Joliet.

Contributions for the memorial fund may be sent to Iroquois Junior High School, 1336 E. Touhy Ave., Des Plaines, 60018.

Maine West Junior Ready To Study In Australia

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Next week, Chuck LaSota, junior at Maine West High School in Des Plaines, will be running the mile in the outback of Australia.

He applied for the foreign exchange program last September, requesting placement in Germany next year. He tossed the application into the basket in the school office and shrugged his shoulders, at least it was worth a try, he said. On Dec. 10 he was notified he was going to Australia in five weeks. It was the only position available and he took it immediately.

"I was shocked," he said, but "I have a feeling I'm going to like it a lot."

The half-mile and the three-mile runs are Chuck's specialties in track and cross-country competition. Last year he was named number one sophomore for the year. After weeks of practice this summer, he placed fifth on the varsity team in the first meet of the season and won his varsity letter.

HIS NO. 1 ambition upon arriving at Hornsby, a suburb of Sydney, is to build up his speed, and he hopes to make a trip to the outback, the rugged bush country in the interior of the continent for practice.

His second ambition is to earn the Eagle Scout silver palm award, with the help of his foster father who is a scoutmaster in Australia. Chuck won 21 merit badges this summer and became an Eagle Scout. An additional five merits brought him to the bronze palm award two weeks ago and he needs five more to win the silver award and another five to win the gold. The silver award is the highest rank achieved by any scout in his local troop, Troop 60 sponsored by St. Stephen's Church in Des Plaines.

Chuck has some definite opinions on current issues in the United States. He supports President Nixon's policy on the Vietnam war.

"I really think we are doing the right thing by helping" the South Vietnamese people, said Chuck. But "I have a feeling peace will be coming soon even if it doesn't look too hopeful at times." He said he would have voted for Nixon had had been 18 by the time of the election and plans to join the U. S. Navy when he's through with high school even if it means going to Vietnam.

Chuck thinks some people go too far on the pollution issue.

"I feel like everyone else, let's do something about it," but actually, "you don't get that much done," he said.

THE MAINE WEST junior is opposed to people using drugs and drinking alcohol. It serves no useful purpose, said Chuck. What good does it do to withdraw into yourself, he asked, "If you're trying to stay in this world drugs do you no good but tear your body down."

Electronics, science and math are Chuck's biggest interests in school. He hopes to get a scholarship from the Navy, go to college, study nuclear science and work as a technician with nu-

Slaying Suspect Jailed For Beating

A Des Plaines man charged with the murder of his 8-year-old daughter in Tennessee has been sentenced to two to five years in prison for aggravated battery charge in the beating of his 6-year-old stepson.

Clyde L. LaChance, 32, of 727 Dulles Rd., was sentenced Thursday by Judge Fred G. Suria of the Cook County Circuit Court.

LaChance was arrested March 30, 1972, after his wife, Donna, told police her husband hit their son with a belt on the face, back and buttocks, struck him in the face with a shoe and forced the child to sit in a hot frying pan.

Subsequent investigation by Des Plaines police turned up evidence that LaChance killed the couple's 8-year-old daughter, who had been missing since January, 1972.

After lengthy interrogation, police said LaChance admitted killing his daughter.

ACCORDING TO reports at the time, LaChance told police he struck his daughter, Kimberly, in the face four times, causing her death. He buried her in the front yard of the family's Copper Hills, Tenn., home where they were living at the time.

Des Plaines police contacted Tennessee authorities who then exhumed the girl's body. He was later indicted for murder by a Tennessee grand jury.

Assistant State's Atty. James Gierach said Friday that regardless of the outcome of the case against LaChance in Tennessee, he still will be required to serve the aggravated battery sentence in Illinois.

Des Plaines police say there are warrants from Tennessee on murder charges for both LaChance and his wife.

Two Injured In Apartment Building Fire

Two persons were injured in an early-morning apartment building blaze yesterday in unincorporated Des Plaines.

The fire broke out at 4:30 a.m. in the 10th-floor apartment of Robert Wilford, 43, of 8809 Golf Rd.

Wilford and Erika Danielovich, 18, of 9250 Noel Ave., Des Plaines, were rescued from the burning apartment by Niles and North Maine Fire Department firemen, according to Fire Chief Dale Moore of North Maine.

Both were listed in satisfactory condition yesterday at Lutheran General Hospital, suffering from smoke inhalation.

Moore said the fire broke out in a corner of the living room where several seat cushions were piled on the floor. The fire was contained in the living room but smoke damage was extensive. There was no estimate of the total damage and Moore said the cause of the fire has not been determined.

PTA Notes

Devonshire School PTA will hold its general meeting Tuesday, Jan. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the gym of the school, 1401 S. Pennsylvania Ave.

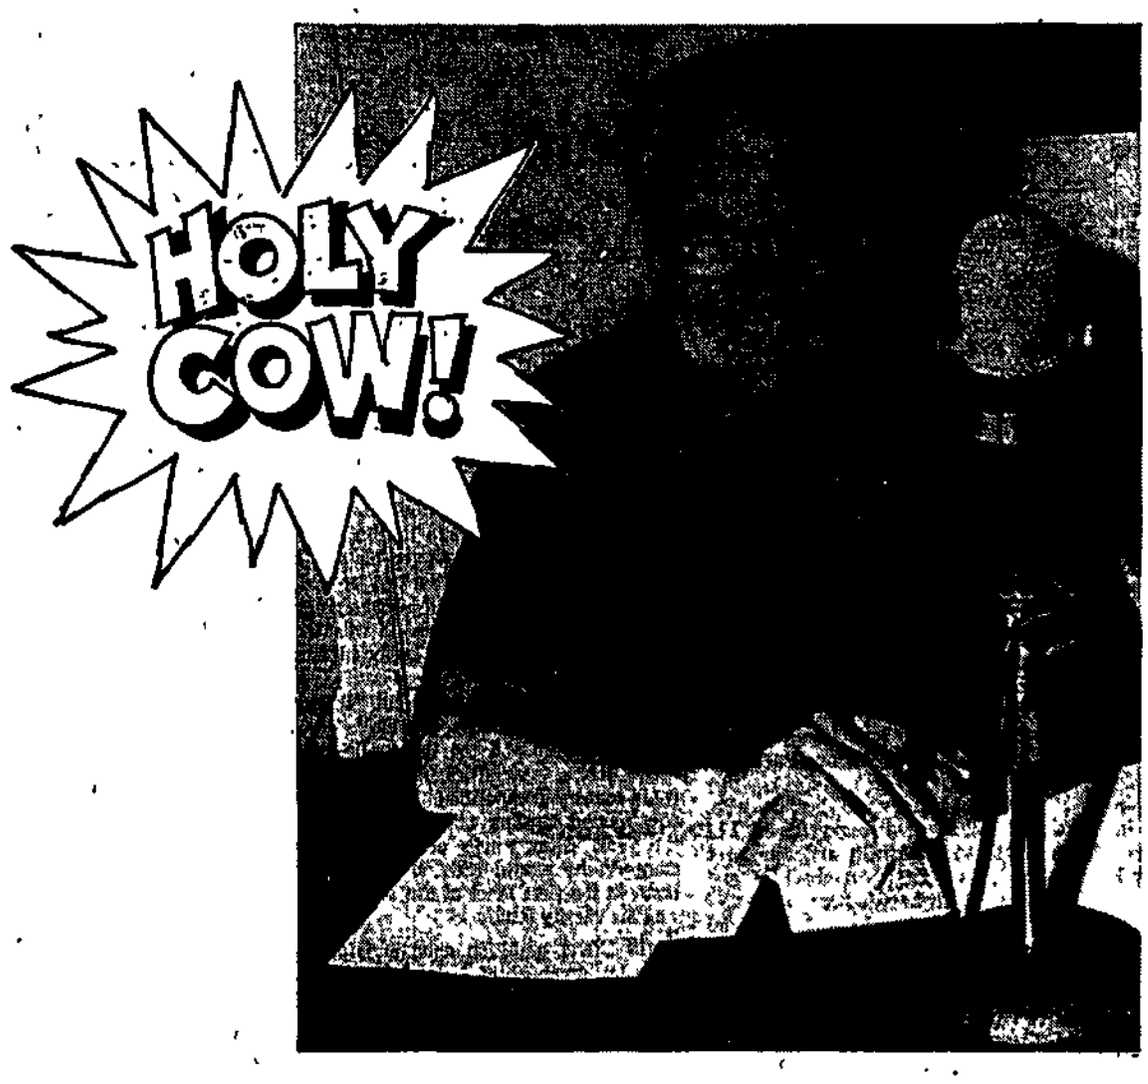

Richard Stanowski, director of pupil personnel services at Forest View High School, will speak on "Elements in the Home Atmosphere Which Favor the Child's Maximum Growth and Development." A discussion period will follow the presentation.

All friends and neighbors of the Devonshire community are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served by hospitality and social chairmen Ann Randall and Karen Frahm.

Civic Center Cleared For Final OK

The doubts about Des Plaines' proposed $2.25 million civic center were cleared last week, paving the way for final plan authorization at the Jan. 15 city council meeting.

The council's building, grounds and parking lots committee, meeting for the benefit of three aldermen, explained preliminary plans which include a $1.2 million, six-story city hall and a two-story police station.

The city hall plans include a $188,000 basement civil defense center.

The committee won approval to seek non-referendum bonds to finance the project Jan. 2, but withdrew a motion to authorize final plans when aldermen objected to an absence of drawings at the council meeting.

Only three non-committee members — Ald. Howard Thomas (6th), Ald. Alan Abrams (8th) and Ald. Daniel Bonaguidi (7th) — met with architects of Holmes and Fox, Mayor Herbert Behrel, City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi and bond consultants Benjamin & Lang.

THOMAS CRITICIZED the plans Tuesday because the city hall would be constructed before the police station.

"I don't like what I'm hearing," he said.

Ald. Joseph Szabo (1st), committee chairman, told the Herald that construction of the city hall would involve less moving of city officials. Des Plaines paid $1,241 to rent office space at 1585 Ellinwood St. and 1454 Miner St. last month.

"By waiting six months on the police station, we'll know what the county is going to do about the mini-courts," Szabo said. Cook County officials have proposed construction of satellite, mini-courts in suburbs. The city projects do not include new courtrooms.

"The meeting was mostly a rehash," Szabo said. His committee reviewed and approved the plans Dec. 29. "We did hear from Benjamin & Lang about financing cost." The bond firm will charge three per cent, about $6,750, to arrange project financing.

If the city does not issue the bonds within three years, the firm will charge $1,000, Szabo said. Preliminary project planning has totaled $20,000.

SZABO SAID Des Plaines has received a funding guarantee for civil defense center planning. Des Plaines applied last summer to the Office of Emergency Preparedness for the authorization.

"They only made a few changes in our plans," Civil Defense Director Richard Arthur said. The main change was use of folding partitions to divide offices in the 4,700 square-foot basement. "By using the partitions we get more space for day-to-day use. The area could be used for meetings. They gave us more space than we asked for," Arthur said.

The center will be "predicated on a nuclear war." It also can be used for disasters such as tornadoes or air crashes, he said.

The federal government will finance 50 per cent of the project when actual cost is determined.

Des Plaines will seek bids on the city hall with and without the center. The difference in bids will decide center cost.

Anticipated expenses include a generator, digging a full basement, storage tanks for fuel and water and electrical and heating system changes.

4 Arrested; Tied To 30 Burglaries

Up to 30 area burglaries over the last four months may have been solved by the weekend arrests of four youths by Elk Grove Village police.

Police in Elk Grove Village have charged all four youths in connection with five burglaries, while Mount Prospect police have charged one of the youths with three counts of burglary, and Des Plaines police are considering two charges of burglary and one of theft against that same youth.

Elk Grove Village police charged Philip Devine, 17, of 557 Oak St., Elk Grove Village, with burglary; James T. Hickey, 18, of 876 Marshall Dr., Des Plaines, with burglary; a 16-year-old Elk Grove Village juvenile with burglary; and James Nemoff, 18, of 340 Beau Dr., Des Plaines, with possession of stolen goods.

IN ADDITION, Mount Prospect police have charged Nemoff with three counts of burglary.

Burglary victims from the three towns are being called in by police to identify the more than 50 items recovered at Nemoff's apartment Friday during a search warrant raid. Through this identification process, all three police departments hope to solve other burglaries.

Mount Prospect Det. Richard L. Pascoe said there is a good chance that all 10 recent burglaries in an eight-block-square area in the southern portion of that village may be linked to Nemoff. Reportedly, Nemoff acted alone on Nov. 3 and Nov. 9 when homes in the areas bounded by Elmhurst Road, Golf Road, Emerson Street and Hiawatha Trail were burglarized. He was charged with committing a burglary on each of those two nights plus a third one that occurred Sept. 17.

Elk Grove Village police would say only that they knew the names of the four suspects prior to the search of Nemoff's apartment. But other police sources said that one of the four had been questioned by Elk Grove Village police in connection with one burglary. The suspect then reportedly told police about the other three.

ACCORDING TO Elk Grove Village police, Nemoff cannot be traced to any of the other burglaries, except that they were using his apartment to store the stolen items.

When Elk Grove Village and Des Plaines police arrived at the apartment Friday, they reportedly found jewelry, stereo equipment, televisions, marijuana, four lawn statues and 18 $50 savings bonds. Most of these items have yet to be identified by their owners.

Nemoff is to appear in Niles court this morning. He remains in the house of corrections with bond totaling $55,000 set for him.

Hickey is free on $2,000 bond. Devine is out on $1,000 bond, and the juvenile was released to his parents. A court date of Feb. 14 has been set on the Elk Grove Village charges. Mount Prospect police expect a court date to be set this morning on charges they filed.

Auto Stolen, Found On Fire 2 Hours Later

An auto stolen from a Des Plaines man was found burning in a West Side parking lot two hours after the car was reported stolen Sunday.

Werner J. Hartmann, 1664 Oakton St., told police his 1969 Pontiac was stolen from in front of his residence between 8 and 9:30 p.m.

At 11:20 p.m. police found the auto on fire in a parking lot at 165 Dover Ln., Des Plaines.

The fire was extinguished but police had no estimate of damage to the car.

Maine West Junior Ready To Study In Australia

Chuck's interest in electronics comes from his father who is employed with the Central Telephone Co. in Des Plaines. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis LaSota, 1844 Fargo, Des Plaines, Chuck has two brothers and two sisters. The family is active in the church and are members of St. Stephens Catholic Church in Des Plaines, where Chuck's father recently became a deacon. After school, Chuck works at McDonald's restaurant on Oakton Street in Des Plaines.

CHUCK'S NEW family in Australia includes three children, ages 13, 11 and 4. Chuck will attend Asquith Boy's High School during his year as a foreign exchange student. Chuck, who had wanted to attend a private high school here but was not able to afford it, now will have the chance to attend one in Australia with expenses paid by the American Field Service scholarship.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," he said. The school is very formal, he said. Students wear uniforms and must stand and address the teacher when he enters the classroom.

Meeting teen-agers from another part of the world is something Chuck is looking forward to. "I want to see how the culture differs from ours," and "I want to meet as many teen-agers as I can," he said.

Chuck got involved in the foreign exchange program through his German teacher, Joel F. Gells, who stressed culture, geography, and government along with language. "He really made it interesting," said Chuck. "He's got to be the most fantastic teacher I've ever had."

CHUCK WAS chosen by the adult members of the local American Field Service chapter in Des Plaines. Applications are reviewed by chapter members and students are selected for personal interviews. After successive interviews, applicants are eliminated until one remains who is selected as the foreign exchange student.

The chapter looks for a high school student who is friendly and outgoing, a normal teenager in the United States, said Chuck.

Chuck's last two weeks in Des Plaines have been occupied with filling out forms getting a chest X-ray and immunizations, completing questionnaires, and applying for a visa.

One of the last things Chuck is planning to do before leaving for Australia, is play hockey, one of his favorite sports. He won't have a chance in Australia because it is mid-summer there in January.

The local chapter is searching now for homes for foreign exchange students who visit the United States during the 1973-74 school year. Anyone interested in becoming a host family in the Des Plaines area should call Paul Rivard, 824-1625.

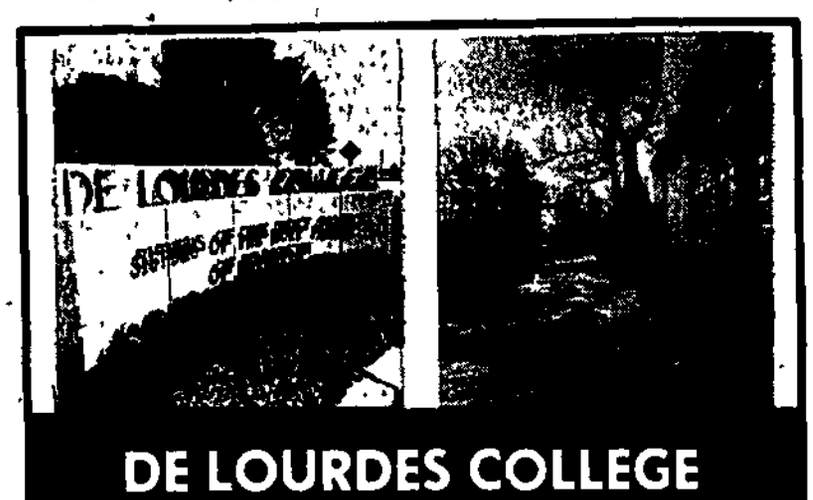

Park District Sets Home Craft Class

The Des Plaines Park District will offer a home craft class starting next month to teach you how to make inexpensive crafts for your home, including centerpieces, wall hangings and Easter decorations. The course fee is $8 which includes materials.

Evening classes will be held at Rand Park, 2025 Miner St., on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Feb. 7. Afternoon classes will meet at Rand Park on Thursdays from 1 to 3 p.m. starting Feb. 8. Babysitting is offered with this class at a fee of 50 cents per child for the two hours. Residents must register at the park district office, 748 Pearson St., by Jan. 31.

In A Ghetto School

by TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK — Junior High 35 in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn is not the little red schoolhouse. It is a combustion chamber of double-locked doors, caged windows, policemen on duty, students who conceal straight razors in their pencil pockets — and teachers who are employed in fear.

So it is that Jeffrey Zahler, a 25-year-old mathematics instructor, walks into a hallway argument here and finds himself very much a part of the quarrel. Two 14-year-old girls are brawling. A crowd gathers for the spectacle. When teacher Zahler moves to break it up, somebody yells "Let 'em fight," somebody else starts to push and shove, and Zahler winds up with a 2½-inch stab wound in the leg.

The incident elsewhere—in places where schools are named after presidents and students use knives only in biology dissections — would be cause for outrage and investigation. But here in the urban center, the ghetto varsity, violence has become so routine that another stabbing, or rape, or whatever, passes without a note.

UH, INDEED it is. In New York City schools during one year, 1971, there were nearly 600 reported cases of criminal violence, 197 arrests. Zahler says there are "two or three" incidents every day at Junior High 35 alone. Citywide, women teachers are molested, classrooms robbed at gunpoint and both teachers and students wind up bleeding in hospital wards.

New York schools, moreover, are not unique in this respect. The growth of student gangs in Los Angeles has caused some teachers to carry (illegally) self-protection" pistols. Teachers in some sections of Chicago report that they have formed car pools because "we're afraid to come and go alone." In Newark, N.J., a first-year administrator says: "I used to have all the idealism in the world. But three months in this job and I'm an animal like everybody else. I don't mind saying that I try to stay away from students as much as possible. Survival is the word."

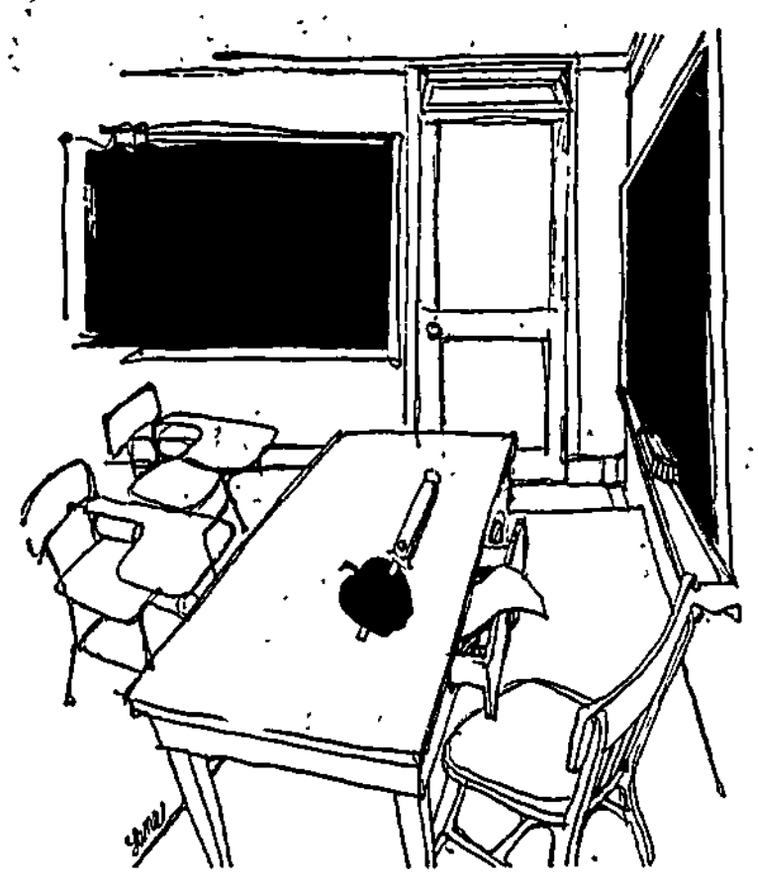

Survival? Among teenage kids? The word may be an exaggeration, but the nervousness behind it is not. "Many core-city teachers today are afraid to go to work," says a spokesman for New York's United Federation of Teachers. "Now maybe they don't get murdered — but they get beat up, they get robbed, they are threatened. These are educators, not cops, not soldiers. I tell you it's hell in schools today."

JUNIOR HIGH 35, for example. Located square in the slum, it has been described as a "functioning disaster area." Actually, it's not all that bad. In fact it's one of the better, even safer, and, well, smarter schools in the Bedford-Stuyvesant district.

"Kids here aren't so much on dope yet," says teacher Zahler. Also, they don't carry around firearms to the extent students do in other schools. Finally, says Zahler: "About 24 per cent of our 1,800 students are on or above the normal reading level for their grade. That's pretty good in this area. We may have a dozen kids functionally illiterate — but again, that's not bad for the neighborhood."

Yet being the best of a low lot is no cause for lightheartedness at Junior High 35. The difference in the degree of criminal potential is slight. Guards at the school entrance sign everybody in and out, a huge city policeman patrols the halls, teachers often lock their doors during class — still there is danger: The track coach, as illustration, has asked permission to run his boys in the third floor hallways because it's not safe to let them condition themselves outdoors.

A teacher is thrown down a flight of stairs. A woman in a rabbit coat is approached by kids wanting to "feel your fur, baby." Shakedowns. Extortions.

Kids threaten to "light" (hit) their instructors at 3:15. Says Zahler: "Recently a tape recorder was stolen from a woman teacher. She was told by students she could have it back for $25 or a 'little sugar' (sex). She notified the principal and everybody talked the matter over. Finally, she got the tape recorder back — for $15 instead of $25."

THE SITUATION has resulted in breakdown for all sides. The students (who are the chief victims of school violence) fail to learn; teacher Zahler says only 35-50 per cent of his homework assignments are completed. And the teachers fail to teach; the annual turnover rate at Junior High 35 is as high as 30 per cent, absenteeism runs 12 to 20 a day. ("Everybody, but everybody, takes their allotted 10-day sick leave"), and even when the classes are in progress the curriculum is altered for expedience sake.

What can be done? The suggestion box is open. Police guards don't work (the teacher lounge, where the cops rest, is vandalized regularly). Normal authority is ineffective ("If you tell them to sit down, they stand up, if you say stand up they sit down"). Seeking parental help is too often a joke: "I brought in one father," says Jeff Zahler, "and he sat there telling me how hard he tried, but whatever could he do? It was pathetic. The man was so drunk he could hardly talk."

Occasionally, teachers here and elsewhere take the solution into their own hands. The other day a Junior High 35 instructor became so frustrated with one girl interrupting his class, he slapped her on the arm. But that doesn't work either. The girl's mother complained and the instructor now faces the loss of his job. Violence in this respect, teacher to pupil, is still cause for outrage in city schools.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb

Dear Dr. Lamb—Would it be possible for you to tell me the effect water pills will have on one's general health. I retain water. My left leg and both ankles swell badly. I have lost 23 pounds, and my body also is retaining water. I take water pills and alternate them with a supplement of potassium.

My family says it will make a mental case out of me and kill me. They think the doctor should know or find out why I retain water. My kidneys and heart are fine. Is there any other test I should have?

I am 47 years old and going through the change. I also take medication for this. Perhaps I should not expect you to comment or help, but I hate the idea of changing doctors, and they are really putting pressure on me to do so.

Dear Reader—I suspect your doctor already knows why you retain fluid. It's fairly common during the change to have this problem, and the hormones sometimes given to help women through this period of life cause the body to retain salt (sodium) which in turn causes the body to retain water.

Your doctor also knows, apparently from your statement, that your kidneys and heart are fine, which would be two of the serious problems that might cause fluid retention. He undoubtedly also knows from his examinations of you that your liver is functioning normally which might also be a consideration.

It sounds to me like your doctor knows what he is doing and merely changing doctors wouldn't really help. Ask your doctor why you retain fluid and see if he tells you it is because of the change of life and the treatment. If you are worried about the rest of your health, you should ask him. He may well think that you already know this is a common problem with the change of life.

HERE IS AN item that ought to be of interest to all of you people who have arthritis involving the hands. A specialist in arthritis, Dr. George E. Ehrlich of Philadelphia, and a collaborator, Dr. Alfred M. DiPiero, were intrigued by a patient's report that if she wore stretch gloves to bed at night it prevented the morning stiffness that she had experienced.

They devised a test using two types of gloves nylon knit gloves or Spandex and nylon gloves. Almost all of the patients using these had a significant decrease in morning stiffness. The doctors say they don't know why it works. It's apparently more than just a question of heat since wearing cotton gloves didn't do the same thing.

This last item interested me because many of the readers who have had leg cramps reported to me a year ago that they received a lot of benefit by wearing warm stockings to bed or using heat with a warm blanket or other devices that depended on keeping their feet warm during the night. In any case, this is good news and it's such a simple thing that it's worth trying.

I'd be interested in knowing how many readers with morning stiffness of the hands from arthritis get relief from wearing stretch gloves to bed at night, so I would like to hear from all of you who try this procedure. If you write about it, let me know whether you used the nylon knit gloves or the Spandex and nylon gloves. If some of you try cotton gloves to see if just keeping the hands warm helps, I'd like to hear about that too.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

by Oswald and James Jacoby

The opening no-trump is a "pure" bid. It pictures your distribution and high card strength so closely that almost occasions partner knows if the combined hands are in the part score, game or slam range and can control the bidding accordingly.

The picture conveyed by the Jacoby no-trump is almost exactly the same picture Oswald Jacoby decided to show some 40 years ago. It is 16-18 high card points, 4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2, or 5-3-3-2 distribution and the doubleton if there is one must include one of the four top honors.

Forty years ago we were more conservative. The doubleton had to include either the ace, king or queen.

With any other distribution the hand may still wind up in no-trump but the winning player will start with a suit bid because such hands show too much promise in the right suit.

When we watched this hand played, South took about seven seconds to make four no-trump after opening with one no-trump.

No one noticed that six diamonds could have been made just as easily. We don't say that a diamond opener would have led to that contract. All we know is that if South had opened a diamond there would have been a chance of reaching the slam.

Prison Reform's Her Crusade

This Minister's Wife Speaks, Acts Out

PRISONERS IN ILLINOIS have been guaranteed a number of rights by the new set of rules and regulations governing inmates confined to the Department of Corrections' adult institutions, signed into law by former Gov. Ogilvie in July, 1972. But Fran Mettling, wife of the pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines, has found in visiting men and women in prison that these rights are not being granted — and she's doing something about it.

by DOROTHY OLIVER

When Fran Mettling isn't involved in activities at First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines where her husband Carl is pastor, or working at her full time job in Morton Grove, or taking care of her Des Plaines home and family, she might be:

—writing to a woman confined in Dwight Reformatory for Women in Dwight, Ill. to check on prison conditions; —working towards being placed on a visiting list for other female inmates at the reformatory;

—visiting prisoners at Stateville Penitentiary in Joliet;

—writing to Gov. Richard Ogilvie, the Department of Corrections, wardens and other officials pleading that an inmate's job be reinstated after it has unjustly been taken from him;

—helping to raise $300 in legal fees so another prisoner can retain a lawyer to review his case;

—speaking to organizations and conducting seminars on conditions in prisons with ex-prisoners.

FRAN METTLING'S "crusade — if you can call it that" is prison reform. She is a founding member of Help, Inc. and she is "incensed, indignant and enraged over the plight of many men and women in our prisons."

A small, ladylike woman with a classic Southern drawl and quiet voice, Fran bristles with anger as she relates what she has learned in several years of visiting penitentiaries and talking with inmates.

"Would you like to hear the hassle you have to go through just to visit someone," she asks. "They unlock a door, you go in and sign in. Then you are frisked and everything is searched. You go through another locked door and tell them who you want to see. You have to tell his number . . . he doesn't have a name to them, just a number.

"THEN YOU WAIT for 15 minutes to an hour until they find him. He goes to a visiting room and you have your hand stamped, go through two more locked doors, and sit across from him with a glass partition between you. The guards stand there and listen and watch while you hear of the things that go on in there."

Fran believes there is a big gap between what is written in pamphlets about changes being made in Illinois prisons and what actually happens.

"Prison is a terrible, dehumanizing experience of human life. Most guards are incompetent, uneducated, and have no training in psychology, sensitivity or criminology. For most it is the first time they've been given any power," she said. "A lot of times a prisoner is put in a hole (in solitary) because something happened between them and the guards without even being given a hearing. When a person is put behind bars due process of law comes to a grinding halt."

AS SHE CONTINUES she sits forward in her chair, wrinkles line her brow and her hands toy with her glass case. "Prisoners are supposed to have certain rights, like freedom of expression, the exercise of religion, no restrictions or censorship of mail and open, contact visits. Those rights are a part of the new rules and regulations of the Department of Corrections which was signed into law by Governor Ogilvie.

"But they don't receive those rights," she adds. "Every letter is censored — both those going in and coming out. You have to go through a lot of red tape to get to visit someone, to be put on their okayed list of visitors. And often if a prisoner complains to someone else about an injustice he is punished by the guards."

Fran's enthusiasm is tinged with bitterness. She is dismayed by those who feel she, her group and other prison reform organizations want only to "get the prisoners out." "It is one thing to pay a fine or pay the penalty and another thing to use punitive measure. They've got to remember that these convicts will be out in a few years.

"WHAT WE'RE TRYING to do is prepare the prisoner for when he gets out, to help him find a job or make a new life with his family. Punishment is no deterrent to crime. Many prisoners have said that the things that were done to them while they were in prison have made them want to get back at society when they finally do get out."

Fran became involved in "crusades" when Carl became a part of the Methodist Church's Cabinet, leaving the pulpit for several years. Her strong feelings against the war in Vietnam led her to become a co-ordinator of Peace and World Affairs Center in Evanston where she did draft counseling.

"I've been working against the war for 10 years, going to Washington to see senators, gathering petitions in churches — everything that's humanly possible to do. At PWAC I came into contact with a number of conscientious objectors . . . What this war does to young men in this country is terrible."

Having three sons of draft age at the time, Fran empathized with the young men who chose prison to service in Vietnam. PWAC counselors began attending trials and followed up with letters and visits to conscientious objectors who were imprisoned.

"WE FORMED Help for Imprisoned War Objectors to raise money, write letters, visit, get families to see their sons, and help the C.O.s get jobs when they got out," Fran said. "This led to our being exposed to other prisoners and last year we dropped 'imprisoned war objectors' from our name and became Help, Inc."

Help, Inc. is determined to join with other prison reform organizations and inform the public of conditions for imprisoned men and women. They have purchased the film "Voices Inside," an NBC documentary where prisoners tell what it's like to be in prison in America, and show the film for other organizations. Help, Inc. members, and ex-offenders will speak and answer questions for audiences at no charge.

The small group, always eager to add members, is supporting a move by another prison reform organization to set up a citizen's committee in Illinois which would investigate grievances in penitentiaries.

AND THERE IS always money to be raised, letters to write, prisoners to visit, jobs to secure. Armed with facts, figures and first-hand knowledge, Fran works toward small successes.

"Change will have to come by the public being informed and becoming incensed at what is happening."

But she's found the public doesn't always want to hear, and very often they don't want to see their minister's wife take action — on prison reform, on the war or anything controversial.

"My interpretation of the Bible is that you shall not kill. When you really take this as the word of God and try and implement it you get in trouble," she said. "You can say a lot of things but the minute you start acting it out people get frightened. But I'm really serious about it — that's going to be my cross and a lonely road to travel."

Nader Research Group Protests Pill Dispensing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader research group says women students at many universities are being used as guinea pigs for a "morning-after-pill" to prevent pregnancy despite "strong evidence" that it causes cancer.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group, based here, said in a letter to the National Student Association (NSA) that the drug, called, diethyl stilbestrol (DES) is given to coeds "without even the most rudimentary observance of professional standards and informed consent."

The organization also sent letters and copies of its report on DES to the Food and Drug Administration and the University of Michigan, one of the colleges said to be dispensing the pill through its health service.

The group said DES is being used to prevent pregnancy following intercourse. In the 1940s and 1950s it was given to tens of thousands of women as an agent to prevent miscarriage. The group said 100 daughters of these women treated years ago are known to have developed vaginal cancer.

WOLFE ASKED Robben W. Fleming, president of the University of Michigan, to replace controls on "the use of unapproved drugs at the health service." He said "experiments on students should be conducted only with the close supervision of an institutional review committee."

He urged Food and Drug Commissioner Charles C. Edwards to place controls on DES. Asked about the report, an FDA spokesman, Jack Wladen, said the agency was investigating the safety of DES.

"There is strong evidence that DES causes cancer," Wolfe said in his letter to the university. Wolfe wrote Edwards that "rapid action needs to be taken to avert — if it is not already too late — a possible second cancer epidemic from DES."

In his letter to NSA, Wolfe said women at the University of Michigan are given DES "without being warned of the long-range risks to health." He said the Health Service there "does no follow-up of the women once the pill is given, even to find out whether pregnancies occurred."

Save Coupons For Fire Truck

A new fire truck for the VFW National Children's Home in Eaton Rapids, Mich., is the aim of a current coupon drive, reports Mrs. Sam Campagna, Jr., Junior Units chairman of Des Plaines VFW Auxiliary Post 2982. The drive is sponsored by the Junior Girls Unit 1283 of the home.

To obtain the fire truck and equipment, such as smoke inhalators, bull horns, floodlights and soft suction hoses, a total of 6,600,000 Betty Crocker coupons are needed. Auxiliary members across the nation will help reach the goal by saving the coupons which come on food cartons, such as cereal boxes, flour sacks and cake mixes. Friends, neighbors and relatives are urged to contribute their coupons, each of which is valued at one-half cent.

Mrs. Campagna, 1165 Oakwood Ave., Des Plaines, 60016, is in charge of the Des Plaines coupons. Coupon donors may call her at 824-8685. Auxiliary members may bring their coupons to the meetings at the VFW clubrooms on the second Monday of each month.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I cringe every time I see my daughter put everything she has used in the kitchen in the dishwasher. Some of her things look terrible and she hasn't been married long enough for them to be looking that way. She reads your columns regularly. Maybe she'll pay attention if you say what shouldn't go into a dishwasher. — Concerned Mama

If she reads my columns regularly, she sure doesn't pay much attention. But my own daughter does the same thing as yours. She asks scornfully, "What's a dishwasher for?"

Actually, some of the rules change with each new model that comes out so what was absolute is not necessarily so today. Nevertheless, as a general rule, hand-painted china should be washed by hand. So should iron and Teflon-coated pans, as well as wooden and rubber articles. Plastics should go in only when they are marked dishwasher-safe. Aluminum ware is turned dark by dishwasher detergents.

If every dishwasher owner read the instruction sheet carefully and followed it, the right habits would follow. But I suspect many of them glance and shrug. I guess that's all we can do, too, if they're that willing to keep buying replacements.

Dear Dorothy: I usually water my house plants with ice cubes. I find it so much less mess. But a friend says this will hurt the plants. That the water should be tepid. Is she right? — Ginny Davis.

Go right ahad. By the time the ice cube melts, the water on top of the plant will be tepid.

Dear Dorothy: Every cook has an individual way of fixing chicken livers, but thought you might be interested in the way my family likes them best. I soak them overnight in soy sauce, then drain them before gently sauteeing them in butter.—Mrs. Tom M.

Georgie Anne Geyer To Be Honored At Council Luncheon

"Around the World for 80 Years" is the theme of the anniversary luncheon at which eight sections of Area 14 of the National Council of Jewish Women will celebrate the Council's activities. The luncheon, to be held Monday, Jan. 15, at 11:30 a.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Playboy Club, will honor Georgie Anne Geyer, foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News.

Miss Geyer, named one of the four top women journalists by "Newsweek" in 1967, has recently done a comparative study on the position of women in different parts of the world. She will be presented with the Hannah G. Solomon Award.

Cost of the luncheon is $8. Further information may be obtained by calling 583-5956.

Warriors Rebound In Wrestling; East Streak Reaches 21 Matches

SPOTLIGHT ON WRESTLING

by MIKE KLEIN

Maine West wrestling fans — and wrestlers — finally had reason to get excited the past weekend when the Warriors took two of three duels, upping their season record to 3-5-1.

Dick Carlini's mat club watched its season record drop to 1-5-1 on Friday night after losing a 23-20 match to Waukegan of the Suburban League.

Perhaps a bigger disappointment was 112-pounder Fred Gano's first seasonal defeat during the match. He lost 3-1 to Waukegan's Jerry Foster.

That gave Gano a 9-1 slate which he improved with two Saturday wins during a double dual meet staged at Forest View.

The Warriors were victors twice in that competition, smashing Luther North 60-3 after beating the hosts, 29-18.

In other Des Plaines action, Maine East extended its unbeaten streak to 21 meets with a 42-9 thumping of Deerfield. Maine North list, 42-18, at the hands of Niles East.

For the suddenly rejuvenated Warriors, Saturday was a real picnic after Friday's disappointing home loss to Waukegan.

Fittingly, the Warriors ate Luther North for dessert after working hard to handle Forest View.

Gano, Brian Real, Ed Rappey, Warren Kelleher, Tony Mietus, Dave LeFavour, Tom Willming and Stan Cordts pinned their Luther North opponents.

Kelleher did it the quickest, in 29 seconds. He's just a sophomore, one of five that Carlini used in his weekend varsity lineup.

Gary Gunderson and Jerry Mietus won decisions for Maine against Luther North. Maine's only loser was 105-pounder John Bistany, 4-2.

With five sophomores wrestling varsity, Carlini doesn't pretend that many of this season's goals aren't directed toward future years.

His five youngsters compiled an 8-6-1 record on the weekend, led by Tony Mietus' three victories at 145 pounds.

Ninety-eight pounder Real pinned two opponents and tied another. Brad Bonnivier, wresting at 132, also won twice but picked up one victory by forfeit.

Bistany came away winless in three shots while Kelleher compiled his 1-2 weekend.

Friday night, the Warriors spurted to a 6-0 lead over Waukegan behind Real's opening match pin of Bennis.

But they couldn't win again until five matches later when Bonnivier decisioned Scott Castillo, 5-2, at 132 pounds.

By winning four interim decisions over Bistany, Gano, Rappey and Kelleher, Waukegan's Bulldogs still led 12-9 after Castillo's defeat.

But decisions by Gunderson, Tony Mietus and Dave LeFavour gave the Warriors an 18-12 lead before Jerry Mietus, Tony's older brother, tied Steve Sedar, 2-2.

The result was a 20-14 Maine West margin with two matches remaining. Even after Doug Richards decisioned Tom Willming 3-2, the Warriors could still win if Stan Cordts tied Tom Rucks.

A Rucks decision over Cordts would tie the meet 20-20 with no matches remaining. Waukegan needed a pin to win.

And they got it when Rucks, one of many brothers who have starred in Waukegan and University of Illinois uniforms, stuck Cordts at 5:15 of the third period.

Saturday afternoon, only LeFavour came away with a victory by pin against Forest View. Gano, Gunderson and Tony Mietus won decisions.

Real tied John Gross 4-4; Cordts won by default over injured Mike Petron and Rappey took a forfeit at 119 pounds.

As West began coming up the long hill to a winning record, East made it look easy once again enroute to its 21st straight win over portions of three seasons.

Jay Check and Paul Board took home pins while Bob Boffman, Jim Sylverne, John Funovits and Scott Vaughan decisioned opponents.

Maine's bottom end, 167 Mike Kan, 185 Marc Grant and heavyweight Mike Johnson, all won by forfeit. East's losers were Herman Edelson, Tony Raschillo and Don Isacson, all by decisions.

Maine North had only three winners — Jack Horowitz, Doug Browning and Rich O'Connor, in its fifth defeat against one win.

Horowitz, wrestling 105, pinned Dennis Mariani of Niles East. O'Connor (167) pinned Scott Helte and Browning won by default over injured Phil Cech in the 119-pound match.

The Norsemen forfeited at two weights, 138 and 145. The former was filled by Scott Merker who's been dropped from the squad. Gary Heinl, usual 145-pounder, incurred shoulder problems during the recent Prospect Invitational. He will not wrestle again this season.

On Friday night, Maine East will host New Trier West while North entertains Glenbrook North. West travels to Niles North. All meets begin at 6:30 p.m.

Then Saturday, North travels to Warren for a 1 p.m. meet.

THE BEST IN Sports

ALL THE WORLD IS HAPPY. At least Maine West's world last Friday night after Joe Thimm sunk a basket with one second remaining to give the Warriors a 40-39 decision over Maine East. Above, big Doug Myers embraces Bruce Freeman who stole the ball from East's Jim Cromer to set up Thimm's bucket.

SOMETHING FROM FIDDLER? Maine West's Doug Myers and East's Keith Larson appear ready to undertake a dance step from "Fiddler On The Roof." Now what all this artistry has to do with the ball, we're not sure. Watching are East's Jim Cromer (35) and Rich Schumacher.

Grenadiers Explode For 87 And 81

Big Weekend In Grove Basketball

by MIKE KLEIN

Crown's Vikings, their armada sunk twice this season, are finding out what it's like in the Mid-Suburban League.

An earlier loser to Schaumburg, Crown ventured from its Tri-County Conference waters into alien territory last Saturday.

And, as expected, they were smashed, 81-57, by the Elk Grove Grenadiers.

That was half of a super weekend for Bill Parmentier's Grenadiers. The previous evening, in a Mid-Suburban contest, that same Schaumburg club that dumped Crown was massacred 87-44 before an enthusiastic Elk Grove crowd.

The double winnings surged Elk Grove to four games over .500 at 7-3 overall and 3-2 in the Mid-Suburban South, third behind Prospect (5-0) and Conant (4-1).

In other Des Plaines area action, Prospect spoiled baptismal rites of Forest View's new gymnasium, slugging the Falcons, 76-41.

And St. Viator uniformed twice over the weekend, both times for no gain. The Lions were dumped by St. Joseph, 77-63, and Marist, 59-38.

Back to Elk Grove. The Grenadiers, who achieved state football acclaim this past fall, have apparently untracked themselves after a slow start.

Against Schaumburg and Crown, the Grenadiers came up with seven double figure point productions. Ken Pollitz and Bob Prince were tops, each with 24 points versus Crown.

Other double figure performances were Mike Millner (18) and Jeff Schroeder (13) versus Schaumburg plus Bill Butler (16) against Crown.

The evenings began in directly opposite fashions for Elk Grove. Against South Division opponent Schaumburg, the Grenadiers trailed 2-0 with nearly three minutes gone before pulling to a 12-4 quarter margin and 36-16 halftime lead.

But the following night, they ripped Crown for 26 first quarter points that determined an 11-point lead.

Not to be held completely powerless, Crown had a 22-point second quarter and trailed Grove by just nine, 46-37, after an exciting half.

But an equally silit 20 points during the second half was all Crown could muster as Elk Grove coasted to victory with final quarters of 17 and 18.

The turning point in Elk Grove's entire season may have come at 5:14 of the first quarter against Schaumburg when the Grenadiers trailed the much lesser skilled Saxons, 2-0.

Grove coach Parmentier had seen enough ineptness. He called timeout.

"I was going to rip them out of there if they didn't play good ball," Parmentier said later. "That's what I told them.

"And I would have taken them out, there's no question in my mind. From that time on, it really made a difference. Those kids wanted to play."

The challenge for Elk Grove now becomes catching Prospect (5-0) and Conant (4-1) in the remaining nine conference games.

To have a shot at the MSL's Feb. 27 playoff, it's imperative Grove dismiss Conant twice and, on Feb. 3, avenge an earlier defeat to Prospect.

Dates with the Cougars are this Friday at Conant plus Feb. 23 at Elk Grove. So conceivably, the South Division title could be undecided until just days before the MSL playoff.

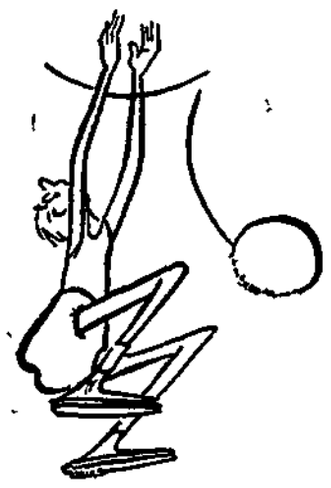

Prospect, which has handed Conant its only conference defeat, ripped huge holes in Forest View behind Tom Bergen's 27 points and 21 rebounds.

For that effort, Bergen was named the Chicago Daily News Player-of-the-Week. Teammate Will Freeman scored 20 against Forest View.

Bergen, who does most everything in the shadow of Hersey seven-footer Dave Corzine, scored six second quarter baskets as the Knights moved to a 30-23 on Forest View's new Tartan surface court.

It had been Forest View's first home game this season. Tornado damage sustained last spring necessitated extensive repair work on the Falcon gymnasium.

Prospect rolled to its seventh overall victory against five setbacks. Forest View, considered a league contender at the outset of this campaign, has fallen to 1-4 in the MSL and 4-8 overall.

The six-game absence of All-MSL forward Don Woodsmall certainly has hindered the Falcons. Back from an ankle injury, Woodsmall played briefly Friday and scored four points.

Only Rick Haaning with 13 points cracked double figures for the Falcons who apparently must wait for Woodsmall's full recovery before making a run at respectability.

St. Viator never led at the end of any quarter while losing Suburban Catholic League decisions to St. Joseph and Marist.

Terry Keehan scored 24 points for the Lions against St. Joseph but when senior Mike Cook fouled out late in the third quarter, St. Viator got caught up in numerous turnovers.

Marist, second place resident in the Suburban Catholic, led just 20-18 at halftime over St. Viator. It was 33-26 after three quarters but the Redskins enjoyed a 26-12 fourth period advantage for their 59-38 triumph.

No Snow But Lots Of Fun

Papreck, Magnusen Fire Sharp 78s In Eskimo Open

Eskimos might not have been too thrilled with the conditions Sunday at Buffalo Grove Golf Club. You see, there wasn't enough snow to make a sled of huskies go.

However, a lot of sun and not much wind made it just about the best day in recent memory for the annual Eskimo Open — a golf tournament for the most fanatical of players.

Buffalo Grove, one of two sites for the 18-hole tourney, was mastered by Dick Papreck and Stan Magnusen, both with outstanding 78's over the par 72 layout. Magnusen, of Park Ridge, posted a pair of 39's; Papreck, of Northbrook, went 38-40.

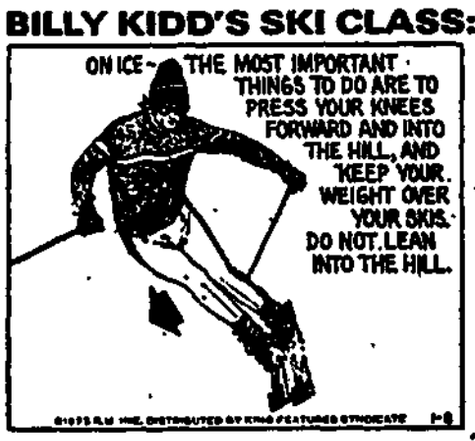

One woman — Jerry Johnson of Buffalo Grove — braved he elements. Despite the freezing weather, Jerry went around the 18 holes in 104 strokes. Not many men could turn in a good score like that in January.

The top 10 low net players were as follows:

Jim Cowan, Northbrook, 72; E. Liss, Hanover Park, 72; Tom McNamara, Lake Zurich, 72; Joe Lis, Skokie, 73; Bud Blaha, Chicago, 73; Paul Driggs, Winnetka, 73; Gus Kozina, Lake Forest, 73; Mario Molinaro, Addison, 73; Dick Friskey, Wilmette, 73; and Bill Kibble, Morton Grove, 73.
